MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Ms. McDevitt, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment a bill of the House of the following title:

MORNING BUSINESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of May 12, 1995, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, and each Member except the majority and minority leaders limited to not to exceed 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS] for 5 minutes.

TRAGEDY IN THE SKIES

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, everyone by now knows about the impact of the recent aircraft tragedy on a small community in Pennsylvania, Montoursville. This area is represented currently by our colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCDADE], who very promptly and appropriately expressed his concern to the families of the high school students who were involved in that horrible incident.

This community, Montoursville, is in Wyoming County. Prior to the current configuration of our legislative districts, I had the privilege of representing that area. I must tell my colleagues that this is an all-American community, which the news media has very accurately portrayed in all its coverages following that tragic air crash.

This little community has spawned many, many different types of sports championships and academic championships. It seemed almost every other week I was attending a banquet for the girls' softball champions or the boys' baseball champions or the little league champions, not to mention high academic honors for individuals and classes, et cetera, that emerged from that high school. So I wanted to point that out to my colleagues that, indeed, for a change, the media's portrayal of that community was absolutely accurate as being one made up of neighbors and friends, all of whom knew each other, and in one way or another, always participated in community endeavors, and now they join hands to extend their persona, each and every one to the other, in that lovely little community.

I did direct the communication to the mayor and to others in that area, and I simply wanted to enter my feelings into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

NO MORE GOVERNMENT SHUTDOWNS

On another matter, everyone knows by now that the Government shut down several times, not just this past cycle, not just this term of Congress, but in previous occasions, actually shut down. As a matter of fact, there was a time when during Desert Storm or Desert Shield, I guess the formation of our troop contingents in Saudi Arabia before Desert Storm, while our young people were gathering there, weapon in hand, as it were, our Government shut down.

What kind of a spectacle is that? This is in December 1990, the troops were already amassing in Saudi Arabia and were poised to launch the eventual Desert Storm activity, and our Government shut down.

Is that not shameful, to have the Government, which is sponsoring the activities of our young members of the Armed Forces, to shut down? They were over in Saudi Arabia without a government back home. Now, that is disgraceful.

Well, prior to that time even, when we sensed the urgency of what happens when the Government shuts down, I introduced a piece of legislation which I want to redescribe here today, which would end shutdowns forever. If we adopted my legislation, I repeat, never again would we witness or experience a Government shutdown. It is so simple in its aspect that the reason that people have told me that it has not passed up until now is because it makes too good sense. It makes common sense, and that is why it cannot get through Congress.

Here is what happens: At the end of the fiscal year on September 30, if the Congress has not adopted a new budget which is due by midnight September 30 or October 1, then my bill, if enacted, would automatically cause an instant replay, as it were, everybody recognizes that, an instant replay of last year's budget.

In its lowest denominator terms, last year's budget, or if the House has passed an appropriations bill that is lower than the last year's bill, or the Senate has, we take the lowest figure and instant replay what occurred the next day, October 1, and our budget would be in place, no shutdown could occur, the employees of the Federal Government would continue with their functions, our Armed Forces would continue in their duties to our people, and everything would go on normally, and the Congress would still have an opportunity with the White House to negotiate the next year's budget. In the meantime, we will have ongoing portions of last year's budget.

Is that not simple? Should we not have that kind of resolution of this vexatious problem?

The bill that I introduced again this cycle was one which became the subject of my entreaties before the Committee on Rules, and an amazing thing happened. In previous times when the Democrat Party controlled the Committee on Rules, I went before them and each time they slammed the door in my face. Only the Republicans supported me on that measure each time I appeared before the Committee on Rules.

The reverse has now happened. It is time to end Government shutdowns forever. Support the Gekas bill.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. There being no further requests for morning business, pursuant to clause 12, rule 1, the House will stand in recess until 12 noon.

Accordingly (at 10 o'clock and 37 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess until 12 noon.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. WALKER] at 12 noon.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Teach us, O God, to make good use of our time, that precious gift that we use to our benefit or to our harm. When we have new opportunities and health we think that time will never end, and when we face the adversities or afflictions that certainly come, our span of days runs out and we yearn for more time. Encourage us, O gracious God, to use our time wisely so that we do not miss Your blessings of faith and hope and love but rather embrace them, hold to them, and never let them go. In Your name, we pray. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

The SPEAKER pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Mr. Edwin Thomas, one of his secretaries.

SUPPORT H.R. 497, NATIONAL GAMBLING IMPACT AND POLICY COMMISSION ACT

(Mr. WOLF asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, shortly we will be bringing up a very important piece of legislation that will be setting up a national commission to study the impact of gambling which is running rampant in the country. Quite frankly the country is turning into one gambling casino as gambling spreads and spreads and spreads. As gambling proliferates in casinos on riverboats, on Indian reservations, dog and horse tracks and elsewhere, problems such as crime, political corruption, cannibalization of existing businesses, gambling addiction, family breakups, and suicides are growing, which is an unfortunate consequence.

This legislation we are about to take up will create an unbiased, bipartisan nine-member commission to finally take a comprehensive look at these problems.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to make sure all the Members know that we have finally been able to bring this bill to fruition. Last Wednesday, July 17, the full Senate passed by unanimous consent H.R. 497 with an amendment and, despite public pronouncements of the gambling industry in support of an unbiased study, tremendous lobbying pressure was brought to bear on Senators to kill or gut this bill. It is a tribute to this deliberative body that such pressures, which clearly represented the opposition of a small but powerful minority, were not able to thwart the will of the vast majority of Congress and the American people.

In the process, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Senate Majority Leader TRENT LOTT who, notwithstanding some concerns he had about the legislation, exerted great leadership in bringing H.R. 497 to a vote. He is a man of his word, of honor and integrity.

REPORT ON DEVELOPMENTS CONCERNING NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO LIBYA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 104-248)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed.

To the Congress of the United States:

I hereby report to the Congress on the developments since my last report of January 22, 1996, concerning the national emergency with respect to Libya that was declared in Executive Order No. 12543 of January 7, 1986. This report is submitted pursuant to section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1641(c); section 204(c) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act ("IEEPA"), 50 U.S.C. 1703(c); and section 505(c) of the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1985, 22 U.S.C. 2349aa-9(c).

1. On January 3, 1996, I renewed for another year the national emergency with respect to Libya pursuant to IEEPA. This renewal extended the current comprehensive financial and trade embargo against Libya in effect since 1986. Under these sanctions, all trade with Libya is prohibited, and all assets owned or controlled by the Libyan Government in the United States or in the possession or control of U.S. persons are blocked.

2. There have been no amendments to the Libyan Sanctions Regulations, 31 C.F.R. Part 550 (the "Regulations"), administered by the Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) of the Department of the Treasury, since my last report on January 22, 1996.

3. During the current 6-month period, OFAC reviewed numerous applications for licenses to authorize transactions under the Regulations. Consistent with OFAC's ongoing scrutiny of banking transactions, the largest category of license approvals (91) concerned requests by non-Libyan persons or entities to unblock transfers interdicted because of what appeared to be Government of Libya interests. Three licenses were issued for the expenditure of funds and acquisition of goods and services in the United States by or on behalf of accredited persons and athletes of Libya in connection with participation in the 1996 Paralympic Games. One license was issued to authorize a U.S. company to initiate litigation against an entity of the Government of Libya.

4. During the current 6-month period, OFAC continued to emphasize to the international banking community in the United States the importance of identifying and blocking payments made by or on behalf of Libya. The Office worked closely with the banks to assure the effectiveness of interdiction software systems used to identify such payments. During the reporting period, more than 129 transactions potentially involving Libya were interdicted, with an additional $7 million held blocked as of May 15.

5. Since my last report, OFAC collected eight civil monetary penalties totaling more than $51,000 for violations of the U.S. sanctions against Libya. Two of the violations involved the failure of banks to block funds transfers to Libyan-owned or Libyan-controlled banks. Two other penalties were received from corporations for export violations, including one received as part of a plea agreement before a U.S. district judge. Four additional penalties were paid by U.S. citizens engaging in Libyan oilfield-related transactions while another 30 cases involving similar violations are in active penalty processing.

On February 6, 1996, a jury sitting in the District of Connecticut found two Connecticut businessmen guilty on charges of false statements, conspiracy, and illegally diverting U.S.-origin technology to Libya between 1987 and 1993 in violation of U.S. sanctions. On May 22, 1996, a major manufacturer of farm and construction equipment entered a guilty plea in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Wisconsin for Libyan sanctions violations. A three-count information charged the company with aiding and abetting the sale of construction equipment and parts from a foreign affiliate to Libya. The company paid $1,810,000 in criminal fines and $190,000 in civil penalties. Numerous investigations carried over from prior reporting periods are continuing and new reports of violations are being pursued.

6. The expenses incurred by the Federal Government in the 6-month period from January 6 through July 6, 1996, that are directly attributable to the exercise of powers and authorities conferred by the declaration of the Libyan national emergency are estimated at approximately $730,000. Personnel costs were largely centered in the Department of the Treasury (particularly in the Office of Foreign Assets Control, the Office of the General Counsel, and the U.S. Customs Service), the Department of State, and the Department of Commerce.

7. The policies and actions of the Government of Libya continue to pose an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States. In adopting United Nations Security Council Resolution 883 in November 1993, the Security Council determined that the continued failure of the Government of Libya to demonstrate by concrete actions its renunciation of terrorism, and in particular its continued failure to respond fully and effectively to the requests and decisions of the Security Council in Resolutions 731 and 748, concerning the bombing of the Pan Am 103 and UTA 772 flights, constituted a threat to international peace and security. The United States will continue to coordinate its comprehensive sanctions enforcement efforts with those of other U.N. member states. We remain determined to ensure that the perpetrators of the terrorist acts against Pan Am 103 and UTA 772 are brought to justice. The families of the victims in the murderous Lockerbie bombing and other acts of Libyan terrorism deserve nothing less. I shall continue to exercise the powers at my disposal to apply economic sanctions against Libya fully and effectively, so long as those measures are appropriate, and will continue to report periodically to the Congress on significant developments as required by law.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 22, 1996.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the provisions of clause 5 of rule I, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on each motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 4 of rule XV.

Such rollcall votes, if postponed, will be taken after debate is concluded on all motions to suspend the rules, but not before 5 p.m. today.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to the bill (H.R. 497) to create the National Gambling Impact and Policy Commission.

Senate amendment:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. FRANK] will each control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE].

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. HYDE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, today we consider the Senate amendment to the National Gambling Impact and Policy Commission Act (H.R. 497). H.R. 497 creates a temporary, 2-year national commission to study the economic and social impact of gambling in our country. The Commission will conduct a study and make recommendations—it will not have any power to regulate the gambling industry in any way.

At the outset, I want to give special recognition to our colleague and my good friend, Congressman FRANK WOLF of Virginia. This much-needed measure is here today largely because of his advocacy and persistence. Congressman WOLF has identified a very important public policy issue and he deserves high praise for his efforts. I also want to recognize the herculean efforts of Mr. WOLF's outstanding staffer, Will Moschella. During the pendency of this bill, Mr. Moschella has not only been of invaluable assistance in its passage, but he has also graduated from law school, passed the bar exam, and gotten married.

When H.R. 497 passed the House on March 5, 1996, I pointed out the extensive record that supports this legislation. On September 29, 1995, the full Judiciary Committee held a hearing on H.R. 497. At that time, we heard from 15 witnesses, including 8 Members of Congress. Subsequent to our hearing, the committee received 15 additional statements for the record from other interested organizations and individuals.

During our hearing, we heard virtually every point of view on gambling and its effects. For example, we had testimony on the problem of compulsive gambling. We also heard from a university professor focusing on the economic aspects of gambling—for example, job creation by gambling enterprises, gambling's impact on tourism, and gambling's impact on State and local government revenue. We also heard testimony from the chairman of the National Indian Gaming Association who documented how the emergence of an Indian gambling industry in recent years has had a positive impact on employment, economic development, and overall self-sufficiency for Indian tribes. Still others testified regarding the relationship between gambling and crime, including organized crime.

Based upon this extensive committee record and personal study, I concluded that a study commission on gambling in the United States is a good idea. As the Washington Post proclaimed in its headline for an editorial endorsing the bill: "For Once, a Useful Commission!" The Post went on to observe that "commissions can play the useful role of bringing to national attention issues that were previously submerged or debated in fragmentary ways."

After passage of H.R. 497 in the House, some in the gambling industry continued to have concerns about this bill, particularly with respect to the subpoena power. Congressman WOLF and I worked many hours with Senator STEVENS, Senator LUGAR, Senator SIMON, and other members of the Governmental Affairs Committee in the other body and the interested outside groups to try to resolve these concerns. After lengthy negotiations, we came to the resolution embodied in the Senate amendment to H.R. 497. Although neither side got everything that it wanted, I am satisfied that we have reached a reasonable compromise. The final work product will allow the Commission to conduct its study, while, at the same time, it allays the fears of those who thought the subpoena power would be overly intrusive.

These negotiations have only reinforced my view that it is a particularly good time to have a balanced, impartial, and comprehensive look at whether or not the phenomenal growth of gambling is good for this country. Currently, 48 States allow some form of legalized gambling. We have State-conducted lotteries, riverboat gambling, Indian gambling, and casino gambling. We need to know the implications of this growth. Just before House passage of this bill, the Washington Post described the explosive growth of gambling:

What had been a mob-infested vice has become state-approved fun—a new national pastime. While 70 million people attend professional baseball games each year, 125 million go to government-sanctioned casinos. Adults now spend more money gambling than they spend on children's durable toys. Three times more pilgrims from around the world visit the pyramid-shaped Luxor Hotel in Las Vegas than visit Egypt. Casinos rake in more profits than movie houses and theaters and all live concerts combined.

This expansion of legalized gambling has undoubtedly had negative effects. For example, many opportunities to gamble are now available to minors who are not ready to make a mature judgment about this kind of activity. Also, compulsive gamblers frequently have a negative, sometimes tragic, impact on their families.

The traditional linkage between gambling and crime also concerns me. To give just one example, a GAO report issued in January concluded that "the proliferation of casinos, together with the rapid growth of the amounts wagered, may make these operations highly vulnerable to money laundering." As gambling continues to spread, these negative effects and others spread with it.

In addition, H.R. 497 will address the lack of reliable information about the effects of gambling. We need better scientific and behavioral data concerning gambling. Because of the lack of hard information, State and local policymakers, who are considering the legalization of gambling, may often be misled by exaggerated claims about the positive effects of gambling and the prospects for painless revenue generation. Last December, a Maryland State study commission concluded:

The Maryland Congressional delegation should support the immediate creation of a national commission to study issues related to commercial gaming and should recommend that the commission complete its work within one year.

States are unable to confidently make decisions about casino gaming because of competitive concerns about the decisions of their neighbors and because of the inadequate data and analysis available to them. The Task Force believes that the proposed national commission on gambling currently being considered by Congress, could make a significant contribution to public policy development.

I have listened to the critics of H.R. 497 during this process—during Judiciary Committee consideration, during House consideration, and during our negotiations with the other body. They have made some good arguments, and when they have, we have worked hard to address those issues. In my statement during the debate on House passage of this bill, I described the many changes we made in the bill during Judiciary Committee consideration. I will not repeat that discussion here, but I would like to describe briefly the most important ways in which the Senate amendment differs from H.R. 497 as passed by the House.

Both versions contain a list of matters to be studied. The Senate amendment compresses the list that was in the House-passed version, but it generally covers the same topics. In addition, the Senate amendment makes clear that the items listed are only the items that the Commission must, at a minimum, study. This list does not in any way limit other topics that the Commission may choose to study.

The House-passed version gave the Commission broad subpoena powers for both witnesses and documents. The Senate amendment narrows this power. Under the Senate amendment, the Commission still has broad authority to subpoena documents. However, the Commission must first vote to issue the subpoena and give the Department of Justice 10 days notice. The notice provision does not in any way allow the Department to veto or stop a Commission subpoena. However, it does allow the Department to notify the Commission if the Commission's subpoena has the potential to interfere with a pending investigation.

The subpoena power provision states that the Commission may issue a subpoena if a person fails to supply information requested by the Commission. This phrase is intended to encourage the Commission to begin with voluntary requests for information. However, it is not intended to provide any legal basis to challenge a subpoena issued by the Commission.

If, after receiving documents, the Commission requires further information necessary to understand the documents, it may ask written questions or take a deposition on the documents. Whether there will be written questions or a deposition is at the option of the recipient. The phrase "necessary to understand" should be read broadly to include questions about how a document was developed, who wrote it, and other similar matters of context.

Finally, the Senate amendment provides that the Commission may not release, except to its employees and contractors, any nonpublic information it receives unless it is ordered to do so by a court or unless the information is released in an aggregate or summary form that does not reveal the identity of any person or business and does not reveal any information protected under 18 U.S.C. 1905—that is, trade secret and proprietary information. These privacy protections in section 5(d) are not intended to limit in any way the Commission's ability, and indeed, its responsibility, to make criminal referrals to appropriate prosecuting authorities if it discovers evidence of criminal activity. In addition, the privacy protections of section 5(d) apply only to information that the Commission has already received. They do not in any way limit the scope of the information that the Commission may seek.

The Senate amendment adds a section 7 that was not included in the House-passed version. This section requires the Commission to contract with the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations and the National Research Council for assistance with conducting certain aspects of the study. The Advisory Commission of Intergovernmental Relations will assist in cataloging all of the various laws and regulations governing gambling. The National Research Council will assist in assessing problem gambling. This innovative addition will both reduce the costs of the Commission and take advantage of expertise that already exists within the Government.

The Senate amendment also adds a definition section that was not included in the House-passed version. I want to note that the definition of State has the effect of including the U.S. territories within the study. The Representatives of the territories requested that they be included during debate on the House floor.

Finally, the Senate amendment contains the requirement from the House-passed version of an advance appropriation before any money can be spent. This language prevents the various authorizing provisions for salaries and expense reimbursement from being construed as entitlements.

Although I preferred the subpoena provisions that were contained in the House-passed version, I believe the compromise reached in the Senate amendment is a reasonable and fair one. I further believe that this solution is politically realistic, given the short time left in this Congress. Overall, the bill is balanced, comprehensive, and fair.

I appreciate the contributions of Senator LUGAR, Senator SIMON, Senator STEVENS, the other members of the Governmental Affairs Committee of the other body, and the many members of the interested outside groups who have made this bill possible. I want to thank the members of the House Judiciary Committee who took a particular interest in this legislation in committee—Congressmen HOKE, BONO, GALLEGLY, and SCHIFF. I appreciate the cooperation of Chairman YOUNG of the House Resources Committee for his cooperation during House consideration of this bill. Finally, I want especially to thank Majority Leader TRENT LOTT for allowing this bill to come to the floor. I know that he had personal concerns about it, and I appreciate his setting those aside and allowing the other body to work its will.

I have discussed the various changes contained in the Senate amendment with Congressman WOLF, and he has indicated his full support for concurring in the Senate amendment so that this bill can become law this year.

I urge my colleagues to concur in the Senate amendment to H.R. 497 and send this important piece of legislation on to enactment.

Before concluding, I also want to thank Joseph Gibson of our Judiciary Committee staff for his outstanding work on H.R. 497. Joseph's excellent legal work and sound judgment were pivotal in resolving many difficult issues on this complicated matter. I commend him for a job very well done.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am fascinated by this piece of legislation. It is an act of repudiation of several of the principles that the majority has said it was governed by. In some cases I am glad to see the repudiation because I was not too crazy about the principles; in other cases I like the principles and I am sorry to see them eroded.

But let us look at what this bill does. The expansion of gambling has on the whole been a matter of decisions by the States. It is true that there is a Federal statute which grants the rights of Indian tribes, in return for their having given up rights to property, by the way. The Indian tribes did not get this right to conduct gambling one-sidedly. They gave up, as a result of this act, some substantial property claims.

But Indian gambling is only a part of what is being studied here. If this is a bill to study and look at the Indian Gaming Act, it would have been a different story. It would have come out of a different committee. Much of the impetus for this comes from the feeling of the Members of Congress, apparently very much on the majority side, too, that we cannot trust State and local officials to make good decisions without our supervision.

I have to say I think the chairman of the committee has been very responsible and has helped improve the bill. It is a better bill than before. But even in his own comments, for instance, he said, I noted here, that we need to do a study because currently State and local policymakers are often misled.

Well, I have tended to believe that myself. I have felt that there were times when State and local policymakers would be misled and the Federal Government should intervene to try and prevent that. I had not expected to find such enthusiastic and overwhelming support from the Republican side, so I am glad to have it.

I hope people will, when they read these remarks in the RECORD, go up a column or two to the distinguished chairman. Let us get the point here: State and local policymakers are often misled, but do not worry, State and local policymakers, the Federal Government here comes riding to your rescue.

So here we will keep State and local policymakers from being misled as often, and it is not simply a case of their being misled. I was particularly pleased when the chairman said that one of the problems States face, and I quite seriously agree with him on this one, and I am glad to have his affirmation of it because it is a central policy point, he said the problem is when States go to make decisions, they are sometimes unable to make the decisions they might like because of competitive pressures from other States. That is a profoundly important point.

We live in one national economy in which a State's desire to make certain decisions can be circumscribed by competitive effects. That is true with gambling. It is true with minimum wage. It is true with the level of medical care we provide for the poor. It is true with environmental protections. Indeed, I believe it is truer with regard to these economic issues.

So once again, I am glad to have the chairman articulate and the majority overwhelmingly about to vote in both branches to establish the principle that, given the competitive pressures that exist on the States in this one national economy, Federal intervention is sometimes called for.

Now, it is true this does not, in and of itself, impose a Federal policy. But the premises are that the States are not doing a good enough job and the Federal Government must come to their aid, that they are uninformed in some cases. We have to have a study so they will not be misled by bad information. They are coerced and circumscribed by competitive pressures, I agree.

Now I have long felt that this body has very few people in it who are conscientiously and thoroughly dedicated to the proposition that we should always prefer States' rights or always prefer Federal rights. In fact, I believe the overwhelming majority of Members believe that decisions should be made at that level of government where they are most likely to agree with the outcome. When it comes to some things, some people are for States' rights, and when it comes to other things, other people are for State's rights.

I do not think that is hypocritical or inconsistent at all, because one needs not have a preference for one or the other. The error, it seems to me, is to assert a preference when one does not really exist. I think this shows when people think the States have been given too much gambling, and that is clearly what we are talking about.

People here think, on the majority side as well as the minority side, Republicans as well as Democrats, that the States, ill-informed as they often are apparently, subject to competitive pressures, are not making the right decisions, so we, the Federal Government, will try to extend a restraining influence and not in this bill by any legislation yet, but it certainly seems to me that we are laying the predicate for some legislation.

That is one principle, the principle before States rights. So much for the States' ability to do what they want. Let us talk about the next one, and that is the right of individuals to make their own decisions with their own money, because clearly what is most driving this is the notion that we cannot trust the American people to make their own decisions, because there are people here who believe that individuals who work hard for their money go out and gamble too much.

I do not doubt people gamble too much. I do not doubt that a lot of people do a lot of things too much. I had not thought it was the role of this Federal Government to start making those individual choices for people.

We have State decisions to allow private businesses in many, many States to set up places where individuals can voluntarily go and pay their money for gambling. In fact, I have had people say, "Well, you know, it is terrible because it just teaches them to get rich."

I have talked a lot about gambling. I have a proposal for an Indian casino in the district I represent, overwhelmingly supported by the people there, including the working people who want to get jobs there, and I have talked to a lot of people about gambling. Most of them do not think they are going to get rich. They enjoy it.

A lot of older people rent buses and go to various casinos because this is a form of recreation for them, and they get together, they get on the bus, they go down, they gamble, they like it. These are not stupid people. None of them are unaware of the odds. None of them think they are going to be rich overnight.

A percentage of people, a small percentage, it is true, abuse this. They have an obsessive problem. There are people who have obsessive problems about drinking, about eating, about doing a lot of things. A rational society which honors the choices that individuals make with the money they earn themselves provides programs to deal with the obsessive problem but does not try to restrict other adults from doing that.

But again, permeating this is this notion that people really cannot be trusted to make these decisions. So much for the theoretical framework of States' rights. So much for this notion that we will let individuals make their own choices. The Federal Government is going to have to restrain people from doing this.

Then we get into the question of fiscal responsibility. Now, this bill is not going to cost a lot of money, but whatever it is going to cost is extra money that we do not need to spend. There will be nine commissioners here. I guess they will be called commissioners; I do not know. Maybe they will be called moral censors, whatever they will be called, the nine elders who will stop the States from being misinformed and keep the people from unwisely spending their own money.

They will be compensated at the annual rate of $104,000 a year plus per diems if they go to meetings. There are nine of them. It is a 2-year deal. I do not know how often they are going to meet. They have incentives, obviously, to meet a lot. They have an executive director who gets $114,000 a year. They are going to pay witness fees. They were going to go around and have meetings. Clearly several million dollars will be spent here.

One of the mistakes the people on the Democratic side have made in the past is to talk as if several million dollars of Federal money is not a serious expenditure. Of course it is. Of course when we spend several million dollars of public money, particularly when we are in a deficit situation, that is a problem.

Why, then, is the Federal Government about to spend millions of dollars, and by the way, the legislation is silent on the amount. There is no cap here. It authorizes "such sums." That is because I think in part some people did not want to limit the amount. I had proposed some amendments in committee to try and limit the amount. It is not limited to $2 million or $5 million or $10 million.

Theoretically, the nine commissioners, if they meet a lot, could make, each of them, close to $100,000 a year on a 2-year basis; the executive director, the other staff, transcripts, travel, witness fees. So we are talking millions of dollars.

So here is what we have: An area where the States are on the whole competent to legislate constitutionally, and again, if we were talking about Indian gaming this would be a different story, but this goes far beyond Indian gambling. That is a Federal responsibility. This deals with State and local, and there have been efforts to focus on State and local.

In fact, the gentleman from Illinois read a quote from the Washington Post, and the Washington Post reporter seemed to be upset that more people went to see the pyramids in Nevada than went to see the pyramids in Egypt. Now, I have to say it would have seemed to me, according to good Republican principles of limited Government, not the slightest business of anybody here that more people wanted to see the pyramids in Nevada than the pyramids in Egypt. What, are we in charge of which pyramids people see? Are we now doing the cultural advice for people? "Oh, no, you cannot go look at those pyramids, they are too gaudy. Go look at the other pyramids."

I do not think we should be in the pyramid picking business. I do not think we should be spending several million dollars of Government funds because the Washington Post does not like which pyramids people go to see. That is what this is about. That is what motivates this.

So while I am glad to see the Republican Party backing away from this rigid States rights principle, acknowledging that competitive pressures can drive the States, acknowledging the States might be misinformed and need more Federal help, while I am glad to see they think sometimes the Federal Government must come to the aid of individuals, although I disagree with the degree of intervention here, I would hope they would hold to a more libertarian principle and in general not use the fact that people pick the wrong pyramids as the basis for spending millions of dollars, and I wish we would not find new ways to spend Federal money.

This is several million dollars new to the Federal Government, not spent before. So I am against this bill. I think it is a bad idea. I believe that while people might want to look at the Indian Gaming Act alone, to go into the whole area of States and local spending and to decide that what we really need is a federally funded study costing millions of dollars, which subpoena power to go around and essentially tell the States they are doing a bad job of regulating gambling, to tell the American people they are going to look at the wrong pyramids and not spending their own money wisely, that is not a very good idea and I think the time of the Congress and the money of the Federal Government could be better used.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WOLF].

(Mr. WOLF asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize the diligent efforts of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], the chairman of the House Committee on the Judiciary, and to personally thank him for his very effective efforts on this and so many other things, from aiding the Contras to bring democracy to Nicaragua to many of the other things on which he has taken the leadership on this floor, and I appreciate it very much. I also appreciate his very able staff for helping guide this legislation through the legislative process. It was a pleasure working with the gentleman to bring this bipartisan bill here.

The chairman should be pleased, as I know he is, with the work of Joseph Gibson of his staff who worked hand in glove with my staff to move this legislation through the House.

The chief sponsors of the Senate legislation also deserve great support for their effort in the Senate. Senators SIMON and LUGAR worked tirelessly to bring it up. I also appreciate the work of Senator COATS, Senator STEVENS, and Senator GLENN, the chairman and ranking member respectively of the Committee on Governmental Affairs. I also want to thank Senators LIEBERMAN, MCCAIN, THOMPSON, and WARNER for their help in moving the bill.

I also want to acknowledge, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] did, the work of the members of my staff, just about all of whom have assisted with some aspect of this legislation. Particularly, I appreciate the teamwork of William Moschella, my senior legislative assistant and counsel, and David Whitestone, who serves as my press secretary.

Mr. Speaker, the establishment of the National Gambling Impact Study Commission is essential to the Nation's understanding of what the incredible expansion of gambling in America means to our everyday lives. Newspaper and editorial writers around the country almost daily chronicle the tragic stories of people addicted to gambling. Compulsive and pathological gamblers often commit suicide, prostitute themselves, resort to robbery, burglary, larceny, and embezzlement to fuel their habit.

Gambling has been known to literally destroy families. I have received calls and letters from around the country relating the sad dramas associated with compulsive gambling. The gambling industry has not taken seriously the magnitude of the problem, or it has been trying to sweep it under the rug.

One of the most startling and unfortunate consequences of gambling has been the amount of public corruption attendant to it. Industry spokesmen claim that the days of Bugsy Segal and Joseph Bonano are behind it. The industry, they claim, is composed of law abiding companies which report to stockholders instead of organized criminal enterprises. The industry, more than any other, however, has been connected to unprecedented levels of political corruption in recent years. The confluence of money, politics, and power has wreaked havoc in many States and local jurisdictions.

Mr. Speaker, I support the legislation before the body because it is a serious effort to study the issue of gambling in the United States. In some respects the Senate amendment changed it, but it was a good compromise.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to watch the progress of the commission carefully to make sure that the commission does its work in a nonpartisan and objective way. We will follow its progress to make sure the job that Congress has delegated to it is performed in a professional and effective manner. I will also monitor the amount of lobbying pressure to which the commission is subjected.

I believe the legislation before us gives the commission all the powers and tools that it needs. In closing, I again want to thank the staff that has done such an effective job, Senator LOTT on the Senate side and the Senators that I mentioned, my staff and the staff of the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. HYDE, Joseph Gibson and others, and, last, the chairman. I want him to know that I know the pressure and I know what has gone on around here, and he should know I am eternally grateful. I am still young enough to have heroes, and he is one of the three or four people around here who is one of my heroes.

I thank the gentleman from Illinois for yielding time to me. At this point, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks and include therein extraneous materials.

Mr. Speaker, as the original sponsor of legislation establishing a national commission to study the social, economic, and legal impact of gambling, I rise in strong support of H.R. 497, the Gambling Impact Study Commission Act. As gambling proliferates in casinos, on riverboats, on Indian reservations, dog and horse tracks and elsewhere, problems such as crime, political corruption, cannibalization of existing businesses, gambling addiction, family breakups, and suicide are a growing and unfortunate consequence. This legislation will create an unbiased, bipartisan nine-member commission to finally take a comprehensive look at these problems.

I would like to take a moment to recognize the diligent efforts of the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee and his able staff in guiding this legislation through the legislative process. It was a pleasure working with Chairman HYDE in bringing this bipartisan bill to the floor. The chairman should be pleased with the work done by Joseph Gibson of his staff who worked hand in glove with my staff to move this legislation through the House. They spent many hours assisting, consulting, and meeting with Senate staff to iron out any differences or concerns that there may have been.

Last Wednesday, July 17, the full Senate passed by unanimous consent H.R. 497 with an amendment. Despite public pronouncements of the gambling industry in support of an unbiased study, tremendous lobbying pressure was brought to bear on Senators to kill or gut this bill. It is a tribute to this deliberative body in the world that such pressures, which clearly represented the opposition of a small but powerful minority, were not able to thwart the will of the vast majority of the Congress and American people. I would like to publicly thank Senate majority leader TRENT LOTT who, notwithstanding some concerns he had about the legislation, exerted great leadership in bringing H.R. 497 to a vote in the Senate. He is a man of his word, a man of honor and integrity.

The chief sponsors of the Senate legislation also deserve great credit for making this legislation a reality. Senator SIMON and Senator LUGAR worked tirelessly to forge consensus and bring this legislation up despite a packed Senate floor schedule. I also appreciate the work of Senator COATS who helped move the process along. Senators STEVENS and GLENN, chairman and ranking member respectively of the Senate Government Affairs Committee, deserve congratulations for working together, listening to various points of view, and forging ahead with a viable plan. I also commend the efforts and support of Senators LIEBERMAN, MCCAIN, THOMPSON, and WARNER for their help in moving this legislation in the right direction.

There are many Senate staffers who had something to do with moving this bill along and I appreciate all of their efforts. I would like to publicly thank a few, namely Bob Healey, Michael Stevenson, Kyle McSillarow, David Crane, Sebastian O'Kelly, Christine Ciccone, and Earl Comstock for all they did to make this legislation a reality.

Finally, I want to acknowledge the tireless work of the members of my staff, just about all of whom have assisted with some aspect of this legislation at some time during the last 2 years. Particularly, I appreciate the teamwork of William Moschella, my senior legislative assistant and counsel, and David Whitestone who serves as my press secretary.

Gambling has been known to literally destroy families. I have received calls and letters from around the country relating the sad dramas associated with compulsive gambling. I have included an editorial from the Times Picayune regarding the almost epidemic problems of compulsive gambling among Louisiana's young people.

July 14, 1996]

GAMBLING AND YOUNG PEOPLE

that should give policy makers and voters much to think about as the state considers the future of gambling here.

A team of researchers led by Louisiana State University professors Jim Westphal and Kenneth Miller conducted telephone surveys last fall in an effort to find out how often people gamble, what their favorite games are and how much money they spent. The researchers also tried to determine people's ability to control their gambling and its effect on their lives.

The results, released this week by the Department of Health and Hospitals, indicate that Louisiana residents aren't handling gambling too well, particularly young gamblers. One in seven Louisiana residents, 18 to 21, are compulsive gamblers. What's more, Louisiana's young gambling addicts are in worse shape than in other states studied, spending twice as much a month on gambling as their counterparts elsewhere. Compulsive gambling among young people here is triple that of adults and is second only to alcohol abuse for that age group.

The study showed that 182,000 Louisianans—more than 4 percent of the population—have gambling habits that range from moderate to severe and as many as 57,000 of them have addictions that could be classified as pathological.

"That's enough people to fill Tiger Stadium," said Gov. Foster, who said that he will support legislation to curb gambling addiction, particularly among the young.

Researchers were limited by the lack of studies in other states, despite the nationwide gambling boom. They could compare Louisiana only to six other states, Montana, North and South Dakota, Texas, Washington and Georgia. But that data indicated that pathological gamblers in Louisiana are in more trouble, spending almost twice the monthly average on their habit, $660 compared to $300.

Researchers who did the study believe that the reason is availability. Louisiana, with its 12 riverboat casinos and 15,500 video poker machines, has a gambling site every 6.2 square miles.

This study should raise serious questions about the proliferation of gambling and, in particular, its effect on young people. Legislators and other state officials will have to weigh the social cost of bring up a crop of gambling addicts, particularly since experts say that most pathological gamblers begin their habit in adolescence.

The study is already prompting legislators such as Sen. Jay Dardenne, R-Baton Rouge, to say that a law should be passed making 21 the legal limit for gambling. That is now true only for casino gambling. Sen. Dardenne, who sponsored the resolution calling for the study, said that he also wants to push to have gambling prevention made part of the school curriculum.

As Louisiana begins to grapple with the question of gambling, particularly the election on local option this fall, the problem of gambling addiction deserves attention.

The researchers' experience show that too many states, Louisiana included, have rushed headlong into legalized gambling without really knowing the social cost. This study provides some much needed and timely insight.

The gambling industry has not yet realized the magnitude of the problem or has been sweeping it under the rug. This issue can no longer be ignored and this commission will help us understand the problem so that it may be addressed.

On of the most startling and unfortunate consequences of gambling has been the amount of public corruption attendant to it. Industry spokesmen claim that the days of Bugsy Segal and Joseph Bonano are behind it. The industry, they claim, is composed of law abiding companies which report to stockholders instead of organized criminal enterprises. The industry, more than any other, however, has been connected to unprecedented levels of political corruption in recent years. The confluence of money, politics, and power has wreaked havoc in many State and local jurisdictions. Louisiana, for example, has been rocked by political scandal and more indictments are on the way. I have included a recent Associated Press story which ran in the Times Picayune regarding the indictments for the RECORD.

BIG NAMES INDICTED, GAMING TASK FORCE SAYS

(By The Associated Press)

SHREVEPORT—The dice are about to come up snake eyes for 15 to 20 people, including some big names, say people in the task force investigating gambling corruption in Louisiana.

"Within the next two weeks you will see big numbers of arrests," said Capt. Ed Kuhnert, State Police coordinator of the task force of Louisiana State Police and FBI agents.

Indictments have been prepared and are being reviewed by federal prosecutors, said Rick Dill, FBI agent-in-charge in New Orleans.

Task force officials said the yearlong undercover investigation is expected to produce charges against and arrests of some prominent people.

Last August, FBI wiretap transcripts were filed in open court as part of requests to subpoena records from lawmakers and people connected with Louisiana's gambling business.

That meant the end of the long political careers of two prominent state senators named as taking money from gambling interests, although they weren't indicted.

Larry Bankston, D-Port Hudson, Chairman of the Senate committee overseeing gambling, dropped out of a re-election campaign; B.B. "Sixty" Rayburn, D-Bogalusa, was defeated.

Sources close to the probe said indictments are imminent. The Times of Shreveport reported Sunday.

The conviction this past week of former state Alcohol Beverage Commission head Ray Holloway is the latest in a long string of cases made by the task force on gambling.

Holloway was found guilty of aiding an illegal gambling business and obstructing justice. He resigned his job in the Caddo Parish purchasing department after his federal case became public earlier this year.

The task force, with offices in New Orleans, Baton Rouge and Shreveport, has been successful over the past two years.

The most prominent case was the FBI's infiltration of the New Orleans organized crime family, the top echelon of which went down with 24 defendants in Operation Hardcrust.

FBI agents, investigating a suspected bookmaking operation at a New Orleans deli, picked up conversations indicating three La Cosa Nostra families—the rekindled Marcello family of New Orleans and the Gambino and Genovese families of New York—were infiltrating Louisiana's video poker industry.

Twenty-one defendants pleaded guilty. The three who went to trial were convicted on all counts.

Operation Hardcrust awed federal law enforcement authorities "because it involved, literally, the dismantling, through criminal indictment, of the entire upper echelons of the New Orleans Mafia family." First Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Littin of New Orleans said. "As a result of that, we deem it the most significant organized crime prosecution in the state of Louisiana."

The U.S. Justice Department considers the task force an extremely successful operation, Littin said.

"This task force's penetration of the emergence of a dormant organized-crime family was beyond a lot of people's imagination even a few years ago," he said.

Dill said, the task force has been successful because "it is a melding of talent."

The State Police investigators are "very good, the cream of the crop. They know the gambling laws in and out," Dill said.

FBI agents bring investigative expertise and federal fraud laws.

"The combination of the two brings results," Dill said.

Since Gov. Foster appointed Col. Rutt Whittington to head the State Police, trooper cooperation has gone up, Dill said.

"If I need 20 troopers to help in a search, they're there," he said.

Another reason for the success of the team is its dedication to rooting out corruption, Kuhnert said.

"We have put together a small group of people who are very intense, very dedicated and very qualified," he said. "We're actually just getting started."

The legitimate gambling industry welcomes the scrutiny because it increases public confidence, said Anthony Sanfilippo, general manager of Harrah's Casino Shreveport.

"It's important that investigations reveal any type of inappropriate behavior," he said.

Despite the task force's success, however, its members won't say they have rid Louisiana's gambling industry of corruption.

"The legal gambling industry is itself a magnet for corruption and organized crime," Littin said.

He said investigators believe organized crime gets nearly all its money from gambling, legal and illegal.

"We can never rest assured at any point that we have rooted (out) all the corruption," he said. "It is a dicey industry to fool with."

In the early 1970's Congress was concerned about problems related to gambling, and it established a commission similar to the one Congress is within minutes of creating. Since the Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling issued its 1976 report, gambling has greatly expanded, and it has grown in many ways that are contrary to the recommendations of that early report. In 1976 only two States had casino gambling. Today, ever State but two have some form of legal gambling. According to U.S. News and World Report, people wagered $482 billion in 1994 on all forms of gambling, 85 percent of which took place in casinos in 27 States, most of them built in the past 5 years. This explosive growth has produced deleterious side effects that have high moral, social, and economic costs.

Mr. Speaker, I support the legislation before the body today because it is a serious effort to study the issue of gambling in the United States. This legislation is not perfect, and I would have drafted some sections differently. But this is a body of compromise. To forge agreements, one must be willing to consider points of view and perspectives that are different from one's own.

promises, and I applaud the Senate for breaking the gridlock and moving H.R. 497 this far. I believe, for example, that the section in the bill on subpoena power is one such political compromise. It is adequate but not perfect. It was drafted, not with an eye toward technical perfection, but rather it was drafted to forge political compromise and consensus—something that Congress does daily.

Mr. Speaker, as I have already mentioned, I would have drafted some provisions of this legislation differently. I also mentioned that some provisions of the Senate amendment were drafted to achieve political consensus and compromise. For example, I believe the rewrite of the House subpoena power language was unnecessary and was done to ease an irrational fear that the Commission would conduct a witch hunt. This would not happen and such discussion was a diversion from the real issues such as underage gambling and political corruption. I have included for the RECORD a letter from the chairman of the Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling which bears this point out.

May 7, 1996.

Hon. FRANK R. WOLF,
CHOB,
Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN WOLF: As you know, I served as Chairman of the Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling for the four years of its existence ("the 1972-1976 Commission"), whose Report was filed with the President and the Congress on October 15, 1976. I have previously provided your office with a copy of this Report and its accompanying addenda ("the 1976 Report").

I have had, as you might suspect, a greater than normal interest in the progress of gambling in the United States over the ensuing decades, and especially during the past five of six years which have witnessed a worrisome proliferation of casino openings, often under the shelter of Indian tribal ownership. I have followed your own efforts to create a new gambling commission to once more look into what has become a major growth industry. I agree with you completely, and I am taking the liberty of adding some additional thoughts, which I emphasize are purely personal opinions and do not necessarily reflect the opinions of anyone in my former law firm from which I have retired and for which I am now "Of Counsel."

With a proper mixture of pride and modesty, I would refer you to the Report of the 1972-1976 Commission, with specific attention to our recommendations concerning casinos and (that most cynical of retrogressive taxation) state lotteries. As I have observed, if anyone tried to sell corporate securities with the failure to disclose material facts so characteristic of state lottery promotion, he would be sent to prison. This is certainly the cruelest and most indiscriminate form of gambling and should be fiercely attacked. I see no signs that our recommendation (the 1976 Report, 159) that "the States must take care to inform the public fully as to the odds and character of the games being offered, and to avoid any misleading practices in its advertisements and promotional activities . . ." was greeted recommendation was followed by this one:

"Should [the States] fail in this responsibility, Congress should consider giving the Federal Trade Commission the explicit authority to set and enforce compulsory guidelines."

I am as much a foe of big Federal government as the next person, but the point may have been reached where this is a national problem.

And so, perhaps, is casino gambling. The unavoidable dangers to the public interest in installing casino gambling in metropolitan areas are too obvious to ignore, and the 1972-1976 Commission recommended that this be permitted "only in rare instances and extraordinary circumstances." Another in-depth study is certainly now called for, and I believe the results will be shocking. The billions of dollars flowing across crap, roulette and blackjack tables is not coming from people who can afford to lose. The social cost of this phenomenon will be measured in human suffering, broken homes, official corruption and crime, and it is only the extent of this that is open to question.

I note that although there is nearly unanimous lip service paid to the need for a new gambling commission, the major issue is whether or not the Commission should have subpoena power to compel testimony and the production of documents. Obviously such a Commission is meaningless without this power, at least to the extent necessary to fulfill its stated purpose. The 1972-1976 Commission had subpoena power and, because of that, we never had to use it—in other words, when you have the power you will get cooperation. Obviously, the power need not be unrestricted and Congress may see fit to provide safeguards against its abuse and, if the power were to be abused and there were non-compliance, the Commission would be forced into court to compel compliance—something it would be most reluctant to do. On the other hand, if it were used legitimately, it would mean that information had been withheld for a reason—which is why you must have the power! And in the normal instance, as we found out from our years of experience, the knowledge that we had the power and would not hesitate to use it provided all the persuasion we needed. I suppose the specter of a "rogue" Commission strewing subpoenas throughout the land has been cited as being intolerable, but the very fact that membership on the Commission is bipartisan and dictated by Congress, and that a subpoena presumably have to be authorized in each instance by the members of the Commission negates the possibility of this happening. All this would seem to lead to the conclusion that the opponents of the any power of subpoena do, in fact, have something to conceal, which again leads to the decision that it is indeed necessary.

There is no doubt that the national policy toward gambling must again be examined, and this time with considerably more urgency than the last time. Please be assured that I am quite willing to help at any time—without cost to the government.

Yours very truly,

CHARLES H. MORIN.

The language in the House-passed version of H.R. 497 is the orthodox way to draft subpoena power language. After comparing the subpoena power granted to the Commission on the Review of the National Policy Toward Gambling, which was so broad it permitted a single commissioner to issue a subpoena, and learning that the Commission never once found it necessary to issue a subpoena, one can only conclude that the industry's concerns are, at a minimum, overstated, unrealistic, and paranoid.

For example, §5(b)(1) authorizes the use of subpoenas after a person fails to supply information requested by the Commission. This subjunctive clause merely states the obvious. Administrative subpoenas are usually only issued if the entity fails to comply with an information request. This clause is not intended to narrow the scope of subpoenas served subsequent to an information request. It only means that the Commission should ask first and subpoena second.

I would also like to associate myself with the statement made by Senator GLENN regarding the meaning of the words "to understand" in §5(b)(2) of the bill. Under this section, the Commission may subpoena witnesses for the purpose of understanding material obtained by the Commission. There are many reasons to require such testimony and the understanding of the documents often will go beyond its four corners. The Commission may need to understand the circumstances or motivations for producing a document. It may need to know why it was produced and why alternatives were not included. To understand a document may entail understanding its context, how it was developed, why it was developed, what alternatives were considered, and other considerations that go into producing documents.

I would also like to make a point about the duties of the Commission and the matters to be studied. This list of items to be studied by the Commission is the minimum the Commission should examine. This is clearly stated in section 4(a)(2). The commission should review other subjects as it deems appropriate.

Section 4(a)(2)(C) of the House-passed version of H.R. 497 directed the Commission to include an assessment and review of political contributions and their influence on the development of public policy regulating gambling. While the version of the bill that Congress will send to the President today does not contain a similar provision, it is completely within the prerogative of the Commission to make such an assessment.

Gambling interests are flush with cash and readily contribute to local, State and national campaigns. Also, many news reports have chronicled the vast sums promised lobbyists and consultants if they can convince legislators to permit riverboat gambling or establishment of a casino. Many public officials have taken large sums of money as bribes from gambling interests and have been indicted for such reprehensible conduct. Some say there is nothing worse than a corrupt policeman because it is the police who enforce the laws. A corrupt politician is equally bad. I urge the Commission to review the very timely and important issue of public corruption, political influence, money, and power.

So, even though this legislation is not everything I may have preferred, it is a good bill and should be supported by the House and sent to the President for his signature.

Another issue I would like to raise concerns Commission requests for assistance from other Federal agencies. There is already a wealth of experience and knowledge within the Federal Government about many of the issues the Commission will likely address. One of the Commission's jobs is to bring all that information under one roof in a usable form. Because this is only a 2-year Commission which will have very limited funds, Congress provided that departments and agencies of the Federal Government provide detailees to the Commission when appropriate.

I urge any Federal agency asked to assist the Commission to provide such assistance and detailees as deemed necessary. The Department of Health and Human Services could assist the Commission by providing experts on compulsive or pathological behavior or providing experts in epidemiological methods and statistical methods of analysis who could help the Commission make sense of survey research and demographic or medical studies. The Federal Bureau of Investigation may be helpful in providing crime information. The Internal Revenue Service and the Financial Center may help commissioners understand issues relative to money transfers and laundering. General Services Administration staff could be helpful in setting up office space for the Commission, and the General Accounting Office could help provide economic analysis. I urge any Federal department or agency to assist the Commission when at all possible.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to watch the progress of the Commission carefully to make sure the Commission does its work in a non-partisan and objective way. I will follow its progress to make sure the job Congress has delegated to it is performed in a professional and effective manner. I will also monitor the amount of lobbying pressure to which the Commission is subjected.

I believe that the legislation before us gives the Commission all the power and tools it needs to conduct its business and write an objective report. However, if the gambling industry decides to throw its vast resources, lawyers, lobbyists and consultants at the Commission or the various provisions of this act in order to thwart its work, I will come to the well of this House with legislation more like the original House bill to ensure that the Commission is successful in completing its tasks.

Because this legislation is only days away from becoming law, I beseech the appointing authorities—the President, the Speaker of the House, and the majority leader of the Senate—to appoint individuals to the Commission who are recognized for their honesty, integrity, and objectivity. The Commission should not be loaded with individuals with vested interests in the outcome of the report. They should not be composed of individuals interested in going to work for the gambling industry after they have completed their duties with the Commission. Commissioners should be citizens of sound moral character able to impartially review the evidence and issues which will come before them so that their final product will be a report the American people can trust and rely upon.

Mr. Speaker, the time has finally come to make a detailed study of gambling in America. H.R. 497, in the tradition of good government, will help get that job done. This is a good bill, and I heartily support its final passage and presentment to the President. I urge all Members to support this meritorious legislation and yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time, and I hope I do not use all the 3 minutes, but I wanted to respond to my friend, the gentleman from Massachusetts, who is one of the very effective but selective crusaders for States' rights.

This is a search for information, this commission, not legislative nor regulatory functions, but a search for information that has a uniquely national characteristic. The States, important as they are, are really not competent to do a national search that involves the issue of gambling. So, it may be an intrusion, but it is really not an either/or proposition: States' rights versus national intrusion. This subject lends itself to national study. So that is all that this is going to encompass.

Some things are best done by the States. Some things are best done by the Federal Government, and it is pretty hard to have a hard and fast rule. Generally, we Republicans prefer local government over national government, but that, again, depends on the circumstance.

Tort reform, for example, in my judgment, and although I do not speak for all my colleagues on the Republican side, lent itself to a national solution rather than a State solution. But these are matters we can argue about.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HYDE. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. I have no disagreement with what he just said. I do not claim to be a crusader for States rights. I have the position I think most Members have. I am for the State or the Federal Government deciding where we will best get the outcome that I think public policy ought to have.

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my support for H.R. 497, the National Gambling Impact and Policy Commission Act. I cosponsored this legislation because I believe it is important for us to examine the effect the recent and pronounced proliferation of gambling in the United States has had on us as a society. This impact study will help Americans better understand what the effects of gambling are upon our families and communities.

Gambling has proliferated in part because State, local, and tribal governments faced with budget shortages see gambling as a pain-free solution to their problems. But I am concerned that such a quick-fix approach to our economic problems will make us overlook not only the long-term social problems associated with gambling, but the very fact that gambling itself is an inherently weak foundation upon which to base long-term growth and development. It is my sincere hope that through this study, we can provide local communities, States, and tribes the right tools and objective information to decide whether or not gambling is the right economic development strategy for them.

But I also want to make clear that it is my understanding that neither this bill nor the commission it creates is intended in any way to be construed or used as an excuse to unfairly criticize Indian gaming. Indian gambling has, in many instances, helped Indian tribes improve reservation conditions and provide jobs where unemployment often ranges between 50 and 80 percent. In addition, it is my hope that a fair and honest study will help destroy some of the more harmful and false myths about Indian gaming. For instance, it is far from the truth that all tribes have become rich from Indian gaming. Right not approximately 130 out of 553 Indian tribes operate casino style gaming in 22 States. A few have become quite wealthy. The vast majority, however, of Indian tribes are making only modest profits. Some Indian casinos have even folded. And because Indian tribes are required by law to plow revenues back into tribal projects and not individual profits, Indian tribes have been able to better the quality of life on their reservations by using casino revenues to offer better housing, education, health care, and safety to their members.

My hope is that this commission will study Indian gambling as evenly and fairly as non-Indian gaming. If this happens then I have little doubt that the study, when completed will give Americans the information we need to better understand the positive and negative aspects of gaming in the United States.

Mr. ENSIGN. I rise in opposition to H.R. 497, the National Gambling Impact Study Commission. Although the legislation the House is considering today is a substantial improvement over previous versions, I continue to have many strong reservations with this legislation.

First and foremost, I see no reason why the Federal Government should be involved in a study of a legal, State-regulated industry. The gaming industry, like any other entertainment or tourism industry, is subject to careful review and oversight by individual States. In my State of Nevada, we can see first hand the success of a beneficial relationship between the gaming industry and its regulatory agency, the Nevada Gaming Commission. These two entities have worked together over the years in a manner that benefits everyone—the industry, the State, and the millions of tourists that visit Nevada annually. Nevada has certainly been the leader and model for other States to follow.

Second, Mr. Speaker, I believe this commission is a terrible waste of taxpayer money. The data and information the commission will collect are already available from multiple studies that have already occurred. In this time of fiscal constraint, it is ridiculous to expend Federal dollars for a duplicative study.

I continue to resist this legislation because I feel that the underlying agenda of this bill is to federally regulate and tax the industry. The gaming industry has a huge impact on the economy of Nevada and 47 other States in the country. It provides jobs and opportunities in communities that would not be available if gaming did not exist. While the proponents of this legislation may have good intentions, I will be unyielding in my commitment to ensure that the intent of this commission does not expand to prohibit this legal industry. In addition, I will work with the Speaker, Senate majority leader, and the President to ensure that we have an unbiased commission that will fairly evaluate the industry and provide a balanced report.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in opposition to H.R. 497 not only because it is bad for Nevada, but because I believe it is bad for America. Again, Congress is spending more money on a study of which I question the validity. I question the wisdom of spending millions of dollars to create a new Government commission at a time when we are struggling to downsize the Government and balance our budget.

While I am pleased that efforts have been taken to limit the subpoena powers of the commission, it still baffles me why an advisory commission should hold such power. Most advisory commissions created by Congress or Federal agencies are not provided with subpoena power. This calls in question the very purpose of the gaming commission—and whether the commission can be objective.

Mr. Speaker, objective information on gaming is needed, but I thought the 104th Congress was eliminating the Washington-knows-best syndrome. This bill just gives that syndrome more fuel for the fire. Gaming has always been a State responsibility, and many States have addressed the issues relating to gaming in a responsible manner. Getting the Federal Government involved not only infringes on States rights, but costs taxpayers money that could better be spent in education programs, health programs, or to eliminate our Federal deficit. My colleagues, you should rethink this issue and ask where you think the citizens of your State would rather spend their money. My guess—not on the gaming commission created by H.R. 497. I urge my colleagues to vote against this bill.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COBLE). The question on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] that the House suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment to H.R. 497.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate amendment was concurred in.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the Senate amendment just concurred in.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

CHILD PILOT SAFETY ACT

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3267) to amend title 49, United States Code, to prohibit individuals who do not hold a valid private pilots certificate from manipulating the controls of aircraft in an attempt to set a record or engage in an aeronautical competition or aeronautical feat, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Child Pilot Safety Act".

SEC. 2. MANIPULATION OF FLIGHT CONTROLS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 447 of title 49, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 44724. Manipulation of flight controls

"(a) PROHIBITION.—No pilot in command of an aircraft may allow an individual who does not hold—

"(1) a valid private pilots certificate issued by the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration under part 61 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations; and to manipulate the controls of an aircraft if the pilot knows or should have known that the individual is attempting to set a record or engage in an aeronautical competition or aeronautical feat, as defined by the Administrator.

"(2) the appropriate medical certificate issued by the Administrator under part 67 of such title,

"(b) REVOCATION OF AIRMEN CERTIFICATES.—The Administrator shall issue an order revoking a certificate issued to an airman under section 44703 of this title if the Administrator finds that while acting as a pilot in command of an aircraft, the airman has permitted another individual to manipulate the controls of the aircraft in violation of subsection (a).

"(c) PILOT IN COMMAND DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'pilot in command' has the meaning given such term by section 1.1 of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations."

SEC. 3. CHILDREN FLYING AIRCRAFT.

(a) STUDY.—The Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration shall conduct a study of the impacts of children flying aircraft.

(b) CONSIDERATIONS.—In conducting the study, the Administrator shall consider the effects of imposing any restrictions on children flying aircraft on safety and on the future of general aviation in the United States.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Administrator shall issue a report containing the results of the study, together with recommendations on—

(1) whether the restrictions established by the amendments made by section 2 should be modified or repealed; and

(2) whether certain individuals or groups should be exempt from any age, altitude, or other restrictions that the Administrator may impose by regulation.

(d) REGULATIONS.—As a result of the findings of the study, the Administrator may issue regulations imposing age, altitude, or other restrictions on children flying aircraft.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI] each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN].

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, chaired by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. SHUSTER], reported H.R. 3267 by voice vote on June 6.

The bill was introduced on April 18 by myself, along with the chairman of the full committee, BUD SHUSTER, Aviation Subcommittee Ranking Member BILL LIPINSKI, Aviation Subcommittee Vice Chairman JERRY WELLER, the chairman of the Government Reform and Oversight Committee, BILL CLINGER, as well as JIM ROSS LIGHTFOOT, BILL PAXON, and BILL MARTINI.

Since the introduction of this legislation several other Members of the House have added their names as co-sponsors.

According to the National Transportation Safety Board, since 1964 there have been 178 accidents and incidents involving pilots 16 years of age and younger.

And, as we all know, last April, 7-year-old Jessica Dubroff attempted to become the youngest pilot to fly across the United States.

Unfortunately, Jessica, her father, and a flight instructor were killed while attempting to set this record.

Specifically, H.R. 3267 requires a private pilot license for any person attempting to break an aviation record.

The bill also requires a study to be conducted by the FAA to determine if any additional rules or guidelines should be put in place for children flying aircraft.

So, I think we have a balanced approach that focuses on the media-driven publicity stunts without imposing any additional regulations or undue restrictions on the entire aviation community.

H.R. 3267 has strong support from the general aviation community, including the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association, the General Aviation Manufacturers Association, and the National Air Transport Association.

The bill is also supported by the Federal Aviation Administration, the Department of Transportation, and several Members from both sides of the aisle.

It is a good bill, a balanced bill, and I think it is one that will merit the support of all Members.

I might just say, Mr. Speaker, that because of the terrible tragedy of flight 800 by TWA, the attention being given to aviation safety right at this time is understandably extremely high, and the public is demanding that we take every step possible to make sure that our aviation system is as safe and secure as possible.

This bill, along with two companion bills that we will act on shortly, are judicial steps that this Congress can take and can be proud of in working to make sure that our aviation system is as safe as possible, and we will be doing additional things and holding additional hearings as we move on through the coming weeks and months.

Mr. Speaker, I urge the support of all my colleagues for H.R. 3267, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, Chairman DUNCAN and I introduced H.R. 3267 following the tragic death of 7-year-old Jessica Dubroff on April 11, 1996, while trying to set a record as the youngest pilot.

This legislation has widespread support in the aviation community because the bill allows the FAA to study whether further restrictions should be placed on children flying aircraft instead of establishing a minimum age at which a child can manipulate the controls of an aircraft in the statute. I believe that it may well be appropriate for us to establish such a minimum age, but I am willing to wait until the FAA completes its study before taking any action.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3267 is responsible legislation that addresses the issue without overreacting. I urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. OBERSTAR], ranking member of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

I also strongly support the Child Pilot Safety Act, H.R. 3267. It is regrettable that we should even be here discussing such legislation, but out of necessity we are. The bill was drafted in response to a tragic accident that took the life of Jessica Dubroff, a precocious 7-year-old who was attempting to be the youngest person to manipulate the controls of an aircraft across the North American Continent.

As the committee heard in the hearings that the gentleman from Tennessee, Chairman DUNCAN, called and the ranking member, the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. LIPINSKI, participated in and help craft, we have to keep in mind that Jessica was not the pilot in command of the fatal flight. The decision to take off in foul weather was not hers. The decision to fly in aircraft that was reportedly overweight was not the child's. The decision to allow her to manipulate the controls of that aircraft at any time during that flight and prior to the tragic accident was not the child's decision. It was a decision of the pilot in command, an experienced pilot, a flight instructor who should have known better.

As we have discussed and Chairman DUNCAN and ranking member LIPINSKI have said again and again, we cannot legislate good judgment into the minds and hearts and soles of pilots, but we can erect some very strong barriers. That is what this legislation does.

To the extent that we legislate in this arena, we must legislate with the right objective in mind. The pilot in command, the flight instructor, not the child who is on board that aircraft but the pilot in command, to make that person doubly, triple aware that at all times, regardless of circumstances, regardless of societal pressures or other social pressures, they have to think first of safety. That is what this legislation does.

The child's interest in and enthusiasm for flying should be nurtured. It ought to be stimulated, as it has been from the dawn of civil aviation. For that purpose, there are junior aviation clubs all across America. The Young Eagles, I think of in my own district in Minnesota, Young Eagles Club at Mora, directed by, coached by Judy Rice, who is a very enthusiastic pilot herself, was appalled that a child would be in an aircraft under such weather conditions with the pressure of trying to create a record of flying across America for a child of that age.

The Young Eagles Clubs, the Civil Air Patrol, the Aviation Explorer

Scouts Groups, all give plenty of opportunities for young people to become enthused about aviation to become our future pilots, but never should they be exposed to such questionable and dangerous conditions as preceded that single tragic accident, nor should all those program be sacrificed because of one tragic accident.

I believe that, as a result of the good judgment that Mr. LIPINSKI and Mr. DUNCAN have exercised in crafting this legislation, that it is unlikely that flight instructors will participate in any such questionable record setting activities in the future. Again, we are not trying to legislate good judgment, but we are trying to send up very strong signals to the flying public and to the most experienced of instructors, instructor core throughout this country, stop, take stock, think carefully; lives are in your hands.

I commend the gentleman from Illinois, and I commend the gentleman from Tennessee for this legislation. I urge its passage.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I simply want to say that I appreciate very much the cooperation, the consideration given to me in crafting this bill by the gentleman from Tennessee, Chairman DUNCAN. I want to congratulate the staff on the Republican side and the Democratic side for working on this and coming up with this legislation. I salute them all. I urge passage of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Let me simply in closing echo the words of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI]. If there is any other subcommittee in this Congress where there is a better relationship between the ranking member and the chairman, I would like to know about it. The Subcommittee on Aviation has a history of working together in a very bipartisan way.

Sometimes all the publicity is given to our divisions up here, and people do not realize that on many important pieces of legislation the Members on both sides of the aisle work well together. I think this is in part due to a close relationship that I have with my ranking member, Mr. LIPINSKI, but also it is a tribute to the ranking member of the full committee, the gentleman from Minnesota, Mr. OBERSTAR, who served for many years as the chairman of this subcommittee and who is recognized in this Congress and is often referred to as Mr. Aviation.

I appreciate the work that they have done on this bill and the comments they have made. I think we have a good bill. It is a bill that will correct the abuses without overreaching.

I urge passage of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COBLE). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3267.

The question was taken.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5 of rule I and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

AIRLINE PILOT HIRING AND SAFETY ACT OF 1996

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3536) to amend title 49, United States Code, to require an air carrier to request and receive certain records before allowing an individual to begin service as a pilot, and for other purposes, as amended.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Airline Pilot Hiring and Safety Act of 1996".

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI] each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN].

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, on Thursday, June 6, the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee reported the Airline Pilot Hiring and Safety Act, H.R. 3536, by voice vote.

H.R. 3536 will go a long way in helping the airline industry weed out poor pilots—and it will make sure that these pilots are kept out of the system.

The legislation requires airlines to share the records of pilot job applicants before they are hired.

These records include physical exams, drug tests, alcohol tests, training records, proficiency and route checks, and others. It also requires airlines to request the motor vehicle driving records of the pilot from the National Register. None of this information can be released without the pilot’s prior written approval.

Over the last 7 years, as a result of airplane accidents involving fatalities, the National Transportation Safety Board has recommended to the FAA, on at least three different occasions, that pilot performance records should be shared.

Since 1987, substandard airline pilots have contributed to several fatal plane crashes, killing hundreds of people.

Among these pilots, one failed three flight tests in 6 years, one had been fired five times for poor performance, two had substance abuse problems, and the list goes on.

The Aviation Subcommittee, of which I chair held 2 days of hearings on this issue just this past December. From those hearings there was general consensus that the sharing of pilot records should be done.

H.R. 3536 provides airlines near total immunity from defamation lawsuits. The only exception would be if the airline knowingly places false information about a pilot in his or her record.

As I have said on several occasions, I believe that 99.9 percent of the pilots who fly today are very good pilots. But, unfortunately, some poor pilots have fallen through the cracks.

Again, on a bipartisan basis, we worked to craft a bill that I feel confident every Member of the House can support.

H.R. 3536 has several cosponsors from both sides of the aisle. It is also supported by the chairman of the full committee, Mr. SHUSTER, as well as the ranking members of both the full committee and the Aviation Subcommittee, Mr. OBERSTAR and Mr. LIPINSKI.

It is a good bill, a bipartisan bill, and it will help our make our safe aviation system even safer. I urge Members to support its passage.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3536, the Airline Pilot Hiring and Safety Act.

This bill will require an airline to obtain the records of a pilot from the pilot’s previous employer before hiring that pilot. I think it’s clear to all of us why this makes sense. We learned from a 1994 crash in which the pilot flying that aircraft had been forced out by another carrier because of poor performance. At the hearing the Aviation Subcommittee held on this issue that December, there was virtually unanimous agreement that a system needed to be set up for airlines to share pilot records which protected the rights of both the carriers and the pilots.

After considerable effort and through the leadership of Chairman DUNCAN, we have found the appropriate balance. Neither the carriers nor the pilots love this bill. But in the spirit of compromise we have found a middle ground which I believe best serves the interests of the flying public.

I do want to thank Chairman DUNCAN and Chairman SHUSTER for working so closely with our side on this legislation. They have been very receptive to improvements we have suggested and the end result is a bill that we can all support.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support for this important safety legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HEINEMAN], one of the main people in this Congress who is the biggest mover and shaker on this particular piece of legislation. He has been in on this from the very beginning and deserves a great deal of credit for this legislation.

(Mr. HEINEMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HEINEMAN. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in strong support of H.R. 3536, the Duncan-Heineman Airline Pilot Hiring Safety Act.

Mr. Speaker, on December 13, 1994, tragedy struck commuter Flight 3379. What began as a routine commuter flight from Greensboro, NC to the Raleigh-Durham International Airport—in my own congressional district—sadly turned to tragedy.

On that evening, the pilot of Flight 3379 attempted to land his twin engine commuter plane in the fog and rain, but because of a tragic miscalculation, the plane began spinning out of control and crashed on a hillside near the airport.

That disaster took the lives of the pilot, his copilot, and 13 of 20 passengers. Federal investigators learned that the crash was a result of pilot error. To make matters worse, the pilot of Flight 3379 had a history of similar pilot errors, and in fact he had been recommended for dismissal by another airline which previously employed him. His questionable training records from that previous airline were not available to his new employer when he was hired.

As USA Today reported:

“If [the pilot’s] training records had been shared, 15 people might not have died on December 13, 1994, when a [commuter] plane crashed near Raleigh-Durham, N.C.”

To quote further from the article:

“The FAA does not require airlines to verify flight experience; to check FAA records for accidents, violations, warnings or fines, or to check for criminal records." (USA Today, September 26, 1995).

Mr. Speaker, on the 1-year anniversary of this terrible crash, as the families of the victims struggled to make sense of the tragedy, I introduced legislation to make sure that this kind of accident would never happen again. I testified before the House Aviation Subcommittee, and in the following months, I worked closely with my good friend, Aviation Subcommittee Chairman JOHN DUNCAN, to develop the bipartisan legislation before us today.

This bill, the "Duncan-Heineman Airline Pilot Hiring Safety Act" will require airlines that are preparing to hire a new pilot request certain safety records, some of which are maintained by the FAA, and many of which are maintained by the airlines themselves.

This bill provides some necessary protections from lawsuits for airlines that share safety records as required by law. The bill also gives pilots the opportunity to check the accuracy of any records and requires that pilots give their written approval before records are released.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill, a bipartisan bill that will go a long way toward making our airlines even safer. I want to thank Aviation Subcommittee Chairman JOHN DUNCAN and Transportation Committee and Infrastructure Chairman BUD SHUSTER for their invaluable help in developing this critically needed legislation and bringing it to the floor. I also want to commend Representative JIM OBERSTAR, the ranking member of the Transportation Committee, and Representative WILLIAM LIPINSKI, the ranking member of the Aviation Subcommittee for their hard work in helping to craft this bipartisan bill.

I urge Members to support H.R. 3536.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. OBERSTAR], Mr. Aviation.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for those very kind remarks.

Mindful of Adlai Stevenson's injunction that it is all right to hear praise of oneself as long as they do not inhale it, the two aviation leaders in this Congress are the gentleman from Tennessee, the chairman of the subcommittee, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI], ranking members of the subcommittee, and I am very grateful for the splendid work they have done in carrying on the bipartisan tradition of our subcommittee on aviation.

This legislation plugs a hole in the aviation safety system to insure that we take every step to make that system as safe as it can possibly be. Again our two leaders on this aviation subcommittee have worked in a bipartisan fashion, very carefully and with great legislative craftsmanship to address, as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI] well put it, a measure and an issue that does not please either the pilot community or the airline community. It will please, and it should please, the traveling public.

This is an issue that we have dealt with in the aviation subcommittee over a period of 3 or 4 years, drawing upon a recommendation several times issued by the National Transportation Safety Board that the transfer of training and employment records of pilots should be done and should be made available from one airline to another airline when a pilot is being considered for employment, changing employees, and it should seem like a very straightforward and simple action. But in fact it is not. It has taken us quite a long time to get to this point.

It is actually a very thorny thicket of issues that requires a balance of interests while insuring that the safety benefits of transferring those records are achieved, and the issues that have arisen over a period of several years are privacy for the pilots, liability for pilots and for airlines, the employer employee relationship. But I think all of those questions are met very responsibly and very effectively in this legislation.

The National Transportation Safety Board has found in a number of accident investigations that the pilot involved had been dismissed from previous employers for poor performance. But that history, those records, Mr. Speaker, were not known to the current employer. Had it been known, the pilot who caused or contributed to such accidents would not have been hired, in all likelihood, or at least the airline doing hiring would have been able to know about the background and do further checks and do further investigation of the qualifications of that applicant, and in some situations, very likely, accidents could have been avoided.

I expect that upon enactment and enforcement of this legislation, that another category of accidents will be eliminated, specifically accidents caused by pilots who have previously been judged to be such poor pilots that they had to be terminated by their airline employer.

The chairman has thoroughly described how the bill establishes a system of record sharing with protections for pilots. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI] has elaborated on it. But I just want to emphasize how important it is that the pilots have the ability to correct their records, that they will know under this legislation when their record are being transferred and that they will have the ability to seek damages against a person in their former employer airline who may falsify a pilot's records. Those are very important privacy and personal protections for pilots. They were right to be concerned about those matters. Our committee has been right to address those issues and has addressed them very effectively and soundly in this legislation.

Section 3 of the bill directs a rule-making to establish new minimum standards for pilot qualifications, another issue that pilots were concerned about. Hiring in the airline industry is very cyclical, given the economics of aviation. When there is low demand for travel, there is low demand for pilots. Airlines can be choosy about who they select, and they can and do pick pilots with more experience and more training. When demand is high, the airlines, on simple supply and demand purposes, hire pilots for less stringent criteria.

This bill will require the initiation of a regulatory proceeding to determine the appropriate standards, to screen pilots for psychomotor coordination, general intellectual capacity, instrument and mechanical comprehension, physical fitness.

The bill will also establish minimum standards for pilot training facilities to ensure that pilots will meet the new preemployment standards.

The bill also requires a study of whether existing minimum flight time requirements are sufficient to ensure safety in today's increasingly sophisticated and complicated aircraft.

This bill is far greater than just transfer of records and the very important issue of one airline knowing a pilot's complete history. It sets standards for a range of issues that I just described, it will elevate the whole quality of airmanship in today's highly complicated pilot and cockpit environment, and I think this legislation, I say to my two colleagues, does a great service to the traveling public and to all of aviation for the future. It is a quantum leap forward, and I commend both the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI] on the splendid job they have done in bringing this matter forward. I urge its enactment, and I hope the other body will act quickly upon it.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no additional speakers at this time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I am going to conclude here, and I simply want to make a couple of points.

First, when the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN] and I referred to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. OBERSTAR] as Mr. Aviation, there is no jest in that whatsoever. We all sincerely believe that he knows more about aviation than any person we have run into in this country or in any country in the world. So we do not in any way, shape, or form make light of that. We are bestowing upon him a title that we all sincerely believe.

Second, I want to make the point that this bill really was a very difficult bill to work out a reasonable compromise on. We had the pilots on one side, the air carriers on another side, and I salute the chairman for his steady hand in bringing us to an outstanding compromise.

But, in all honesty, on this particular piece of legislation I salute the staff members on both sides who had to put up with the arguments coming forth from the pilots and from the carriers, and I know that that was no easy job listening to them repeatedly, and for the legislation that they developed along with the Members of the committee I strongly salute them.

So once again I say I support this bill enthusiastically, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to simply echo the remarks of the ranking member, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI]. In fact, a few minutes ago I whispered to Dave Schaffer, our very fine staff director for the subcommittee, that I thought many people watching the discussion on the Child Pilot Safety Act and the Airline Pilot Hiring and Safety Act, these 2 bills, would not fully realize that if we had gone too far in either direction on either one of these bills, we could have turned either or both of these bills into something very, very controversial, and instead everyone has worked together in a very bipartisan and a very cordial fashion to fashion legislation that I think merits the support of all of our colleagues. And I, too, like Mr. LIPINSKI, want to thank the staff for some outstanding work on these two bills, and also thank once again the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI] and the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. OBERSTAR], and I urge passage of this bill.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Transportation and Infrastructure Subcommittee on Aviation, I rise in strong support of H.R. 3536.

Over the past 8 years, there have been eight commercial airplane crashes—all but one on small airlines. According to the National Transportation Safety Board, five of these crashes are attributable to pilot error. In at least four of these fatal accidents, the employing airline was not aware that the pilots had documented histories of poor performance with other airlines that had employed them.

One of these crashes occurred on December 13, 1994, when American Eagle flight 3379 on route from Greensboro, NC to Raleigh-Durham crashed four miles short of the runway while attempting an instrument controlled landing in poor weather conditions. Thirteen passengers and the two crew members were killed.

The pilot, Capt. Mike Hillis, was hired by American Eagle just 4 days after he was forced to quit by his previous employer because of poor piloting skills. American Eagle had no knowledge of his prior poor performance ratings.

One of the passengers who died on flight 3379 was William Gibson of Kernersville, NC. Mr. Gibson's mom, Mary Ann Gibson and his sister, Susan Gibson Berson, testified before the Aviation subcommittee last December. The Gibsons are residents of Warren, OH in my congressional district. Mary Ann's husband, Howard Gibson, passed away on January 20. Howard was also here when his wife testified. I can't think of a more fitting tribute to this beautiful family than to get this legislation enacted into law.

According to the NTSB, the probable cause of the American Eagle flight 3379 accident was pilot error. American Eagle failed to identify, document, monitor, and remedy deficiencies in pilot performance and training.

While the FAA requires airlines to conduct security checks of pilot applicants, there is no FAA requirement to verify flight experience, determine an applicant's safety/enforcement history, pilot training and performance in the pilot's previous position, or any criminal or driving history.

H.R. 3536 requires an airline to obtain the records of a pilot from the pilot's previous employer before hiring that pilot. The bill requires airlines to keep pilot records for up to 5 years, and allows pilots full access to their records and notice of whenever records are being provided. The bill also provides immunity to airlines unless the airline knowingly lies about the pilot's record.

I would like to note for the record that the airline pilots have raised some legitimate concerns about this bill. They argue that many pilot training records are subjective, and requiring record sharing and background checks will result in the sanitization of pilot records to protect pilots' careers. This, they argue, would have the effect of making the system less safe.

While I understand the pilots' concerns, I believe the bill before strikes a reasonable balance between safety and privacy. And the bill does directly address another concern the pilot's raised by requiring the FAA to issue a proposed rule within 18 months establishing minimum standards for pilot qualifications.

The airline pilots are right on target when they note that one way to address the safety issue is for the FAA to standardize and tighten pilot hiring standards.

I would also repeat that the bill allows pilots to sue airlines if an airline lied about a pilot. The bill also includes clear language safeguarding the privacy of pilot records.

On balance, this is a good bill and I urge all Members to support it.

Mr. LAZIO of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Airline Pilot Hiring and Safety Act, H.R. 3536, which we are considering today. This bill requires an airline to perform a background check on a pilot before that individual can be hired. It also requires the FAA to establish minimum standards for pilot qualifications, and work with the Department of Defense to determine if military pilot records should be available to civilian airlines seeking to hire former military pilots. Privacy safeguards are incorporated into the bill.

Without question, the vast majority of airline pilots are well-qualified individuals with impeccable records. Nevertheless, pilot error occurs and there have been accidents because the pilot's flying history was not known to the current employer. A tragic case in point was the American Eagle flight 3379 crash on December 13, 1994 near Raleigh-Durham Airport. This accident took the lives of the 15 people, including my Long Island constituent, Kelly Ciulla. The National Transportation Safety Board found that pilot error was the probable cause. Disturbingly, the pilot has a history of poor performance with errors similar to those that contributed to this crash and was forced to quit his previous job with another airline because of his poor piloting skills. However, American Eagle was not aware of the pilot's flight record because this information is not traditionally shared among the airlines.

Following investigations involving pilot error, the NTSB has repeatedly recommended that the Federal Aviation Administration require substantive background checks on pilot applicants, but the agency has failed to do so. The consequences have been tragic and needlessly so.

The airlines must know that their pilots are highly qualified, and the flying public deserves no less. At the request of Kelly Ciulla's mother, Maureen Ryan, I cosponsored a similar bill introduced by Congressman HEINEMAN in whose congressional district the flight 3379 crash occurred. H.R. 3536 before us today has evolved from the bill. Requiring pilot background checks is purely common sense and not without precedent in other industries. The railroads, trucking companies, defense contractors, and many school districts follow this practice when they hire an employee.

I commend the leadership for bringing this H.R. 3536 to the floor, and I urge my colleagues to support this long overdue legislation that will save lives.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COBLE). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3536, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5 of rule I and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN].

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, under the outstanding leadership of its chairman, Mr. SHUSTER, reported H.R. 3159 on May 9. The Aviation Subcommittee and the Railroad Subcommittee held a joint hearing on the needs and concerns of the National Transportation Safety Board on March 6.

I must say that I have been very impressed with the work of the NTSB under the leadership of Chairman Jim Hall.

The NTSB has responded extremely well to the recent airline tragedies involving ValuJet and TWA. The professionalism and dedication, in often very tough and demanding situations, should be heeded by several other Federal agencies and Departments.

H.R. 3159, authorizes appropriations for fiscal years 1997, 1998, and 1999 for the National Transportation Safety.

H.R. 3159 has six components that I will briefly outline. First, the typical NTSB reauthorization has been 3 years and this bill contains a 3-year reauthorization.

Second, for this current fiscal year, the committee had authorized $45.1 million dollars, however the Appropriations Committee appropriated a level of $38.8 million. Let me say that the authorization levels in this bill are not those that were reported in the original bill. They have been adjusted to reflect what the House has recently approved in this year's Department of Transportation appropriations bill, H.R. 3675. So, this bill authorizes $42.4 million for fiscal year 1997, $44.46 million for fiscal year 1998, and $45.0 million for fiscal year 1999.

The first year's authorization represents a 9.3 percent increase from the fiscal year 1996 appropriated level, and it provides an adequate increase in the remaining 2 years, which results in a 6.2 percent increase between 1997 and 1999. I think these levels will allow the NTSB to adequately perform its mission.

Third, the bill extends the term of the NTSB chairman from 2-years to 4-years. NTSB argued that it has had rapid turnover in its chairmanship and that a 4-year term would promote leadership stability. Many other agency chairmen have terms of 4 years or more so we are not doing anything out of the ordinary here.

Fourth, we also have a provision in H.R. 3159 that would allow the NTSB to withhold foreign accident information. Currently, many foreign aviation authorities will not give accident information to the NTSB for fear that the Board will have to release it to the public under the Freedom of Information Act. As a result, Board employees must travel to foreign countries or embassies to review data. This is costly and inefficient. We correct this problem in our bill.

Fifth, we also give the NTSB authority to withhold voluntarily provided safety information. At this time, the NTSB learns of safety problems only after there has been an accident. A major initiative in the aviation community is to try to spot trends or unsafe practices before they cause an accident. This initiative could be accomplished by voluntarily sharing data among airlines and with the Government. However, many are reluctant to do this because they fear possible repercussions if the information was released.

Let me say that the Aviation Subcommittee recently held a hearing regarding protections for whistleblowers in the aviation industry. I think we will continue to look at this issue.

Sixth, and finally, H.R. 3159 allows the NTSB to charge a reasonable fee for courses given to non-Board members. The NTSB conducts safety-related classes and this provision will allow them to recoup some of its cost for conducting these classes.

So, we have a very fine bill which I feel very confident every Member of the House can support.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I join the chairman in expressing my strong support for H.R. 3159, the National Transportation Safety Board Amendments of 1996. This legislation reauthorizes the NTSB for 3 years, and makes a number of changes requested by the NTSB to allow the Board to continue its excellent work.

As this bill moved through the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, I repeatedly observed that the NTSB is probably the most respected Government entity in the United States. Since the committee reported this legislation, we have witnessed two devastating aircraft crashes that have focused the Nation's attention on the NTSB's work. In the most difficult of circumstances, the NTSB works with local, State, and Federal entities as well as with the families of accident victims. And the Board is not just involved in aviation—the NTSB leads investigations of accidents in every mode of transportation. As we discuss this reauthorization on the floor today, it is important for us to recognize the public service performed by the Board. They are a critical element of our national transportation system.

Mr. Speaker, as requested by the NTSB, H.R. 3159 extends the Chairman's term for future Chairmen from 2 years to 4 in an effort to promote leadership stability. It also enables the Board to fully participate in foreign investigations by providing protection from Freedom of Information Act requests for a 2-year period. Our intention is not to keep information from the public. Rather, the measure simply enhances the NTSB's access to information that will lead to improvements in aviation safety.

The bill also encourages data sharing programs among the FAA, NTSB, and the aviation community by prohibiting the Board from disclosing voluntarily provided safety information. By sharing information before an accident occurs, we can save lives. The legislation establishes a framework which will enable this to occur.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation we are considering today contains higher funding levels than those contained in the introduced bill. This slightly higher authorization in the out years, along the lines of an amendment offered by Mr. OBERSTAR during committee markup, will enable the NTSB to increase its workforce by some 20 employees. In recent months, with the ValuJet crash in the Florida Everglades and the TWA crash last week off Long Island, it has become even clearer to me that the NTSB needs every resource it can get. I want to thank the ranking member of the committee, Mr. OBERSTAR, for his leadership on this issue, and both Chairman SHUSTER and Chairman DUNCAN for their willingness to work with us. The higher funding level makes this a better bill for the American people.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. OBERSTAR].

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support H.R. 3159, to reauthorize the National Transportation Safety Board. I appreciate the very thorough, complete explanations provided by the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN], and the ranking member, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI], on the details of this administration. I just want to address the issue about the NTSB, about which I have had such very deep and strong admiration for many years.

In the end we have worked it out. I am very appreciative of the consideration Chairman SHUSTER has given to this issue, the work that Chairman DUNCAN has done and the digging in of my good colleague from Illinois who has worked so hard to achieve the resolution that we came to in this legislation today that will increase the workforce to 370 employees.

If ever there were a question about the value, the significance, the objectivity, and the meticulous workmanship of this small, effective agency, the National Transportation Safety Board, surely any concerns were put to rest by its work on the tragic ValuJet crash in Florida. Although we do not have as yet a probable cause, I am certain that the workmanlike job of the NTSB investigators, that the continuing meticulous metallurgical studies that are being done and other work will lead NTSB to a determination of probable cause from which can come regulatory action to prevent such tragedies in the future.

We gather this afternoon in the aftermath of another unspeakable tragedy. Again we see the professionalism and the integrity of the NTSB managing the investigation of this tragic accident. We have come to rely upon NTSB as the front line of defense in aviation safety. They are the first ones who deal with the families of the victims of tragedies. They are the first ones on the scene with the expertise to sift through the wreckage and come to an understanding of how it came about, what caused it, and then what should be done to prevent future accidents. I have such enormous respect for all those who are the first on the scene who have to deal with the grisly results of a tragic accident. We should give them our total support. This legislation is a very strong move in the right direction.

I greatly appreciate again the work of Chairman DUNCAN, Ranking Member LIPINSKI, and our staff who on both sides of the aisle have worked together very hard to come to a resolution of issues so that we can bring to this body a truly bipartisan piece of legislation that must be enacted.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, let me say that I rise to once again thank our two outstanding ranking members, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. OBERSTAR], and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LIPINSKI]. All three of these bills that we have had on the floor today pertain to aviation safety. We just, of course, have been through two terrible tragedies with the ValuJet crash and the TWA crash. The sympathy of every Member of this body goes out to the family members of the victims of those tragedies. In fact I think on our subcommittee we see that tragedy closer up than almost any other Member of this body because we have heard in just recent weeks from the family members of some of these victims. I think that we are going to produce legislation in the next few weeks or months that will help improve the treatment of family members of victims of these tragedies and hopefully will produce legislation to make our airports even more secure.

These bills today, along with the legislation that we approved in March to reform the FAA, are the first major overhaul of our civil aviation law since 1958, a major step that we took if passed by the Senate. I think the members of the public should know that we are not sitting idly by, that the Members of this body are doing everything possible to make sure that our aviation system becomes even safer.

I think we should note that we have by far the safest aviation system in the world. We have had a little over 12,900 deaths in all U.S. aviation accidents combined since the Wright brothers' flight of 1903. Even one death is too many. We need to work constantly to improve and make it better, especially with air passenger traffic going up as much as it is, and it is going to shoot way up in these next 10 years, possibly to as many as 1 billion passengers a year. So we have got a lot of work to do.

We should note that unfortunately as many people are killed on the highways in this Nation every 4 months as have been killed in all of these U.S. aviation accidents combined since the Wright brothers' flight. We have an aviation system that the world looks up to and that we should be proud of. We should reassure the flying public that our aviation system in this country is very, very safe, and we are going to do everything we can to make it safer. That is why we can all be so proud not only of our FAA reform legislation but of these bills today.

Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of this final bill, H.R. 3159.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion I simply want to say that we have the safest airline system in the world. The gentleman from Minnesota, [Mr. OBERSTAR], Chairman DUNCAN, myself and all other members of the Subcommittee on Aviation of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives will do and have done everything we possibly can to continue to improve airline safety in this Nation. We are passing 3 bills today that deal with airline safety. There is much more to be done, but I am sure that we are up to the challenge. We will do it.

I want to say that Chairman DUNCAN is a man who I sincerely appreciate working with because he is very easy to work with, he is very understanding, and he is very committed to aviation safety and the improvement of aviation in this Nation and, quite frankly, in this world.

To have a man with the experience of the gentleman from Minnesota, [Mr. OBERSTAR] serving on this subcommittee and, of course, on the full committee has been of enormous help to myself and to Chairman DUNCAN. I want to state publicly I appreciate the work that both of those gentlemen have done in regard to aviation. I ask everyone's support of this bill for the National Transportation Safety Board, particularly because there is another great Tennessean that is the chairman of that board.

Tennessee has sent us outstanding public people: Davy Crockett, Sam Houston, Andrew Jackson, BOB CLEMENT, Jim Hall, and, the most outstanding of all, Chairman DUNCAN.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COBLE). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3159, as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 5 of rule I and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on all three of the bills just considered, H.R. 3267, H.R. 3536, and H.R. 3159.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee?

There was no objection.

CENSUS OF AGRICULTURE ACT OF 1996

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3665) to transfer to the Secretary of Agriculture the authority to conduct the census of agriculture, as amended.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COMBEST] and the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COMBEST].

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3665 is a short bill—it simply transfers the authority to conduct the Census on Agriculture from the Secretary of Commerce to the Secretary of Agriculture and eliminates this authority from the Secretary of Commerce as of October 1, 1998.

This census authority change was one that the Senate wanted to include as part of the 1996 farm bill. However, we completed the farm bill conference before we on the House side had a chance to clear this change with the Government Reform Committee.

I, along with Chairman ROBERTS and all the other members of the Agriculture Committee, want to thank all the members and staff of the Government Reform Subcommittee on National Security, International Affairs, and Criminal Justice, Chairman ZELIFF and his ranking member, Mrs. THURMAN, for their help in accommodating this move—everyone worked very hard to get this bill put together very quickly.

In order to cope with the continuing move to streamline and downsize Federal agencies, it has become apparent that moving the authority to conduct the Census on Agriculture from Commerce to USDA makes sense, from both an administrative and cost-effective point of view. In fact, the fiscal year 1997 Agriculture appropriations bill has already shifted the $17 million in funding for the Census on Agriculture to USDA, rather than the Department of Commerce.

By moving the authority to conduct the census over to USDA, it allows the Department of Commerce to free up the funds otherwise obligated for this census; eliminates the need for a specific line-item in the Commerce Department's appropriation; and locates the census at the agency with the biggest interest in the ag census, without precluding USDA from working with the Commerce Department on actually getting the work done.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 3665, the Census of Agriculture Act of 1996. I would simply like to reiterate to my colleagues what my colleague the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COMBEST] has already said, and that is that this bill does not change the definition of what constitutes a farm nor does it decrease the amount of funding available for other discretionary activities within the Department of Agriculture.

This legislation simply moves the administration of the ag census from the Bureau of the Census within Commerce to the Department of Agriculture. Secretary Glickman has indicated that he will charge the National Agriculture Statistics Service with continuing to carry out an agricultural census every 5 years. The Ag Statistics Service within USDA is well suited to take over the responsibilities for carrying out the census activities, as they already maintain a network in every state that allows them to put out State by State reports weekly and major reports throughout the year. These reports are utilized by all segments of the agricultural sector in this country and every by our foreign competitors.

I am pleased that Secretary Glickman took the initiative in forging this compromise with the Department of Commerce as well as the Office of Management and Budget to ensure the viability of the ag census for future years. I would also like to thank our colleagues on the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight for their cooperation in ensuring the passage of H.R. 3665 and urge my colleagues to support the passage of this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE].

Mr. WISE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM] and I thank the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COMBEST]. This is truly a great Texas piece of legislation, but it is very, very important for West Virginia. Let me just say that I appreciate also the full committee chair of both the Committee on Agriculture and the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight for their efforts as well.

Mr. Speaker, this is a very important bill, particularly for rural States, rural areas, and particularly for States that have farming of the type that West Virginia does.

If this piece of legislation did not go through, West Virginia will be the most seriously affected State of any State in the Nation in terms of losing its definition of family farm and losing a lot of farms that presently benefit from that definition. West Virginia presently has over 17,000 farms that are defined as farms by the Department of Census, that is, they have sales in excess of $1,000. Raising that to $10,000 would cause 78 percent of our farms in the State to lose that definition.

What that means then is that we would be greatly impacted, farmers would not be able to receive certain tax, favorable tax treatment, the distribution of research funds for farms would be altered and also for college agricultural programs as well as the allocation of soil conservation efforts. So clearly this is a very, very significant piece of legislation for much of rural West Virginia and much of rural America.

Simply, what it does is to move the census functions from the Bureau of Census to the United States Department of Agriculture. That is important because the USDA obviously has clear experience with working with farms and farm definitions, not so the Bureau of Census.

Also, the Bureau of Census has seen its budget cut in this particular area 31 percent. That means they are not going to be spending as much time focusing on what it is that makes up farming and what is important to farmers. I believe that this consolidation moving to USDA will also integrate the agriculture statistic programs of the two departments and eliminate duplication and promote efficiency. The Bureau of Census, I am happy to say supports this move as well.

The USDA has indicated that at least in the foreseeable future, the near future, they do not foresee changing the threshold definition of farming, that is changing the threshold definition from the present $1,000. That means that there would not be an immediate increase to 5- or, even as had been proposed in the Bureau of Census, to $10,000. If that threshold level is raised to $10,000, 78 percent of West Virginia farms will no longer be defined as a farm and therefore not be eligible for favorable tax treatments in certain instances nor will they count towards the formula monies for various agriculture programs, including Soil Conservation Service and agricultural research efforts.

I think this is an extremely important piece of legislation. I just want the chairman to know, and the ranking member, that just as recently as this weekend at various functions people were coming up to me and saying what is being done about the farm threshold. Am I going to be a farmer or not? I was happy to tell them that it is on the floor Monday afternoon and that it should be voted on.

Now, of course this bill will go to the Senate, so it is important that the Senate as well, the other body, take this piece of legislation up. There is no controversy that I can see. It seems to be widely supported. The Bureau of Census supports it. The United States Department of Agriculture supports it. We have got the Agriculture Committees, the Government Reform Committees supporting it. So, clearly it ought to be able to move quickly and get to the President and we can end this anxiety that presently a lot of farmers in my State and many other States are undergoing as they wonder whether or not they are going to see their farm continue with the farm status which entitled them to certain preferential tax treatments as well as figuring into the formula monies for agricultural functions such as soil conservation and ag research.

So I thank once again those who made this possible. Let me just say of the 17,020 family farms in West Virginia, 13,274, or 78 percent, are very, very grateful to us for moving this bill to the floor so quickly.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, just in conclusion, I might point out that this is an excellent example of cooperation between various agencies, cooperation between various committees that will now allow us to do the most efficient census possible with the least amount of taxpayer resources and the best utilization of all of the talents available in agriculture already there in order to do the job that needs doing for American agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I conclude and say I appreciate the cooperation of my colleague, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. STENHOLM], the comments of the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. WISE], and would urge our colleagues to support this legislation under the suspension.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. COBLE). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COMBEST] that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3665, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof), the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. COMBEST. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 365, the bill just passed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the House stands in recess until approximately 3 p.m.

Accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 50 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess until approximately 3 p.m.)

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. COBLE) at 3 o'clock and 3 minutes p.m.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1997

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House on Thursday, July 18, 1996 and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 3845.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 3845) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1997, and for other purposes, with Mr. HASTINGS of Washington in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of Thursday, July 18, 1996, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH] and the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON] will each control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH].

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. WALSH. asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased this afternoon to present to the House for its consideration the District of Columbia appropriations bill for fiscal year 1997. Our many months of public hearings, meetings, and negotiations have produced a strong bipartisan agreement that takes the next step toward reduced deficits, reduced borrowing, and a balanced budget.

This is the second budget for the District of Columbia government that I have presented. I am happy to report that the District government, with the help of the Financial Control Board, is making progress, perhaps not as quickly as some of us would like, but progress.

In addition to the Control Board, the independent Chief Financial Officer has been in place now for several months and seems to be getting a handle on the District's finances. In last year's bill, we included language that gave him control over all accounting, budget, and financial management personnel. I believe he is doing an outstanding job. He is bringing accountability to the District's finances. He, of course, works closely with the Control Board so that what he does is within the parameters set by the board.

Mr. Chairman, we have approved over 99 percent of the consensus budget submitted jointly by the Mayor, the City Council, and the Control Board. This bill will provide the District government with a total budget of $5.155 billion for fiscal year 1997. That amount includes $5.108 billion in operating expenses and $47 million in capital outlay.

In the operating expenses category, the bill includes an additional $44 million for police and fire protection over last year's appropriation. We also recommend the requested $8.5 million for increased training of current District employees to improve productivity and management skills.

Public school reform was an important part of our bill last year. One of the major items carried in that reform legislation was the authorization of public charter schools. This bill includes $2.8 million to fund 5 charter schools in fiscal year 1997 that will enroll 450 to 600 students.

We recommend a total of $718 million in Federal funds consisting of a Federal payment of $660 million which is the same as last year, the regular annual Federal contribution to the police, fire, teachers, and judges retirement funds of $52 million, and $5.7 million to cover the expenses incurred by the District in connection with the Presidential inaugural activities.

The bill is within our 602(b) allocation of $718 million in budget authority and outlays.

Mr. Chairman, in order to show continuous progress toward balancing the District's budget, we have included language in section 141 starting on page 45 of the bill that holds the deficit down to $40 million rather than the $99 million that was proposed by city officials and the Control Board. I have met separately with the Mayor and the Control Board chairman and I believe this reduction of $59 million in the deficit projection is eminently achievable without affecting basic city services.

Some concern has been expressed that we are cutting too much in this budget. Some clarification is required as to what is meant by cutting. What we are cutting, Mr. Chairman, is the increase in spending. We are not cutting below last year's spending level. In fact, the budget reflects increases of $114 million above last year's level. What we are saying to the District in this bill is that it can spend the increase of $114 million if it has the revenues. The message to the District is do not finish fiscal year 1997 with a deficit of more than $40 million.

In the financial crisis that the city finds itself in, I believe this is a reasonable approach that will keep the city from going even deeper into debt. This 1-percent reduction pales in comparison to the action taken by the New York City Financial Control Board in its first year. According to testimony we received earlier this month from General Accounting Office officials, New York City's control board in its first year of operation implemented a work force reduction of 13 percent from the previous year's level and it froze the wages of the remaining city employees for 3 years. Philadelphia's control board in its first year renegotiated all labor agreements which led to a 33-month wage freeze and extensively restructured health benefits, paid holidays, and sick leave.

I wanted to make that point clear. The reduction we are recommending is from the increase requested, not from last year's appropriation or their base.

One of the serious problems with the District's financial management is that it spends up to the appropriated amount regardless of what its revenues are. By doing that, it goes further and further into debt. I do not believe the city can spend itself into prosperity. It must eliminate its deficit spending which amounts to only 1 or 2 percent of the total operating budget.

A major concern of several of our committee members is the city's proposal to finance the operating deficits. By saying that, what we are talking about is further borrowing, both long and short-term. This will divert scarce operating revenues from education, from social programs, from public safety and street repair to interest costs paid to the bondholders. The District is considering submitting a proposal to borrow $500 million over 15 years to pay off the accumulated debt and finance future deficits. It would require repayments of $935 million in addition to the $480 million payback on the fiscal year 1991 deficit borrowing. These paybacks shift over $600 million from city programs to interest payments for bondholders. This proposal is not good news for current and future District taxpayers and must be restudied with the objective of spending tax dollars on city programs and not on interest costs. Just as the city cannot spend itself into prosperity, it cannot borrow itself into prosperity. Hard decisions must be made.

Mention was made several times last year that our fiscal 1996 bill was a bad bill because we reduced the budget and in effect were telling the District that it could not spend all the revenues it generates. The problem with that criticism is the District's revenue projections were overly optimistic by at least $116 million and possibly by $150 million. Had we not made spending reductions and instead had accepted the city's budget, the fiscal 1996 deficit would now be $270 million rather than the $116 million projected. So we made the right decision last year by reducing the expenditure level because the revenue collections are nowhere near what they had projected. Had we accepted the Control Board's numbers, the deficit would have been $245 million. With the spending we agreed to in conference last year, the deficit was estimated at $20 million, four-tenths of one percent, an amount we thought the city and the Control Board would work with and hopefully eliminate. As we found out since, the deficit will be higher because of the overly optimistic revenue projections.

Mr. Chairman, it is imperative that the major structural problems facing the city be dealt with in an aggressive and bold manner. The Federal Government, the District government, and our regional partners all share responsibility for our Nation's Capital. We must address in a comprehensive and coordinated manner the city's delivery of services such as health care, corrections, and other State and county functions. I noticed in the press that the City Council is having some difficulty in doing what has to be done regarding a new retirement system for police officers, firefighters, and teachers. I understand that that has been revisited and some progress has been made but it is only temporary and it must be made permanent. We were promised last October that necessary action would be taken last December. This is an issue that must be resolved in a way that does not bankrupt the city. We have confidence in the Mayor, the Chief Financial Officer, the City Council, and the Control Board to accomplish these difficult but absolutely necessary tasks.

In closing, I want to thank all the members of our subcommittee for their assistance in bringing this bill to the House floor—the gentleman from Texas [Mr. BONILLA]; the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. KINGSTON]; the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN]; the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN]; the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. PARKER]; the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON], the ranking member of our subcommittee who preceded me as chairman; the gentleman from New York [Mr. SERRANO]; and the gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR]. I especially want to thank the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations; and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], our ranking minority member, for their assistance in allowing this bill to come to the floor today.

Also, Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the staff for a job well done: John Simmons of my staff; Mike Fischetti, who is on detail from the GAO; Mary Porter, who is extraordinary in her technical expertise, she is on detail from the District Government; and Migo Miconi, the subcommittee clerk. They make a great team, and I appreciate all the work they do.

Mr. Chairman, I believe the bill we bring to the committee this afternoon is a good bill, one that is fair not only to the city government but also to District taxpayers. I strongly recommend this bill to my colleagues and urge an "aye" vote.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

(Mr. DIXON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3844. Let me say this year that the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH], the chairman of the committee, should be congratulated for reaching out in a bipartisan way in an effort to keep extraneous material and legislative issues off of the District of Columbia appropriation bill.

Let me also commend the chairman of the committee, along with the fine staff that he has, Migo Miconi, John Simmons, Mike Fischetti, and Mary Porter, and take a special time to say that in the minority we do not have the large staff that the majority has. Cheryl Smith, who is an assistant to me, a staff assistant to me on the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia, operates on three other committees and in fact does an excellent job. I appreciate the time and the effort that she gives me.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that this marks a significant turn in the D.C. appropriations bill but also the finances of the District. I would have to point out that the District, under the supervision of the Control Board, is now making arrangements to borrow short term from Wall Street, which I think is an encouraging sign that Wall Street thinks that they are moving in the right direction.

This bill comes to us without controversy for the first time. The District of Columbia, the city council, the Mayor, the Control Board, and we here in Congress, at least our subcommittee, agrees as to what the figures should be, and there is no controversy surrounding that.

I would like to take time to point out two or three issues. The first one is the unfunded liability of the pension plan. As the chairman of the committee indicated, we are providing $52 million. The President had sent up $102 million to try to relieve the unfunded liability that the District has in its pension plan. I do not excuse the fact that, since the District took over the pension plan, they have continued the twice-a-year COLA's. As the chairman pointed out, they have been slow to move on the issue of reforming their pension plan.

I must point out that at the time the District took over the pension plan, there was a $2.7 billion deficit. We move $2.7 billion of liability from the Federal Government to the District Government. Also, I must point out that it has about doubled. But the point that I would like to make is, no, it is true that the District cannot spend its way out of this financial crisis nor can it entirely cut its way out of this financial crisis.

This body must recognize that we have responsibilities, particularly to that pension plan to come up with a revised program to make it financially sound. I would also like to point out, Mr. Chairman, two measures, although I do support the bill, that I disagree with. One is the prohibition against any funds for abortion, either Federal or District funds except to save the life of the mother, rape or incest.

It seems to me that we allow all 50 States to make those decisions. The Supreme Court has said that States can promulgate reasonable rules on abortion. I think that we should allow the District to do the same that we do in our independent States.

The second one is the Domestic Partners Act. Some years ago, I think 4, the District of Columbia passed a Domestic Partners Act which basically allowed for insurance programs to carry domestic partners on the District side and on the private side offered a tax incentive to private business to do so. This bill, as usual, carries a prohibition against the implementation of that.

Once again, I think it is certainly appropriate that the District be allowed, as States do, to make up their own decisions on these matters. As many people have pointed out, we have not been elected to be members of the City Council. Certainly, although Members of this House may disagree with a particular rule or regulation of our own city council, we do not have the responsibilities to curtail that; but here, because of the financing situation, we certainly do.

In all, Mr. Chairman, this is a very fine bill. I also would like to thank the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DAVIS], the chairman of the authorizing committee, and the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia [Ms. NORTON], his ranking member, for their outstanding work. In my view, the next big text for the District is the strategic plan that is developed by the Financial Control Board.

I think that we have to wake up every day and remind ourselves that the Financial Control Board has really stepped in to do a job for Congress, that it is a noncompensated board, it has five District residents who are distinguished Americans in their own right and that they are doing an excellent job. But the next 10 months is going to be a very difficult time for the District, and I think this bill is a step in the right direction.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DAVIS], the chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. DAVIS. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend for yielding me the time. I want to compliment him and the ranking member, the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON], for their yeoman's work on behalf of the District of Columbia in trying to work through what has been a very, very difficult financial crisis.

As we look at the situation today and compare it to even a year ago, we have really made progress. That is sometimes lost sight of in light of the headlines that come out every day with the continuing problems that the city has. But if we go back a year, we have reduced the number of employees in the city by several thousand over what it was a year ago, and that is total reduction. That is not just moving them off budget into enterprise funds and the like. We find that there is a certain level of stability now to city spending, and we are trying to bring some accountability to the managers in the city in terms of what they spend with the advent of the Control Board and the CFO, both of which I think are doing yeoman's work, as well.

We have brought honest answers to the process, something we have not seen for many years here on Capitol Hill in terms of having some level of confidence in the financial numbers that are offered to the Congress by the District of Columbia. I think this has been borne out by the fact that the city is now able to go out to the private financial markets, at least on short-term borrowing. I think we still have a ways to go over the long term, but we have made this in a year trying to work together on a bipartisan basis.

We have had our disagreements along the way, but I think the bill this year represents a very good effort toward bringing some structure and financial stability to the city and I rise in support of it. As the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH] says, we cannot spend our way to prosperity. As the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON] has said, we cannot cut ourselves out of the financial situation.

I think the current issue that remains before this body as it works its way through conference is, the larger the debt, of course, the more that will have to be financed in the off years. I think that has been the intention of the committee, to try to bring down that annual deficit so it would not have to be financed and paid for in later years when the city will be scarce on money.

I also want to just share my concern that we do this in an appropriate fashion so that needed services are not cut. As we work our way through the process, I know we have the assurances of both the chairman and ranking members that this will be done in a constructive manner to continue to work with the Control Board, continuing to work with the chief financial officer of the city to make sure this is done appropriately.

Having said that, this bill adds some money in some critical places. Public safety money is fully funded. We are including $2.8 million for public charter schools which were part of the public school reform legislation that passed the Congress last year. We are restoring salary and overtime pay rollbacks for the police and fire departments, something that is long overdue.

We are spending more on the health of the indigent by increasing the subsidy to District General Hospital. This helps lower the burden across the region, not just in the District of Columbia in terms of the health care costs. Congress has stepped up in the budget this year, I think to try to make sure that we are caring for that in an appropriate manner.

This is important to the region, both Maryland and Virginia, and District residents. We are providing for the repayment to the water and sewer fund of $91 million borrowed by the general fund to pay for their past operating expenditures. These were in the past paid for in a very general sense by the ratepayers, many of them in the suburbs. It would be paid for, instead of being invested in Blue Plains, were spent for some of the city operating budget deficit. So that is in this as well.

We have reached a regional agreement on the authorizing side to make sure this has happened, and that has already passed this body. So we made progress in this region as well. There is one piece of legislation in this that I have, after extensive discussions with the chairman and ranking member who also support it, and that is extending the powers given to the chief financial officer. That was put in originally last year to hire and fire the executive branch of the accounting, budget and financial management personnel during the control period.

We recognize that personnel changes are going to have to be made, and we know where the buck is stopping. We want to give the chief financial officer and the Control Board the appropriate level of responsibility in doing that. With that responsibility comes the authority in some of these cases to make these changes.

In all, I just want to compliment the chairman and ranking member. I think we have all learned a lot over the last year and a half trying to work together toward a very, very difficult problem for this city, this region, and this country. We are making headway. I am hopeful that this bill will be passed through the House and go on to the Senate.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 9 minutes to the distinguished Delegate from the District of Columbia, [Ms. NORTON.]

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the ranking member for yielding me the time. I want to thank him and the chairman of the committee for their very hard work and for quickly disposing of this appropriation.

I thank the chairman as well for meeting with the Mayor and the Chairman of the Control Board before his bill came to committee finally. I thank both Members even as I indicate, as they have not, that I am greatly disappointed in this bill. I am left and the District is left with no alternative, however.

A year ago, Congress established a Financial Authority or control board to help the District move out of insolvency. The Authority here is like the control boards in Philadelphia and New York. By this time, however, those cities have made significantly more progress than D.C. has made. The difference almost entirely is the strategy being used to resuscitate the city's economy. The only strategy the Congress has allowed for D.C. is the downsizing of its government.

New York and Philadelphia returned to solvency through the use of more comprehensive approaches that rebuilt those cities even as they were being downsized. These included new sources of revenue and takeover of functions by their States.

Look now at the first year of the District working with its control board. This first year will be remembered for second-guessing of the board, even after its exhaustive scrubbing of the budget, including deep cuts; a government shutdown of the District requiring the District to pay a full week's salary for locked-out employees; and 7 months delay in receipt of the full Federal payment, driving the District deeper into insolvency.

In these and other actions, the Congress must accept a heavy share of the responsibility for the alarming deterioration of city services and the hastening of taxpayer flight. The District has lost more residents in the first half of the 1990's than it lost in the 1980's with no State to help it out and a Congress that refuses to meet any of its obligations. The city is stranded and it is sinking.

Although this is the Capital of the United States and this body bears constitutional responsibility for this city, Congress has done nothing to help D.C. get back on its feet since the Financial Authority bill was enacted in April 1995. There has been no action whatsoever, even on those matters for which there is 100-percent congressional responsibility. Costs that are the most responsible for bringing the city down, ironically, are not found in the city's dysfunctional bureaucracy but in congressionally mandated State costs. Without action on these congressional responsibilities, the Capital of the United States cannot revive and will not survive.

These include the $2.7 billion in unfunded pension liability, now more than doubled at $5 billion, largely because of interest on the original $2.5 billion. This liability that was incurred exclusively on Congress' watch before home rule.

The District, on the other hand, has been meeting its pension obligations by fully funding these pensions since they were handed to the District in 1980. Over $300 million, or 10 percent, of tax raised revenue goes to pay pensions left unfunded by this body. The administration asked for a small additional sum of $52 million to add to the small $52 million congressional contribution for the District in this year's budget. Even this nominal amount was removed by the Committee on Appropriations.

Is there to be no end to unfairness to the city? Nor has this House responded any better to what should be done for State responsibilities that no city in the United States has ever carried or could possibly carry today. The District has the lowest contribution for Medicaid and is the only city that must pay for the State and county share while one in four residents are on Medicaid.

Such expenses will doom the city to permanent insolvency. More than two-thirds of the States, 37 of them get a higher Federal contribution to Medicaid than the District of Columbia. Even the GAO in recent testimony questioned the wisdom of leaving these costs off the table while trying to revive the District.

My friends, this body is pretending. The cost of the pretense amounts to a sacrifice of the Capital of the United States.

As if to add insult to multiple injuries, this year's appropriation takes a budget already cut over $100 million by the control board and the city and cuts it an additional $60 million.

The cut comes disguised as a $40 million deficit cap that is tied to the city's declining revenues. The cut ignores budget savings of $141 million that the city will realize through layoffs, contracting out of services, reductions in Medicaid spending, welfare reform and procurement reform, just to name a few of the structural initiatives contained in the city's consensus budget.

The monolithic downsizing strategy this body has adopted amounts to no strategy at all. In the appropriation process we are abandoning the central strategy we adopted when we authorized the Financial Authority. For very good reason, this Congress gave the city 4 years to return to solvency. Downsizing needs to be planned and precise or it will take down services with it. We are cutting the budget as we must, but in the process we are slaughtering the city.

Residents who remained in the city through years of management problems are giving up and leaving as services dissolve before they can be fixed because of a speedup in downsizing. This appropriation accelerates the downsizing far faster than the Financial Authority recommended in its objective findings.

As the city moved toward insolvency, I never asked this body to spare it downsizing or cuts. They were clearly necessary. I was the first to step forward to indicate that a control board was necessary. All I have asked is that downsizing be done in a way that is fair to the innocent bystanders. They are my constituents, not the D.C. Government. They are my constituents, our residents, who are second per capita in Federal income taxes. They deserve far better from the city and the Congress than the appropriation before us allows.

Yet I have no choice but to ask Members to approve this appropriation. An appropriation that does harm will do more harm if it is delayed, as it was last year.

However, I take this opportunity to ask my colleagues to make this the last year that the city stands alone, with a Congress that insists, as it should, that the city meet its obligation, while the same Congress ignores its unique responsibilities and the weight of its own heavy hand in keeping the city down. A city left twisting in the wind long enough will fall. If the Capital of the United States falls, the sound will be heard around the world.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I reserve the balance of my time and the right to close.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I will be brief in closing.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank everyone involved for their support in this process and I certainly want to thank the efforts of the authorizing committee and the subcommittee chair, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DAVIS], and the ranking member, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia [Ms. NORTON]. While they may not agree totally with what we have proposed, they are urging support of the bill, and I thank them for that.

There has been some progress, Mr. Chairman. It is difficult to see at times, but I think we need to stop and look and see how far we have come. The financial control board has begun to put some muscle into new management in the District, especially in the chief financial officer position. The CFO is beginning to make his mark in terms of strengthening the discipline of the financial management of the District of Columbia.

We have much better numbers now. For the first time in a long time we are getting into a range where we can count on the numbers that we are getting from the city. The city is moving toward restructuring some of its non-essential services. The control board is proposing a strategic plan which we all await with great anticipation, because that truly will be the path that we follow to take this city out of its crisis.

The deficits are going down. The receiver of the city housing department reports progress. Blue Plains is becoming a regional facility. Spending is under control. High government payrolls are being reduced.

Have we been tough, Mr. Chairman? Yes, we have. But sometimes tough love is required to get the proper outcome. No doubt that we all love this city greatly, all of us. All of us come at it from a different point of view, but this is our Nation's Capital. It is a marvelous place. It is the seat of democracy. It is the envy of the world. We cannot do any less than be tough to get it back on its road to recovery.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I thank my colleagues for their indulgence, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the order of the House of Thursday, July 18, 1996, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may postpone until a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment and may reduce to not less than 5 minutes the time for voting by electronic device on any postponed question that immediately follows another vote by electronic device without intervening business, provided that the time for voting by electronic device on the first in any series of questions shall not be less than 15 minutes.

After the reading of the final lines of the bill, a motion that the Committee of the Whole rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted shall, if ordered by the majority leader or a designee, have precedence over a motion to amend.

Mr. WALSH (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill, through page 32, line 5, be considered as read, printed in the RECORD, and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any amendments to this portion of the bill? If not, the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

PROHIBITION AGAINST USE OF FUNDS FOR ABORTIONS

SEC. 129. None of the funds appropriated under this Act shall be expended for any abortion except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term or where the pregnancy is the result of an act of rape or incest.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any amendments to this portion of the bill?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MS. NORTON

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Ms. NORTON: On page 32, line 7, after "the" insert "Federal".

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 40 minutes and that that time be equally divided.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I do not know that we will need 40 minutes on this.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DIXON. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, as I understand it, the Delegate had suggested, very graciously, that she would be willing to limit debate to 40 minutes; that was the number arrived at. We do not need that much time, but I am not sure how much time she will need on that side.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman from the District of Columbia [Ms. NORTON] is recognized for 20 minutes.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, several people asked to speak. I may not need the full 20 minutes if they, in fact, do not appear.

My amendment would return us to the policy of this body on abortion that was used throughout President Reagan's administration. During each year of his administration, President Reagan signed a bill that prohibited the use of Federal funds in the District of Columbia for abortion services to low-income women except for risk of the life of the mother, rape, and incest.

This put the District in the same boat with every jurisdiction in the country, "Use your funds, not ours," Congress said.

Only in 1988, at the onset of the Bush administration, did the policy change. Even local funds they could not be used until the 103d Congress, when the President signed a bill exactly like the Reagan bill during all his 8 years.

In 1988, leave aside that our residents in the District were not treated as full and equal American citizens in democratic home rule, in representation in the Congress, and in taxation. Now added was the sensitive and abidingly local issue of choice. Here too inequality with all other Americans was to be the order of the day.

Allowing the District the right of all other local jurisdictions leaves in place the Hyde amendment. It will apply to the District as Hyde applies now and as Hyde applies to every other jurisdiction that flies the American flag.

What a small step this would be. In its financial condition, the District is, after all, unlikely to use little, if any, money on abortions for poor women. It needs the option in the rare case where it might decide that it is in the best interest of the woman and of the District to pay for such an abortion. The District has many women who have AIDS, are on drugs or are in deep distress. With the flight of middle-income taxpayers, this group of low-income women grows ever larger.

There is absolutely no reason to deny the District this right, is the rare case, if it so chooses, where it would feel compelled to spend its own money in this way. It is wrong to single out the District in a way that we do not single out San Diego or Bloomington or Syracuse. It is wrong to find yet another way to say to my constituents—you will not be treated as other Americans.

Choice is the law of the land. Choice is the law equally across the entire land, except here where the Congress sits, and except for poor women when an abortion must be paid for because there is no personal fund available to do so.

Mr. Chairman, I ask this body to bring democracy home in this instance. The time has finally come in 1996, when it is highly unlikely that the right would be exercised, to give the District, at least in law, the right that every other jurisdiction has: to afford funds for women to make the choice that only they have the right to make.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

(Mr. WALSH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in opposition to the gentleman's amendment. This bill is different from the other 12 regular appropriations bills in that our bill appropriates all funds for the operations of the District government; all funds, not just Federal funds. That is the way the bill is designed. That is why the abortion language in section 129 of our bill restricts the use of all funds for abortions, except to save the mother's life or in cases of rape or incest. I think that is consistent with our appropriations policies. We are appropriating all funds for this bill.

The abortion language in our bill this year is identical to the language in last year's bill which was signed by the President. It is also identical to the language in the continuing resolutions that the President signed last year.

It is identical to the language in Public Law 104-69 that the President signed on December 22, 1995; to legislation that he signed on January 4, 1996; to legislation that he also signed on January 6, 1996, and to legislation he signed less than 3 months ago on April 26.

While I appreciate the gentlewoman's feelings about home rule, the language in our bill does allow the use of funds for abortions in those cases where the life of the mother is endangered or in the case of rape or incest. I believe it is broad enough to give District officials the discretion they need so that the procedure is not misused.

Mr. Chairman, as I mentioned just a moment ago, the President, less than 3 months ago, signed a bill with language identical to that found in section 129 of this bill. There is no reason for the President to not approve this language which, again, is identical to language he recently approved.

I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on the amendment offered by the gentleman from the District of Columbia.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON], ranking member.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me the time.

This issue of abortion in our society is probably one of the most controversial ones that we have faced in many, many years. There are people who believe in being pro-choice, who personally are opposed to abortion. There are the pro-life people that do not believe in abortion under any circumstances. The case of Roe versus Wade made very clear that abortion was appropriate in the first trimester. A lot of people did not like that. In fact, another case came to the Supreme Court where, generally speaking, pro-life people had prevailed on a State legislative body to restrict that right.

The Supreme Court said, you are absolutely right. States have a right to restrict abortion as long as we deem it to be reasonable restrictions.

Now, most pro-life people applauded that decision. Here we have the District of Columbia, who had initiated their own abortion procedures. But because they allow abortion by their local statutes, Congress is doing what they cannot do to any other State. That is, abortion procedures in the first trimester are appropriate and legal and States, and in this case I would say the District, have a reasonable right to promulgate regulations.

The chairman of this committee points out that, in fact, the President did sign continuing resolutions, and I believe an appropriation bill. But he signed it with great reservation. This is a clear issue of Congress trying to dictate to the citizens of the District on a very personal and controversial matter which the court, the Supreme Court, has said that States, and in this case the District, have a right to promulgate. But merely because the vehicle that is used to fund the District comes through Congress, we want to restrict that right greater than we have the ability to do with any State.

It is on that basis I would ask my colleagues to reject the amendment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank Mr. WALSH for his moral courage and leadership in putting this important language in the underlying bill—the D.C. appropriations bill. The Norton amendment, the pending amendment, would nullify Mr. WALSH's lifesaving legislation and should be defeated.

Let me make it very clear that the only way to ensure Hyde-type protections for the taxpayers is to reject this pro-abortion amendment. The net consequence, the absolutely predictable consequence, if this amendment prevails, is that we will pay for abortions on demand in the District of Columbia.

We have, as a Congress, jurisdiction over the Federal and the congressionally authorized funds and in many parts of this bill that are not being contested we have taken action to limit how certain funds will be spent. So this is hardly a precedent. Home rule isn't absolute.

A moment or two ago, Mr. DIXON said that the Supreme Court's Roe versus Wade permits first trimester abortions in the District of Columbia. That's only part of the tragic holding in Roe. Roe versus Wade did not just allow first trimester abortion on demand. It also allows the slaughter of unborn babies in the second trimester and in many cases in the third trimester as well.

The bottom line, Mr. Chairman, is that we are talking about children at various stages of their development in the District of Columbia whose death, whose killing would be paid for and subsidized by the taxpayer.

Let me remind Members that the Norton amendment wants to subsidize a deed—the act of aborting a baby. Some will try to sanitize this issue and package it as a freedom or liberty. It is not. Abortion is child abuse. And the so-called right to abortion was forced on us by the Supreme Court of the United States. Some day that gross injustice will be reversed. Because all babies, these unborn children, boys, girls, black, white, Hispanic, and Asian, right now are very precious but today they are construed to be persona non grata. It seems to me that we ought to, as a Congress, if we care, if we believe their lives to be precious, do all that is humanly possible to mitigate the possibility of their death. And it seems to me that if we take away the subsidy that actually buys and administers the chemical poison, the salt solutions and the other kinds of lethal drugs that are used to kill the babies, if we take away the subsidy that kills the baby by way of dismemberment of arms and legs and even sections of the child's fragile body are cut and the baby is removed, this is the reality of the deed that the gentleman's amendment would seek to have us give authorization to pay for. If you really take the time to think about what abortion does to the baby, this amendment becomes more repulsive and wrong.

It seems to me that where we can step in and save the life of even one baby, we ought to do it. I take a back seat to no one in this Chamber when it comes to maternal health care and other kinds of assistance for mothers both domestically and internationally. But when it comes to killing unborn babies, we ought to say "no." This amendment would authorize the killing of unborn babies by way of subsidy.

When we used to pay for abortions on demand in the District of Columbia we paid for over 3,000 child killings per year. In 1988, for example, the number of kids destroyed was 3,139.

Vote down this antichild amendment.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON].

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I inadvertently said that I was opposed to the Norton amendment. I meant to say that I supported the gentlewoman's amendment.

I also point out to my good friend, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], that the issue of abortion is one that will not be resolved by adopting this amendment. But the issue of allowing the taxpayers of this district to spend their own money should lie in favor of allowing them to do so.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I want to close now, seeing none of those who asked for time are here.

Mr. Chairman, there is very little to get excited about when we discuss a choice amendment on the District of Columbia appropriation. No one believes that in the state of its finances, what we are going to see is an epidemic of abortions in the District.

This amendment has largely symbolic importance. It says to the District, you are full Americans, you are full citizens, you can spend your money as you like. You can vote for this bill, even if you oppose abortion, because this bill is almost surely not likely to yield abortions because there is no money for abortions in the District. There is little money even for front-line services in the District.

Yet I would think we would use this opportunity to say to the residents of the District, hey, you are full Americans, it is your money, use it the way we use our money in our cities and counties.

I just want to say that the recitation of the bills the President signed last year, including our own, which contained language like this, ought to be understood in light of the President's statement on this bill. In that statement he has said that he is strongly opposed to this language.

The chairman indicates, and I must say that I appreciate, that the language here is like the language in other bills inasmuch as it incorporates life of the mother, rape, and incest. If that is to be the case and if the chairman is to take note of it, there is no reason not to go the rest of the way and make the language the way the language is for the rest of America. What you do with your money is your business, and especially in this year when you are almost guaranteed not to use your money for abortions for poor women.

The people I represent pay the highest taxes in the United States of America. When you combine their State taxes with their Federal taxes, they are No. 1. Put yourself in the position of the people I represent. Put yourself in the position of people who pay the same taxes and, in almost every case, more taxes than the people you represent and imagine how you would feel if a national body tried to tell you how to spend your local funds.

I guarantee my colleagues that if they put themselves to that test, they will vote for my amendment.

I ask that this body approve my amendment and approve the bill as the chairman has brought it to the floor.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

We have no further requests for time on this amendment, and I would close by saying, as I said earlier, that this is an unusual bill in that we appropriate all the funds, both Federal and local, for the District of Columbia. We did not set it up that way, the Constitution did. Therefore, I think in order to be consistent with the government-stated policy on funding abortions, we should stick to the language in section 189 of the bill that says no funds can be used for abortions except to save the mother's life or in cases of rape or incest. So I would strongly urge defeat of this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Norton amendment.

This amendment would simply allow the District to decide whether to use its own locally raised revenues to pay for Medicaid abortions—while still retaining the ban on the use of Federal funds for abortions, except in cases of rape, incest, or to save the life of the mother.

The amendment would properly restore the right of the District of Columbia to decide how its own revenues should be used, as is the case for the States. The concept of home rule is meaningless if Congress can dictate the allocation of local revenues.

To restrict the use of local District revenues for abortions violates the right of the District Government to make its own public health policy. In doing so, Congress is denying District residents the right of self-determination, a right belonging to every other resident of this country.

I urge my colleagues to support the Dixon amendment.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 3845.

I do so not because of the funding amounts specified in the appropriations, although they present difficult questions about the extent to which this Congress is honoring its constitutional and commonsense responsibilities to the District. Rather, my opposition is based on two overreaching and unwarranted interferences by this Congress in the lives of the people of the District. Those are the provisions of sections 129 and 130, which prohibit the use of Federal and local funds for abortion and for domestic partner benefits.

It is time for this Congress to end its unnecessary interference with the District government's arrangements with its employees relating to health and other benefits. H.R. 3845 continues the shortsighted and narrow-minded prohibition on using any funds—even those raised within the District through local taxation—to extend health benefits to the domestic partners of District employees.

The District should be free to pursue, through negotiations with its represented employees or otherwise, the same policies that many other municipal governments and businesses have successfully implemented. Extending the same benefits to domestic partners of employees as are enjoyed by the spouses of employees can be a cost-effective way to retain capable workers.

In my district, the city of Portland, Multnomah County and Portland Public Schools have all negotiated domestic partner benefits packages with their employees. About 2 percent of the work force have enrolled their unmarried domestic partners as beneficiaries under this program, and the modest additional cost was offset by other benefit plan changes. As a result, these public employers, at no cost to the public, have been able to retain highly valued and productive employees to do the public's business.

Gay and lesbian workers know discrimination and bias when they see it. If they are capable, motivated workers, they will look for a workplace that values them for the work they do, rather than penalizing them. Mr. Speaker, if we are operating on the premise that the District needs the best and the brightest to turn this city around, then let us not tie the District government's hands with this regressive, counterproductive and mean-spirited restriction.

To my second point: There is also no sound reason for this Congress to interfere with the fundamental reproductive rights of women. Nonetheless, Congress has interfered prohibiting the use of Federal funds for most categories of abortion. In this measure, this body continues the even more outrageous practice of prohibiting the District government from using its own, locally raised funds to provide medical services that the Supreme Court of the United States has held are constitutionally protected.

The amendment offered by the gentleman from the District would have restored at least some of the ability of the District government to fund necessary abortions for poor women. Its rejection makes the prohibition in this measure an unacceptable limitation upon the reproductive rights of those women. I regret that I must therefore vote to reject the measure as a whole.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HOYER. First, Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of the District of Columbia appropriations bill. I want to commend the chairman and Congressman DIXON for working in a bipartisan fashion to craft a good bill. I am pleased that at my request, the bill contains language dealing with two important issues which affect the District and the greater Washington Metropolitan area.

The bill contains report language which expresses Congress' strong intent for the District of Columbia to repay over $80 million diverted from Blue Plains to other District programs. This substantial loss of funds has led to serious maintenance and plant operations problems at the facility. Moreover, there remains a threat to the sewage ratepayers and residents of the Metropolitan area for having untreated sewage flowing down the Potomac River. There is also a serious threat to the fragile environmental conditions of the waterways. In order to prevent danger to life or environment, return of the funds is necessary so that the Blue Plains facility can return to safe and efficient operation.

My top priority continues to be protection of human health and ensuring proper clean up and preservation of the waterways and wildlife in the Chesapeake Bay Basin including the Potomac, Anacosta, and Patuxent Rivers. Having sufficient funding for Blue Plains will allow the plant to operate safely and efficiently and eliminate threats to life and the environment. Therefore, the return of the funds is critical.

I believe, as do others, that one of the best ways to resolve the operational and management problems at Blue Plains is to restore the funds taken from the Blue Plains account and prohibit the further transfer of any additional funds. Therefore, at my request, the committee included report language in the fiscal year 1996 District of Columbia appropriations bill which asked the financial responsibility and management assistance authority to address how the District planned to restore funds taken from the Blue Plains budget and the timing for that restoration.

In its fiscal year 1997 budget and financial plan, the District has agreed to pay back $21.5 million over the next 4 years in order to replenish funds diverted from Blue Plains. This agreement is reflected in the bill and it is our expectation that this agreement will be honored.

Second, I am pleased with the funding for the D.C. fire department in this bill. This funding level consistent with the request of the D.C. City Council and the control board, is sufficient to end the practice of rotated closings of companies which have placed areas throughout the city at risk every day.

This bill will also provide $4 million for firefighting apparatus which will be used to begin the process of modernizing the firefighting fleet in order to provide a sufficient arsenal to protect the residents, workers, and visitors of the District of Columbia.

Mr. Chairman, an issue which continues to plague the fire department is the understaffing of firefighters. I want to commend Chairman WALSH for adding language to this bill, at my request, instructing the District to fill the 87 vacancies that currently exist in the fire department. The city currently ranks last among the 25 largest cities in the United States in on-duty fire suppression, and second in total fire and rescue alarms per 100,000 people.

The understaffing of the department and the rotated closings of up to eight companies a day poses a public safety threat to those who work and reside in the District and is financially irresponsible. This bill is an important step forward in making the District's fire department one of the finest in the Nation and I commend the committee for its efforts.

Again, I want to thank Chairman WALSH and Congressman DIXON for their work and support. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 3845, the Fiscal Year 1997 Appropriations Act for the District of Columbia.

Let me begin by complimenting my subcommittee chairman, Congressman WALSH, on his excellent work on this bill, as well as the ranking member, Mr. DIXON, for all of his work. Many months of hearings, meetings, and negotiations, have resulted in the strong, bipartisan bill before the House today.

H.R. 3845 appropriates $717.8 million for the Federal payment to the District of Columbia. The bill's funding levels are identical to last year's appropriation, except for an additional $5.7 million that the committee provided to reimburse the city for the upcoming 1997 Presidential inauguration.

I do believe that the approach the Appropriations Committee has taken in this bill will move the city toward financial stability. This bill caps the city's fiscal 1997 budget deficit at $40 million. This represents an amount that is $60 million less than what the city and the control board forecast. I believe that this deficit cap represents great progress in the District's path toward stability, allowing for responsible spending to meet the needs of city residents without affecting essential services.

H.R. 3845 also approves a budget blueprint for the city that was reached by the Financial Control Board, the D.C. Mayor and City Council and seems like a responsible attempt to control spending. I am pleased that the budget blueprint that H.R. 3845 approves earmarks the full budget request of $1 billion for local law enforcement, fire, and emergency services personnel along with the judicial and corrections system. While the District needs to control spending, I firmly believe that reductions should not be taken from an already understaffed public safety force.

Overall, the priorities reflected in the blueprint promote education, public safety, public works, and economic development. I would urge the control board to continue its close scrutiny of District financial matters to assure that the District adheres to the sound fiscal policy that this bill promotes.

While I strongly support this bill today, I continue to have concerns in two areas not addressed by this appropriations bill. First, I have strong reservations about the control board's recommendation for Congress to authorize long-term deficit borrowing for the District. The city has proposed borrowing $500 million over 15 years to pay off the accumulated debt and finance future deficits. I continue to be concerned that deficit borrowing would cost current and future taxpayers over $750 million in interest costs alone.

Second, although a great deal of progress has been made, the 4-year financial control plan has not been approved by the committee. I would urge the completion of this long-term plan so that Congress, city leaders, and control board members may begin review and negotiations for essential structural changes in the city's management that must be made in order to reach long-term stability.

Again, I rise in support of H.R. 3845 and I would urge all of my colleagues to support this bill.

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, this past March, Mayor Marion Barry appeared at a hearing held by the D.C. Subcommittee and testified that, because of the failure of Congress to enact the District's fiscal year 1996 budget until seven months into that fiscal year, the District was in worse financial shape than in March 1995, when the Congress established the D.C. Financial Control Board to bring about the District's financial recovery.

I found the Mayor's remarks to be distressing news—particularly in light of the fact that the District had, as the Congress directed, successfully cut its spending and achieved significant workforce reductions. The fiscal year 1995 appropriations bill mandated that the District's spending be cut by $140 million and that 2,000 positions be eliminated from its workforce. A subsequent audit established that both of these requirements had not only been met but had been exceeded. In fact, the District cut a total of 5,600 positions, and reduced spending by $477 million.

Today, 4 months since the Mayor's bleak assessment, the situation is still very bad, but it appears there is now some prospect for improvement. Even though the District government remains burdened with an accumulated budget deficit of almost $500 million, and its fiscal year 1996 revenues are $116 million below what had been expected, last week there was an encouraging development.

District officials traveled to Wall Street where they were able to secure a $220 million short-term loan from an investment firm to help meet the immediate cash needs. This is significant because it was the decline of the District's credit rating to junk bond status which triggered the need for the Financial Control Board. This loan signals recognition that the District of Columbia has begun to take the steps needed to restore its solvency and that it may soon be able to access the market for debt restructuring and the financing of much needed capital projects.

Further, the bill before us, which incorporates the District's fiscal year 1997 budget and elements of its multi-year financial plan also signals administrative progress which enabled the work on this package to proceed in a more timely and a less contentious manner than last year.

The Mayor, city council, and the Financial Control Board worked closely and cooperatively together until they achieved a consensus package which sets forth a series of revenue initiatives and spending reductions designed to produce a balanced budget by fiscal year 1999. I commend them for their efforts and encourage them to continue tackling the tough problems which lie ahead in this same manner.

Mr. Chairman, it is unfortunate that the good work done by these local officials was not accepted by the chairman of the D.C. Appropriations Subcommittee. Instead, he chose to require an additional $40 million in cuts, which will unquestionably have a negative impact on city services should it be retained. I sincerely hope that the Senate will support the locally developed consensus budget and that a higher spending mark will be agreed to in conference.

This one reservation notwithstanding, I urge the approval of this appropriations measure because I believe that, overall, it will aid the revitalization of our Nation's Capitol.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia [Ms. NORTON].

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. TRAFICANT

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Amendment offered by Mr. TRAFICANT: Page 52, after line 23, insert the following new section:

SEC. 146. (a) COMPLIANCE WITH BUY AMERICAN ACT.—None of the funds made available in this Act may be expended by an entity unless the entity agrees that in expending the funds the entity will comply with the Buy American Act (41 U.S.C. 10a-10c).

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS; REQUIREMENT REGARDING NOTICE.—

(1) PURCHASE OF AMERICAN-MADE EQUIPMENT AND PRODUCTS.—In the case of any equipment or product that may be authorized to be purchased with financial assistance provided using funds made available in this Act, it is the sense of the Congress that entities receiving the assistance should, in expending the assistance, purchase only American-made equipment and products to the greatest extent practicable.

(c) PROHIBITION OF CONTRACTS WITH PERSONS FALSELY LABELING PRODUCTS AS MADE IN AMERICA.—If it has been finally determined by a court or Federal agency that any person intentionally affixed a label bearing a "Made in America" inscription, or any inscription with the same meaning, to any product sold in or shipped to the United States that is not made in the United States, the person shall be ineligible to receive any contract or subcontract made with funds made available in this Act, pursuant to the debarment, suspension, and ineligibility procedures described in sections 9.400 through 9.409 of title 48, Code of Federal Regulations.

Mr. TRAFICANT (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, this is an amendment that has been offered to all the appropriation bills, and I am going to thank all the appropriators for, over the years, including this language into the bills. I think it encourages people to whenever possible in utilizing the scarce procurement dollars of the U.S. Government, to attempt to buy wherever possible American-made products.

In addition, anybody who would, in fact, place a false, fraudulent made-in-America label on any product that is sold to our Government through any of these contracted agreements would be prohibited from bidding on further contracts.

So I appreciate the fact the appropriators have included this language. It is that standard language that has been on other appropriation bills.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New York.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] for yielding. We have examined the amendment, Mr. Chairman, find it to be in perfectly good order, find it to be consistent with the wishes of the subcommittee, and have no objections to the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the support of the subcommittee Chair.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the gentleman from California, the distinguished ranking member.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, the minority has no objection to this amendment. It is a good amendment.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, with that I hope wherever possible when we expend U.S. taxpayer dollars it is on American-made products from American workers who pay our taxes.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments?

If not, the Clerk will read the last two lines of the bill.

This Act may be cited as the District of Columbia Appropriations Act, 1997.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I move that the Committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. WALSH) having assumed the chair, Mr. HASTINGS of Washington, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 3845), making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1997, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 5 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore [Mr. GUTKNECHT] at 5 o'clock and 31 minutes p.m.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1997

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Thursday, July 18, 1996, and rule XXIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 3845.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 3845) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1997, and for other purposes, with Mr. HASTINGS of Washington in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole House rose earlier today, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICENT] had been disposed of, and the bill had been read through page 52, line 25.

Are there further amendments to the bill?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GUTKNECHT

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Amendment offered by Mr. GUTKNECHT: Page 52, after line 23, insert the following new section:

SEC. 146. The amount otherwise provided under the heading "Federal Payment to the District of Columbia" for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1997, is hereby reduced by 1.9 percent.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes and that the time be equally divided.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. GUTKNECHT] for 10 minutes.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, this is the next installment of the amendments that I have been offering to all of the appropriation bills since the House passed the joint budget conference committee report, and as my colleagues will probably recall, under that report this House for the first time in the last 4 years is actually going to allow the deficit of the United States to go up in the next fiscal year, and many of us who were upset upon learning that went back to our offices and tried to figure out what it was that perhaps we could do on a constructive basis to recover that fumble. And what we came up with was the notion that if we offered a 1.9 percent across-the-board reduction on the balance of the appropriation bills that were still out there, we could recover $4.1 billion in additional Federal spending.

So I offer this amendment in good faith even though I serve in the District of Columbia Oversight Subcommittee, and I appreciate the work that the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH] and his subcommittee have done in terms of controlling the level of spending and trying to get the fiscal house in order not only for the District of Columbia, but for all of the taxpayers of the United States.

But, Mr. Chairman, I think, in fairness, if we are going to offer this to one appropriation bill, we have to offer it to all of them. This amendment that I am offering today affects the $660 million that goes to the District of Columbia in the way of a Federal payment. It does not affect the Federal contributions to employees' retirement accounts, it does not affect the rest of the $5 billion which flows through the District of Columbia general fund, and it does not unfairly pick on the District of Columbia.

We have offered this same amendment to all appropriation bills since the approval of the joint budget resolution conference committee report. We are asking the District of Columbia government to make the same kind of sacrifice that we have asked the rest of the Federal Government to make, a simple 1.9 percent reduction.

As I said earlier, I serve on the District of Columbia Subcommittee, I appreciate the work that that District of Columbia Subcommittee has done, and I appreciate the work that the financial oversight board has been doing to try and put the District of Columbia back on a financial path toward solvency. But I believe that if we are going to be fair and if we are going to be honest and if we are going to be consistent in what we do around here, I have to offer this amendment in good faith.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. WALSH asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the gentleman's amendment. While I know it is with the best of intentions, looking toward reducing our deficit by reducing our Federal spending, I want to assure him that we have made every effort to do so, in fact, have been accused of asking for too many spending cuts of the District of Columbia.

The Federal payment to the District of Columbia is a contribution that is made in lieu of taxes to the District government. The Federal Government occupies roughly 45 percent of the land area of this city. This payment is our contribution to the local community for the police, fire, and other services that are provided not only to Congress, but to the Federal offices and foreign embassies and various groups that have received congressionally chartered tax exemptions, not to mention the millions and millions of tourists and other visitors who come here either to see the beauty of our Nation's Capital or to participate in government or in business.

The second point I want to make is that the amount we are recommending in this bill for fiscal year 1997 is exactly the same amount that was appropriated in each of the last 2 years. In other words, this will make it 3 years in a row with no increase—a flat Federal payment appropriation for the past 3 years for the District of Columbia.

Third, the Constitution places the responsibility for the District under the Congress, and it is our duty to provide a fair contribution for the operation of the seat of our national Government.

Mr. Chairman, the District is in the midst of a financial crisis. In response to that crisis, this Congress last year passed legislation to create a financial control board. That board has been in place a little over a year and is making some progress in grappling with the situation.

I would say to my good friend and colleague from Minnesota that we are appropriating exactly the amount authorized by his committee. The authorizers told us this is the amount that we should spend, and in respect to that committee and in respect to the process, we are appropriating at exactly that level. If the gentleman wishes to change that authorization, he is on the committee that can make that change.

So, Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on the gentleman's amendment. We should not shirk our responsibility to our Nation's Capital by reducing the Federal payment to a level below what it was 3 years ago.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SOUDER].

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Chairman, first off I want to congratulate the gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH] and the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DAVIS] also in the authorizing committee, for their hard work. Washington, DC, is our national Capital. It is seen across this country as a symbol of our Nation, it is seen throughout the world as a symbol of our Nation, and its efforts to try to improve the situation there and to shepherd it are to be commended, and as my colleagues well know, as we go through this amendment process, these amendments are not aimed at any particular committee or any particular approach.

I also serve on the authorizing committee, the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight, and as my colleagues know, authorizing numbers are a cap, they are not the actual amount. That is up to the appropriating committee what they spend, and when we got our authorizing cap, we did not realize that the budget was going to have a bump up in the second year. That came later in the whole negotiating process, and some of the appropriating numbers got bumped up in dealing with the President and with the Senate, and we did not come to Congress to watch the deficit go up our second year here. We made a commitment to the American people that that deficit was going to go down. And we did better than expected last year. Now we have a challenge to meet.

One of our concerns as fellow Republicans is that some of the rhetoric that has been used against our 1.9 percent amendment is potentially digging our party into a trap. Next year our discretionary spending is supposed to go down 4 percent in actual dollars. Non-defense spending is supposed to go down 4 percent in our own budget that we voted for, yet we constantly hear every time we bring up this amendment, "Oh, there's nothing that can be cut, there's nothing that can be reduced." If there is nothing that can be reduced, how in the world are we going to reduce things 4 percent next year?

Every time we bring this up, we hear over and over that, oh, we are going to wipe out this, we are going to wipe out that, and if we are not careful, we are going to hoist ourselves on our own rhetoric and dig ourselves into a hole. The fact is that the budget deficit goes up, I wish we could target it more precisely, I wish we could have worked it out through the different appropriating committees to be fair and rather than doing a 1.9 percent, but at this point since we do not have a lockbox that works, this is our only way to have the budget deficit not go up the second year.

Any my friends on the Democratic side of the aisle, this is not aimed at the District of Columbia. I commend not only the delegate from the District of Columbia [Ms. NORTON] and many of the others for their efforts, but quite frankly we did not control the House for 40 years. We have a terrible deficit that we have to get control of, that we were making progress, and we are very nervous that this step backward that we are doing, ever so slight a step, but nevertheless a step, is in the wrong direction, and the American people sent many of us here because they were tired of hearing "tomorrow, tomorrow, tomorrow." They want to see it happen now, and this is our only way we have to express our frustration not only with our own leadership, but our frustration with the way Congress works.

Every program has some benefits, every spending has some benefits, but we do not have any money. Even at the extreme it will take 7 years to balance our budget on an annual basis. Households do not have that choice, businesses do not have that choice, State governments do not have that choice, local governments do not have that choice, yet every time we try to reduce it just 1.9 percent it is always too much.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume to comment on my colleague's remarks.

We have made, I think, tremendous progress in reducing our deficit spending. This Congress reduced discretionary spending by $56 billion last year, a remarkable and astounding feat, given past performance, and no one in this body is more committed to reducing deficit spending or reducing our deficits than I. We have, I think, made great effort here to reduce the projected deficit by an additional $59 million or 60 percent to bring this budget closer to balance. It may take another year before we get there, but we are heading in the right direction.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. DIXON], the ranking member of the committee.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding this time to me, and I rise in opposition to this amendment.

Every day we open the newspaper or turn on TV we see a problem that needs to be fixed in the District of Columbia. We need to restore the infrastructure to the water system here. Public health, in my personal view, is in a crisis in the District of Columbia. And public safety, even 60 Minutes is now paying attention to it.

The gentleman from Minnesota seems to say that because he offered this amendment on 12 other bills that he must offer it on this bill. I would suggest to the body that we respond to him the same way that we did on the other 12 bills and reject this amendment.

Mr. Chairman, as I said earlier, I do have some regrets about having to offer this amendment, but I think it needs to be put in perspective in terms of how much money is actually spent here in the District of Columbia.

The per capita total spending, for example, in States like Nevada, is $4,900. Here in the District it is $9,954. There is waste. They could reduce spending by 1.9 percent without dramatically affecting public safety and the waterworks and so forth.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana [Ms. HOSTETTLER], my freshman colleague.

(Mr. HOSTETTLER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this amendment to the fiscal year 1997 District of Columbia appropriations bill to decrease funding in the bill by 1.9 percent across the board. I believe that this is the seventh time we have come to the floor to offer this amendment. While we have not been successful with our previous efforts, we are not discouraged. When it comes to protect the financial future of this country's children, we must be tireless.

While many come to the Chamber and criticized the budget resolution for increasing the deficit, few of us supported these efforts to regain that extra spending. Before we decide that we just can't resist the temptation to spend these few extra dollars—those few extra dollars that represent the thousands of hours of hard work performed by hard working folks in my district—we should think about the financial burden we are placing on our children.

This amendment will trim less than 2 percent—just two pennies from every dollar of discretionary spending in this appropriations bill. The District receives approximately $717 million in the form of a Federal payment, a payment to the teachers', firefighters', police, and judges' retirement fund, and a payment for this 1997 inauguration. Included among the reasons that the District receives the Federal payment is the notion that a large percentage of the city's land is owned by the Federal Government. In actuality, just over 26 percent of the city's property is owned by the Federal Government. However, 68 percent of Alaska is owned by the Federal Government, 64 percent of Utah is owned by the Federal Government, and a whopping 83 percent of the State of Nevada is owned by the Federal Government. At the same time, Alaskans receive $1,755 per capita in Federal revenues; Utah residents receive $634 in per capita Federal revenues; and Nevada residents receive just $547. District residents, on the other hand, receive $3,898 per capita in Federal revenues. When we consider these facts, a 1.9 percent decrease in the Federal payment seems like a small amount to ask for. I can assure you, Mr. Chairman, that I do not believe this is the most perfect solution for cutting $4 billion from the appropriations bills, and I can assure you that this is not being done to target any specific appropriations bill or any specific program—but this is a solution that will be shared by all. I asked everybody in this body—from both sides of the aisle—who is serious about staying on that real path toward a balanced budget to support our amendment.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia [Ms. NORTON].

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

I am inclined to simply say, "Enough already." Mr. Chairman, look at this week's U.S. News and World Report. The National Capital, the gentleman's capital, has become a national daily controversy. You cannot separate yourself from that.

There is a reason why the chairman of the committee on which you serve and the chairman of the subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations oppose this bill. This is not an appropriation we are dealing with; this is a city we are dealing with. It is a city that is insolvent.

These across-the-board cuts have been offered before in the Congress, but never for the District of Columbia appropriation. There is a reason for it. It is a complicated organism we are dealing with here. It is down on its knees, going, going, gone.

The Federal payment has not increased in 5 years. For the third year in a row the chairman has required a cut in the District's payment. Mr. Chairman, the PILOT we have here, PILOT, the payment in lieu of taxes, keeps us from building on the most valuable and most useful land in the city, right in the middle of the city.

Let me tell the Members something: Congress has not paid its taxes recently, because the PILOT has not been increased in 5 years. Before that, until 1991, it had not been increased in 5 years.

Mr. Chairman, we have been using a monolithic strategy to downsize the District of Columbia. We have been using that even before the 104th Congress came into place. It is going down so fast that the taxpayers are picking up and leaving at a rate that should make your hair stand on end.

I have not called for an end of downsizing or an end of cuts, but after a control board and a Committee on Appropriations have looked closely at a city that is on the verge of dying and cut and said no more cuts, it ill behooves any of us to come to this floor and, shall we say, third-guess them on what should be done.

The 1.9-percent cut, you are not selling anything, I do not know why you do not say 2 percent cut and round off this figure, the 2-percent cut I think is sincerely offered, and it is sincerely received.

I ask Members to note the difference between an ordinary appropriation and a city in the deepest possible trouble. I ask Members to realize that the 2-percent cut has more than been made by, first, the control board, then the subcommittee, then the Committee on Appropriations, and now, it would appear, by the full body here. Please vote against this amendment.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to my colleague, the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN].

Mr. NEUMANN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I serve on this committee, and I have the greatest respect for our committee chairman and for the ranking minority member and for all the work that has been done here. However, when we get done looking at all of these priorities individually, we have to come back to the fact that we have a higher priority, and that is to do what is right for the future of our country.

We are $5.2 trillion in debt. The time has come for us to do what is right for future generations of Americans and get to a balanced budget. This is simply a small step in the right direction for the future of this great country of ours. That is what this is all about.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. HORN].

Mr. HORN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I particularly praise the chairman of the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia of the Committee on Appropriations and the chairman of the authorizing committee, the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. DAVIS]. Both are doing an outstanding job, and are the hardest workers in this Congress.

I have a high regard for my friend, the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. GUTKNECHT], on the committee on which I serve, but I must oppose his amendment. I think enough. We have cut budgets as much as we reasonably can.

Washington must remain a beautiful world capital. It is a beautiful world capital, but there are a couple of things I would like to ask a question of the chairman about, to see if we could change. That is, driving around town yesterday, I found numerous stoplights never replaced, crossing walk lights never replaced, potholes never filled. I think that is the impression every single visitor to Washington gets.

If we are going to put in this Federal contribution, can we at least get the District Department of Public Works to do something about simple matters like that, that do affect life and death?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HORN. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, in response to the gentleman's questions, we are all very much aware of all of these problems in the city. I would remind my colleague that these did not just happen overnight. The bridges and roads and infrastructure and police cars and fire engines have been running on basically empty for years. There has been no investment in the schools. The city's capital program basically does not exist.

The fact is, the District of Columbia's budget is over $5 billion for a city of 550,000 people. The State of South Carolina, with 3½ million people, has a budget of $4 billion. So it would seem that there is enough money.

We have discussed this with the city officials and have urged them to spend money on these public works projects. Basically the funds in this bill are at their discretion to spend, but we do strongly urge them to make these structural repairs and changes to turn the District around from its downward spiral.

Mr. HORN. If I might suggest to the chairman of the Committee, if he would condition the Federal payment, I think they would move a lot faster.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance on my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. GUTKNECHT] is recognized for 1½ minutes.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Chairman, I will end this debate the way I began. I do respect the work that is done on the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia of Committee on Appropriations for the District of Columbia. This is a very serious problem. But I would have to agree with my colleague, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOSTETTLER], who spoke earlier. The problem is not necessarily that there is not enough tax money flowing through the District of Columbia.

On a per capita basis, if we compare the schools, for example, how much we spend back in Minnesota on our public schools, something like $5,600. Here in the District of Columbia, by some estimates, it is almost $10,000. The problem is not that we are not spending enough money, but the District and the Federal Government, as oversight, have not been ensuring that those moneys are spent properly.

Mr. Chairman, what this amendment is really about is keeping our promises of last year. As the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. SOUDER] said, if we cannot cut 1.9 percent this year, how are we going to cut 4 percent next year? Balancing the budget is not what you do next year, it is not what you do 2 years from now, it is what you do this year.

I think we have to keep faith with what we told the voters 2 years ago. I think we have to keep faith with our children. This is about generational equity, it is not about whether potholes are going to be filled in Washington, DC. They have not been filled in the past and perhaps they will not be filled in the future. But we can balance the Federal budget, if everybody is willing to tighten their belts just a little bit.

If we take 1.9 percent across-the-board and we compare it to a haircut, and what we are talking about is giving the bureaucracy a slight haircut, it is like cutting your hair about one-eighth of an inch. Most people would not even notice the difference.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. WALSH] is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Chairman, just to sum up, we certainly have worked very hard to try to get this bill to where it is today. Basically it is a bipartisan bill. Not everyone is happy with it.

Is it the right amount of Federal funds? I believe it is. If we were to reduce another $12 million, $13 million, the District could take that from wherever they decide to take it. We just put $15 million back in for the fire department. I would hate to think that is where it would come from.

The fact is this $660 million Federal payment is the amount that was authorized, and is the amount included in our 602(b) allocation. I think it is the right amount, and I would strongly urge a "no" vote on the Gutknecht amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. GUTKNECHT].

The question was taken; and the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of Thursday, July 18, 1996, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. GUTKNECHT] will be postponed.

Are there further amendments?

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of May 12, 1995, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Illinois [Mrs. COLLINS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

ON THE DEATH OF CAPTAIN KEVORKIAN IN CRASH OF TWA FLIGHT 800

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I had the last special order on Thursday, or maybe it was the next to the last. I had just been told that I had a constituent from my district that had died on TWA flight 800. I stood at this very microphone at the Speaker's desk and said that sometime over the weekend I would find out if it was a baby, a young child with his mom and dad, or traveling alone, maybe; a teenager; whether it might be a stewardess, one of the crew. I said the tragic news might be someone that lived in Anaheim or Santa Ana, CA, one of the small parts of about 10 other cities that I have, like Orange or Tuscan or Westminster, or I said it could be from my own town of Garden Grove.

Mr. Speaker, about 24 hours after I spoke, I found out that my constituent who died in that terrible, horrific accident was a male. He was from my hometown of Garden Grove, and he was the pilot, Captain Kevorkian. I remember being on a TWA flight and this captain coming back during the short break at altitude, coming back to say hello to me, tell me that he was a neighbor just a few blocks away, and I teased him about his name, because of the infamous Dr. Kevorkian.

I could not have been more shocked. There are towns like Montoursville, PA, that have been just shattered by this, but I will now proceed to find out if Captain Kevorkian was a military pilot or if he learned to fly as a young man, hanging around what we used to call the gas pit flyers. They would beg rides until they got enough money up to take some pilot training lessons, and then find somebody that would sponsor them. More and more of our pilots, as we downsize our military, are coming from such programs.

But this was a sharp pilot that would have gotten on the radio immediately if a small device had caught fire on the aircraft, as happened with ValuJet down in Florida, that crashed into the Everglades. This was just such a catastrophic accident that the odds are narrowing almost to zero that a plane of the size of a 747 and with its excellent flight safety record could possibly have had some juxtaposition of events to cause this massive explosion.

Just as I left the news to come out here, they have located what they think is the fuselage, four more bodies. They still have not reached the halfway point of 115 remains out of 230. I think what we are going to have to do to play our constitutional role is have Mr. Clinton come up here, close these doors, as we did once on Nicaragua, and once on a story that a nation had gotten nuclear weapons, and we are still not sure about the story, and that we have to have a closed session, with all the guards guarding all the exits, and have the Senators come over here and have the Commander-in-Chief take the well, and with 534, now with Bill Emerson's tragic passing, with 534 Members, decide a course of action, a direct course of action; that if our FBI and our international investigators narrow it down to a few mass serial assassins, as we did with the two people that Qadhafi is still hiding in Libya, that this Congress will talk it down with Mr. Clinton and give him the go-ahead that we will support him for the type of direct action that Ronald Reagan took against Libya shortly after the LaBelle disco bombing on April 5, 1986.

We have to pull together as a country and we cannot let these people flounder the way the families from Pan American 103 have suffered over these years since that ghastly Christmas week. And we cannot do to these people what we did to my friend, David Jacobson, one of the hostages in the Iranian Embassy, excuse me, in the Lebanon hostage crisis, or what we did to the 52 people that it finally came down to in Iran, held in our embassy. We cannot try to cut deals behind the scenes to give them American taxpayer money out of our Treasury to make them shut up so they will not pursue legal redress in the international courts of this dangerous Earth.

I think it is time for all of us to come together and take direct action against this type of ghastly terrorist atrocity.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from the District of Columbia [Ms. NORTON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

[Mr. BURTON of Indiana addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.]

TEENAGE PREGNANCY PREVENTION

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Carolina [Mrs. CLAYTON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, we care about our young people, and contrary to what some believe, they care about themselves.

Most of our young people want to be positive and want to be productive.

Most of our young people want to join in the effort to begin to end the cycle of teenage pregnancy.

How can we begin to end the cycle of teenage pregnancy?

By insuring that our young people can get an education, can get a job, can have a career, can have a chance, and have confidence in themselves.

And, one of the best ways to achieve these important goals is to make sure that young people learn about the impact premature pregnancy has on the lives of those who face that problem.

Learning about the impact of premature pregnancy is important for boys too, not just girls.

All teenagers must take responsibility to prevent adolescent pregnancies.

Young people need to learn about school-based health clinics, health departments and other places where they and their parents can seek help and advice.

They need information on the physical and social effects of premature pregnancy.

Most importantly, our young people must learn about choices, how to make them, where they can lead and why it is important to postpone sexual involvement.

Congress has a responsibility to make sure our young people have real choices and a real chance.

There is currently a National Campaign to Prevent Teenage Pregnancy. The goal of the campaign is to reduce the rate of teenage pregnancy by one-third in 10 years.

That is an achievable goal.

That is a reasonable goal.

It is a campaign we can win.

It is a campaign we must win.

It is a campaign that all of us should join—young and old, male and female, rich and not so rich, Democrats, Republicans, and Independents.

Every 60 seconds in America, a child is born to a teen mother. The increase in teenage childbearing is alarming.

More than 30 percent of all out-of-wedlock births is to teenagers, below age 20.

We can not and must not ignore the reality that many young men and women are increasingly delaying marriage until their mid-twenties and beyond—but not sexual activity.

Because young men and women are becoming sexually experienced at younger ages without the benefit of marriage and sex education, there are proportionally more teenagers exposed to the risk of unmarried pregnancy and related health problems.

Sadly, according to a recent report to Congress, the young women and men who become teen parents have few expectations, few ties to community institutions, few adult mentors and role models, and too much spare time.

Too many live in communities where crime and drug use are common, where dropping out of school and chronic unemployment are even more common.

In my opinion these causes can be reduced to the lack of hope and confidence in the future by our teenagers.

Yet, our society can not endure this human burden.

We must, therefore, implement pregnancy prevention programs that educate and support school age youths and their family members, particularly those in high risk situations.

And, we must implement comprehensive social and health services, with an emphasis on pregnancy prevention.

Recently, this House refused to spend $30 million, requested by the President, to help control and prevent the alarming growth of teenage pregnancies. Yet, we spend $6.4 billion annually on programs once teenagers are pregnant and have children.

We will not spend one-half of 1 percent to prevent a problem that costs us more than 200 times that amount in the long run.

And what did this House do when faced with this illogical spending?

In the welfare reform bill that passed just last week, families that have additional children will be denied cash welfare payments.

And, unmarried children under the age of 18 who have a child will be denied cash welfare payments under certain conditions.

Why are some insisting upon punishing children rather than preventing pregnancies, especially among our adolescents?

Teen pregnancy is a near-certain predictor of poverty.

There is a connection with the fact that every 32 seconds a baby is born in poverty.

If all of the teenage mothers had been able to delay becoming pregnant until they were older and financially able to take care of a baby, the resources we use on them could be used in other productive ways—for education, for recreation programs, for jobs and job training, for housing, and for health services.

And, we should not forget that teen pregnancy is also a strong predictor of a new generation of disadvantage.

It should trouble each of us that America is first in the world in health technology, yet 18th in infant mortality.

This Nation is first in the world in defense expenditures, yet 19th in low-birthweight babies.

The actions and inactions of Congress in the weeks and months ahead will reflect the choice we have made for the future.

A choice between what is good for the many or good for a few—between communities that are average and those that are exceptional—between going forward or falling backwards—between individual comfort and functioning families.

And if our children are not able to contribute and are not able to properly and fully develop as adults, it will cost us more to respond to their dysfunctions than it will cost us to prevent them.

We can pay less now, Mr. Speaker, or we can pay more later.

We can construct a budget with a vision for the future, or we can destroy a budget with blindfolds of the past.

I urge my colleagues to look to the future.

WELFARE REFORM

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. EWING). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MICA] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, there have been comments made in the last few days about the proposed reforms that the House passed and the Republicans have promoted. The comments have also dealt with the welfare reforms that we have passed might hurt children, and we have heard comments about some of our reforms in welfare that may in fact, the opinion of some folks, say that we may hurt children.

Mr. Speaker, I would not support legislation that would hurt our Nation's children. But I would submit, Mr. Speaker, that our current welfare system is in fact destroying the lives of millions and millions of children. Welfare which in fact was designed to create a safety net has in fact trapped millions of children in a pitiful web and their families in a pitiful web.

Let us just look at it for a second. Our current system of welfare has destroyed in fact the traditional family structure, so that children do not even know the meaning of a home and a family. Our current system of welfare has in fact destroyed our children's sense of values. Our current system of welfare has kept our children from understanding the work ethic, the work ethic that in fact has built this Nation.

In fact, our current welfare system has kept our children from seeing a parent work. Our current system of welfare makes a joke of a $5.15 minimum wage that this Congress passed, when we in fact pay people in my State in Florida the equivalent of $8.75 an hour for not working.

Our current system of welfare has in fact bred crime, crime that has destroyed our neighborhoods, crime that in fact kills our children in this city, has killed thousands of children over the years, young people also trapped in a welfare web. They force our senior citizens and all Americans to live in fear and behind bars.

Welfare in fact has served and this current system has served as a magnet to attract illegal aliens into the United States. Our current system of welfare pays better benefits to those who really refuse to work, and pays better benefits to illegal aliens than we in fact pay to some of our senior citizens or to our veterans who served this country.

I think that if we really care about the welfare of our children, Mr. Speaker, if we really care about our senior citizens and if we really care about our veterans and we care about the future of this country, we should care about passing meaningful welfare reform.

In fact, we passed a welfare reform that says that welfare should not be a way of life, that in fact it should be limited to 2 years and a 5-year lifetime maximum. It is not severe. We said that they should work for some of their benefits, for example, food stamps, put in at least 20 hours' work.

We are not talking about disabled or elderly or infirm. We are talking about able-bodied Americans. We think we should return power to the States and restore a sense of personal responsibility when in fact the President's proposal has no real time limits, no real work requirements, non-citizens and felons will continue to receive welfare and we will have maximum control here in Washington. This is the system we have created.

I ask, what helps children and what hurts children? We have an opportunity to help children, to change welfare as we know it, and to make a dramatic change in the lives of millions and millions of citizens of our country and children in our country who deserve much better than the welfare system that they currently have.

Mr. Speaker, I urge that we adopt our plan, that the President in fact not veto this plan for the third time, and that it become in fact the law of our land to help our children, not hurt our children.

TAXES AND THE WEALTHY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to speak very briefly about two unrelated topics.

First, a few days ago we passed a resolution here in this House designating July 3 as Cost of Government Day. This resolution noted that the average person now spends 50.4 percent of his or her income in taxes of all types, Federal, State and local, 50.4 percent. In other words, the average person now works until July 3 just to pay the cost of government at all levels. That is taking into account the taxes of all types, like income, Social Security, sales, property, excise, gas, all the different types of taxes, and then the taxes that we pay in the form of hidden taxes in the form of higher prices and so forth. Even worse, President Clinton's 1994 budget said the young people born that year would pay average lifetime tax rates of an incredible 82 percent. Paul Tsongas, the former Congressman and Senator from Massachusetts who was a liberal Democrat when he was in Congress wrote a column about that and he said that we were going to turn the young people into indentured servants for the government unless dramatic changes were made. I do not think we should allow that to happen, Mr. Speaker. But the reason I mention this tonight is this: I am not for increasing our tax burden at all. In fact, we need to strive to lower our tax burden. But I can say that what we need to do is lower the tax burden on the average people and on the people of middle and lower incomes and to do that and to balance it out, we need to drastically raise the taxes on those movie stars and athletes and CEOs who are making these multimillion-dollar salaries. I think that would be only fair.

What really stirred me into this is hearing last week that one basketball player had signed a contract for 7 years for $123 million and then the Washington Post a few days ago printed what they called a Free Agent Tote Board and they have these other contracts for NBA players: 5 years for $55 million, 1 year for $30 million, 7 years for $98 million, 7 years for $105 million, 6 years for $24 million, 7 years for $42 million, 4 years for $28 million, on and on. They reported about one player for the Washington Bullets who was a substitute who did not even play well last year and he is holding out for $45 million for 7 years.

Mr. Speaker, I would say that things have gotten totally out of whack. I remember telling my two sons last December when I heard that one baseball player had signed an $18 million 3-year contract that could they imagine how much was $6 million a year. In my district, an average person makes between 21 and $22,000 a year. A person making $25,000 a year would have to work 40 years to make $1 million. To make $6 million in 1 year, you would have to average $150,000 a year. This is ridiculous. This is sickening how much these athletes are being paid for playing a game 6 or 7 months out of the year. It has gotten totally ridiculous. I say that we should drastically lower the taxes on the lower- and middle-income people and raise them on these people that are getting these totally exorbitant, unjustified salaries. I realize it will not be done, but we should boycott the NBA and these other leagues and organizations that are paying these totally ridiculous salaries and totally undeserved.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS

The other topic that I wanted to mention tonight, Mr. Speaker, and like I say, it is two totally unrelated things but it does pertain to the spending of government money. We have spent $4 billion so far in Haiti, and the Washington Post a few months ago reported on the front page that we have got our troops there picking up garbage and settling domestic disputes. We have spent billions more in Rwanda, Somalia, and now Bosnia where there is no vital United States interest and no threat to our national security.

Last week Georgie Anne Geyer, the very respected foreign affairs columnist, wrote this about Bosnia. She said:

For 4 years and 2 Presidents, the top military brass in Washington essentially lied about Serb capacities. They built a bunch of thugs and rustic mountain Serbs, dependent on that pitiful weaponry I saw, into super-Serbs.

She told about seeing this weaponry. She said:

There it stands, all the terror that American and European military men trembled before: old tanks, their sides packed with sand; antique mortars nearly falling off the mountainsides; artillery pieces out in the open, without even trees to hide them. One could be forgiven for thinking oneself back in World War I instead of the nuclear age.

The military exaggerated the capabilities of Saddam Hussein. Now they have exaggerated the capabilities of their opponents in Bosnia, and I think back to the time when President Eisenhower warned about the military-industrial complex and I wonder if these things are being done to somehow justify higher and unjustified appropriations. I think if they are, that is very sad and very unfortunate, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DICKEY). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. KINGSTON] is recognized for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS] is recognized for 5 minutes.

MEDICARE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of May 12, 1995, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. PALLONE] is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I am in the well tonight because I feel very strongly that myself, the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DELAURO], the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KLINK] and others that are going to be joining us here tonight, Democrats, spent a lot of time last year as well as this year as part of basically an effort to try to make the point, and I believe successfully made the point that the Republican leadership in this Congress was trying to destroy Medicare as we know it.

Democrats basically started Medicare over 30 years ago, Democratic Presidents, Democratic Congresses, because they were concerned that so many senior citizens did not have health care, either were not able to afford health insurance or found themselves unable to obtain health insurance as they became senior citizens. Over the last 30 years, Medicare has been very successful as a program in guaranteeing that almost all, almost 100 percent of the senior citizens in this country get health care and get good health care.

It is not only a question of the fact that they are covered by Medicare but they have a choice of physicians, they have a choice of hospitals and the level of coverage, what is included in their coverage, as well as the quality of care that they receive generally is pretty good. That is a dramatic change from the situation before Medicare existed.

Well, as my colleagues know, we faced a new Congress back in January of 1995 under the Republican leadership. One of the first things, and I have to admit I was very surprised, one of the first things that happened was that a budget was presented which essentially cut Medicare as well as Medicaid drastically, primarily to pay for tax cuts for tax breaks, if you will, mostly for wealthy Americans.

But the proposals that came from the Republican leadership did not just cut Medicare, did not just cut the amount of money that was going into Medicare, they also tried to change the system dramatically so that senior citizens would not have a choice of doctors. Many would be pushed into managed care. Many would also find that they had to pay higher out-of-pocket costs because their part B premiums would go up or because they would have to pay more as a copayment to their physician.

What we saw is, as I said, a dramatic change in the structure of Medicare as well as drastic cuts in the amount of money that would go into the program. We fought hard against these Republican proposals, and we were successful. The Medicare program is today still the way it was 2 years ago. The dramatic cuts have not been implemented, and I suppose not surprisingly, because the Republican leadership realized at some point over the last 18 months that this was not working and that we were getting the message across, if you will, to the American public that this is what the Republican leadership wanted to do.

All of a sudden, we see where the Republicans do not want to talk about Medicare anymore. They sort of pretend like all these debates and all these votes, these many times when they tried to cut it and change it, never occurred. So I was not surprised that last week 3 House Republican leaders held a press conference, last Wednesday, to basically discuss the new ads that the AFL-CIO has been putting on the air in various parts of the country where they point out that Speaker GINGRICH and other Republican leaders were pushing for these Medicare cuts and basically changing. I would say actually destroying Medicare as we know it.

The Republican leaders basically got up and said, oh, those things are not true, we never tried to do that. Well, let me tell Members that they did and regardless of their rhetoric, the old statement "Actions speak louder than words," well, the fact is the actions do speak louder than words in this case.

Whatever the Republicans say now, the bottom line is that after taking control of Congress, NEWT GINGRICH and the Republicans set themselves to the task of slashing Medicare by $270 billion. If this Congress had passed and the President had signed, which we did not, their Medicare bill, seniors would have been forced out of traditional Medicare by making it prohibitively expensive to stay in the program. They would have been forced. Basically, they would have lost the choice, I should say, of their doctors and hospitals because essentially they would have been forced into managed care where they did not have the choice of doctors and hospitals.

I do not think anybody really should be surprised by this because we know well that it took something like 13 years for Democrats to overcome Republican opposition and enact the Medicare Program on July 30, 1965. And in 1965, 93 percent of the House Republicans, including then Representative Bob Dole, now the Republican candidate for President, voted for a substitute that would have killed Medicare as we know it. Over 60 percent of Republican Senators voted for a similar substitute.

So we know historically the Republicans were opposed to Medicare, they continued that effort when they took back the majority in this Congress, and regardless of what the Speaker or the now Presidential candidate Bob Dole says, the bottom line is that they have over the years consistently tried to either stop Medicare from becoming law or change it dramatically in a most negative way.

I would like to now yield to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Ms. DELAURO] who really has been outspoken on this issue from the very beginning and really led the whole battle to make sure that we retain Medicare as it is and not make the drastic changes that the Republican leadership proposed.

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my colleague from New Jersey for taking the special order tonight because in fact the whole issue of Medicare is critically important to this Nation. I think, and I know my colleague from New Jersey feels this way and our other colleagues who are here tonight, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KLINK] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN], also feel the same way, that Medicare represents not a program but in fact what our values are in this country, in that it says to people who have worked hard all of their lives, who have played by the rules, who have raised their families, who have contributed to the successful economy of this Nation, that when you retire and when you are a senior citizen that you will have a safe and a dignified and a decent retirement and that you will be able to have health care.

I thank my colleague from New Jersey for his efforts in talking about Medicare and also about health care for seniors in this country. He has led the fight on that issue and I thank him for laying out the fact that it used to be in 1946, or before Medicare that we did not have the opportunity for seniors to have health care. That meant that families had to take in their mothers or fathers or their loved ones and somehow work out health care and was not clear how that was going to get paid for. With the advent of Medicare and today in 1996, we are looking at 99 percent of seniors who are covered.

Let me just go back for a second because it was not 1946, but before Medicare only 46 percent of seniors had health care coverage. So Medicare has meant a difference in the lives of seniors today, and it is something they come to count on, and not as a handout but something that they have paid for and that is there for them now.

But I think it is very interesting that in this Congress, as has been pointed out, that there is a war that is being waged on Medicare. The Republican leadership, with the House Speaker NEWT GINGRICH at the helm, is truly bent on dismantling Medicare, and I think it is worth repeating the quote that the Speaker made some months ago that, and this is what he said: "Now we don't want to get rid of it in round one because we don't think that that is the right way to go through a transition, but we believe it is going to wither on the vine because we think people are voluntarily going to leave it."

Now, after the wither on the vine quote appeared in various media accounts, Mr. GINGRICH's spokesman, Tony Blankley, was questioned on the accuracy of the quote, which they are now trying to run away from. They cannot move away from the quote fast enough. But NEWT GINGRICH's spokesman, Tony Blankley, was questioned on the accuracy of the quote. On October 26, 1995, Gingrich spokesman Tony Blankley confirmed GINGRICH's statement to the Los Angeles Times. Blankley said that GINGRICH's comments were "consistent with the Republican belief that most seniors would voluntarily choose to leave the traditional Medicare fee-for-service system in favor of health maintenance organizations and other managed care networks. It will mean the end of the system as most seniors know it."

These are words that are not made up. This is a direct quote from Tony Blankley. And yet the Republican leadership, the Republican National Committee, are currently objecting to a hard-hitting ad campaign, and I concur it is a hard-hitting campaign, as it should be, which is running across the country that highlights their position on cutting Medicare, and they are running as fast as they can away from these quotes.

I just point out what my colleague said about the then representative Dole. He prides himself on being 1 of 12 to have voted against Medicare and has said within recent months how proud he is of that vote. Well, I will tell you, people can run but they cannot hide. You cannot hide from the record and quite frankly, the record stinks. It really does.

I will make one point on what has been said about now in his revisionist history on this quote about withering on the vine that in fact he did not mean Medicare, but something called the Health Care Financing Administration. But it is hard to understand how individuals, except perhaps the employees, could leave an agency. This is ridiculous, people do not do that. If the employees of the agency leave, what has been implied all along, that it was the Medicare system that people were going to leave, that is what this is about. These are individuals who have a record, truly a record of being opposed to Medicare, and now they ask for the country to put their faith and their trust in people who had been willing to dismantle this operation.

I just make a final point, I know my other colleagues want to get into the discussion, the 1997 Republican budget reflects the fact that they do in fact want to see Medicare dismantled and turned into something else with a proposal of $168 billion in Medicare cuts over the next 6 years. We have been through this time and time again, and when we look at what they want to do with the $168 billion, this year it is $168 billion, last year it was $270 billion, they talk about having moderated. But if you take a look at this, the $270 billion cut would have been a 19 percent cut from Medicare; this time it is a 17 percent cut. So it is really the same numbers, if you will, and it is no coincidence that what they want to try to do with this money is to pay for tax breaks for the wealthiest Americans. Last year it was $245 billion in tax cuts, this year it is $176 or $180 billion in tax breaks for the wealthy.

As I said, they can run but they cannot hide from the comments that they have made in the past past and in the most recent past about how they want to see this system go away and take away from seniors in this country something that they have come to recognize as helpful to them in being able to truly survive in their older years and something that they deserve, a sacred trust if you will, that we committed to when this system was put in place.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for allowing me to participate in this effort this evening.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentlewoman and just, if I could, briefly comment on what the gentlewoman said when she raised again the quote from Speaker GINGRICH about Medicare withering on the vine. It is amazing to me how he can now suggest that somehow that statement was only meant to be applicable to the fact that they were changing Medicare to force people into managed care, as opposed to the traditional fee-for-service system, because it seems to me that is exactly the context in which the program would wither on the vine.

If you take away a lot of the money from Medicare and make the significant cuts that the Republicans have proposed, then the quality of care has to suffer because there is not going to be the money available to provide the level of services and the quality of services that Medicare now provides. If you force everyone into managed care, or you make managed care cheaper than the traditional fee-for-service system where you can choose your own doctor and then so many people do not have a choice of doctor anymore, then the reality is that Medicare has changed and does begin to wither on the vine. More and more people will find it necessary to supplement the program if they can afford it, which a lot of them cannot, in order to be able to have their own doctor.

So it does wither on the vine. That is exactly what the quote was meant to say, and that is exactly what they were doing.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield now to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KLINK].

Mr. KLINK. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend from New Jersey [Mr. PALLONE]. A lot has been made about whether or not this ad has been taken out of context, and some letters from the Republicans to various television station managers have threatened them that there was going to be a libel suit, there was going to be legal action if they did not pull these ads that are being run by the AFL-CIO.

Now why, you might ask, Mr. Speaker, is the AFL-CIO being involved? Well, they are involved because they represent the labor unions that represent the working people of this Nation, people who have played by the rules, working men and women who get up early every morning, they go to work, they perform a task, they pay into pension funds, they pay their taxes, and they are told Medicare will be there for you when you retire. Medicaid will be there if you need to go to a nursing home and you fall within the earning abilities to have Medicaid pay for that nursing home care. But now they are seeing that there is a majority party, the Republicans, who want to see this wither on the vine.

So the AFL-CIO said, look, the corporate interests of this country and their PAC's have spent hundreds of millions of dollars in promoting the Republican line. Let labor weigh in with a $35 million buy-in and let us inform the voters what our position is on this. The Republicans have said, no, we do not want this. They are running away, as my colleagues have said, from the NEWT GINGRICH quote saying that no, he was talking about HCFA, the Federal Health Care Finance Administration that administers Medicare and Medicaid. Well, let me read the quote, Mr. Speaker, and let Members and let everyone else in the shot of my voice decide what is taken out of context.

The Speaker said: "Now let me talk a little bit about Medicare. Let me start at the vision level so you understand how radically different we are and why it's so hard for the press corps to cover us."

Speaker GINGRICH continued as he was speaking to an audience from Blue Cross and Blue Shield. He said: "Medicare is the 1964 Blue Cross plan codified into law by Lyndon Johnson and it is about what you'd—I mean, if you went out into the marketplace tomorrow morning and said 'Hi, I've got a 1964 Blue Cross plan.' I'll let you decide how competitive you'd be. But I don't think very."

Speaker GINGRICH continued to say: "So what we're trying to do, first of all, is say, O.K., here is a Government monopoly plan. We're designing a free-market plan," he says and he is obviously referring to Medicare and Medicaid because that is all he has talked about so far, has not mentioned HCFA."

Then the Speaker continues: "Now they're very different models. You know, we tell Boris Yeltsin, 'Get rid of centralized command bureaucracies. Go to the marketplace.'"

And then finally Speaker GINGRICH does refer to the Health Care Financing Administration. He says: "O.K., what do you think the Health Care Financing Administration is? It is a centralized command bureaucracy. It is everything we are telling Boris Yeltsin to get rid of. Now, we don't get rid of it in round one because we don't think that's politically smart and we don't think that's the right way to go through a transition, but we believe it's going to wither on the vine because we think people are voluntarily going to leave it—voluntarily."

You cannot leave HCFA unless you work for the agency. And on this assumption the Republican leadership is going out with their lawyers writing to television stations and saying pull those ads. How dare the AFL-CIO tell the people of this country what the Republican Congressmen have been voting to do?

How dare they not? It is their duty. When people play by the rules, it is our duty to tell them that we have changed the rules or that we have one party or the other that wants to change the rules, and that party is the majority party.

Now, we understand in this country, and we hear on the floor of the House a lot of talk about Christian morals. We hear a lot of talk about patriotism. I am reminded of a quote by John Foster Dulles, who once said, and I will paraphrase but I am very close, he said something about this country would be in very poor condition if we only saved for the battlefield the strongest human qualities.

I think he was talking about the qualities of selflessness, of patriotism and caring and bravery, all of the things that we view as important on the battlefield to somebody who is a patriot.

But what he said is we do not use those qualities only on the battlefield, we are to use them in our everyday life. How patriotic it would be, how Christian it would be to take care of our parents and our grandparents. How patriotic it would be and how Christian it would be to make sure that we did not punish children because their parents happened to be on welfare too long.

So we talk on one side of the Republican side about being patriotic and about having Christian values, and on the other hand the legislation that we attempt to cram down the throats of this Chamber and the people of this country is a completely different kind of legislation.

It is very clear to me that Speaker GINGRICH was talking about leaving Medicare wither and die on the vine, not the Health Care Financing Administration. The handful of people who work over there might leave voluntarily, I do not know that they are going to quit their jobs.

We are talking about a health care system designed in 1964 when 30 percent of our senior citizens were living in poverty because they had no health care. The corporations of this Nation did not voluntarily take care of people in their old age. They did not provide health care for them. They did not provide pensions for them in many instances. So we developed in 1934 a Social Security system to take care of people in their old age and to give them some money coming in.

In 1964, again in 1965, we created an insurance company and we called it Medicare. We also added Medicaid. And we said let us take care of the disabled and let us take care of the poor children and let us take care of these folks, also.

Now, 30 years later, the Republicans get control of the House. Very proud is Bob Dole, as my colleagues have said tonight, that he was 1 of 12 that did not vote for it. He was proud that he did not like Medicare back then. But why was Medicare created? Why was Social Security created? Why was the public school system created? It was created because the corporations and the robber barons were not educating the children of their workers.

All of these programs, the reason that we have all of this Government is because the corporations did not do these things voluntarily. So we the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union and to have domestic tranquility and to provide for other generations, both those who have passed and those who are coming up, have created programs of social safety nets.

I know that is an oft-used term we throw around, but it is true; it is what it is. We have these social safety nets, and they are there for a reason. Now the AFL-CIO, that represents roughly one in every five working people and is responsible for the fact that the workers of America today have many of the things they do have, is under attack.

We have various subcommittee chairmen and committee chairmen from the Republican side putting out press releases and holding hearings that are intimidating that, if you belong to a labor union, you are either, A, Communist or, B, you must belong to the mob. One or the other: You are either a Communist or you belong to the mob.

This gives me a problem. Now all of a sudden, and I will tell you, Mr. Speaker, I come from having been in broadcasting for 24 years. I worked for more than one or two radio and television stations. Now they are threatening the radio and television stations of this Nation, saying, if you carry this ad by the AFL-CIO, that which, by the way, does not have an actor reading Speaker GINGRICH's words, it takes Speaker GINGRICH saying his own words about what he wants to see Medicare do, and that is to wither on the vine and to die. There is no question.

This is not something that is up for debate. For the leadership of the Republican Party to hold a press conference last week to try to create some kind of smoke screen is nothing more than that, it is a smoke screen and a very poor one. And the American people, Mr. Speaker, will see through it.

I yield back to my friend from New Jersey.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman. I want to say briefly I am so glad he pointed out how the Republican leadership is really trying to gag this whole issue and trying to go after the media and those stations that cover these ads. From the very beginning, and we have the gentleman from Michigan, Congressman STUPAK, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Congressman KLINK, who are also members of the Committee on Commerce with myself, and we can remember when Medicare, when this Republican Medicare proposal came before our committee, there was only one hearing. The Republican leadership did not want their proposed cuts and the changes in Medicare that they were proposing to be aired with the public. When the senior citizens showed up at the hearing, they were actually arrested.

Mr. KLINK. If the gentleman would yield on that point.

Mr. PALLONE. Certainly.

Mr. KLINK. I thank the gentleman for mentioning that, because 1 week earlier, in the same Committee on Commerce, the Committee on Commerce is a very important committee of the House of Representatives. We say it is the oldest committee in the Congress, and we are very proud to be there. We try to work on many issues and have worked on many issues in this committee: Telecommunications Act, securities reform. On many things we have worked in a bipartisan manner. The committee has traditionally worked in that respect.

A week earlier, if memory serves me, we had a senior citizens group come in that were in favor, supposedly, of the Republican changes to gut Medicare. They had bags of mail. They interrupted the committee hearing and dumped the bags of mail in support of the Republican Medicare, I call it the Medicare rape and pillage, but that is probably my own words; and nothing was said. Nothing was done.

However, when another group of senior citizens who were from the Washington, D.C., Virginia, Maryland area came in, the committee chairman ordered them to be arrested. The gentleman from Michigan, Mr. STUPAK, myself, the gentleman from Illinois Mr. RUSH, and the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. SHERROD BROWN, went with them. We said, if they were going to be arrested, we are going to go with them.

I want the gentleman to understand some of these people were in walkers, some in wheelchairs. Some had canes.

And they were going to arrest them? They did not disrupt as much as the previous group that had dumped the mail. But, see, they were in favor of what the chairman and the Republican majority wanted to do, and so we did not worry about that.

By the way, I might mention that a vast amount of the mail from the previous week that was dumped by the first group that was allowed to participate because they were in favor of what the Republicans were doing, we found out, was coming from people that either did not exist or were dead. So I guess dead people are in favor of what the Republicans want to do with Medicare because they do not need it anymore.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back.

Mr. PALLONE. And every one of you, I certainly know the gentlewoman from Connecticut and everyone else here, I believe, we were forced, because we could not get a hearing in order to tell the truth about what the Republicans were doing, we were forced to go out in the lawn in the rain, which was a memorable day to have a hearing, to tell the truth. So I see this almost as a first amendment issue.

The Republicans do not want the truth to be told. So they are now threatening the media, the way they threatened and tried to gag the people that came and tried to testify at the hearing. They just do not want the truth to come out.

I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the gentleman for convening this special order and for yielding. The gentleman is undoubtedly aware, as all of us are, that we are 15 weeks away from the last day of campaigning in this election. Many of us are counting the days as they approach. I am sure many ordinary American citizens are counting for those days to end as well, but it is a significant election we now face in 1996.

I think, despite the fact that I am a candidate in the election, as all of us are, I think it is significant far beyond our personal involvement. I really believe this may be the starkest contrast, the clearest choice that American voters have faced since Franklin Delano Roosevelt ran against Herbert Hoover in 1932. I do not think there has been a time in our history beyond that year that we have had such a sharp contrast.

It is curious that 4 years ago, when there was a choice at the Presidential level, the American people were told they could continue the policies of George Bush or take a chance with the policies of Bill Clinton. Certainly Mr. Perot was in the race, but those were the two major candidates. There was a bit of risk-taking involved because those voting for Bill Clinton, Governor of Arkansas, really had to accept his platform and his promise. They did not know what he would actually do as President of the United States.

It took a leap of faith for them to elect Bill Clinton as President of the United States and give him a chance to govern as the highest elected leader in this great Nation.

But it is a much different choice we face in 15 weeks. There is no leap of faith involved. We know exactly what the choices will be. We know what Bill Clinton and AL GORE have fought for. We know what the Democratic Party stands for. And we know very clearly on the issue of Medicare what the Republican leadership stands for.

If Bob Dole ends up being the nominee of his party, and there is some speculation he may not be, but I suspect he will be, if he ends up being the nominee of his party, can the voters trust Medicare with Bob Dole? Well, look back 31 years ago when Bob Dole sat on this very floor as a Member of the House of Representatives and in his judgment decided that the enactment of Medicare was a bad idea.

Now, many of us cast votes years ago that we would like to have over again and perhaps change, but Bob Dole is consistent. He recently said, when asked, it was the right vote to vote against Medicare. He knew it was not going to work.

So, here we have an unrepentant Bob Dole, voted against Medicare, who is seeking to become President of the United States and have the primary responsibility as President for the future of Medicare. Should this cause some concern and caution and pause among voters who worry about the future of Medicare? Well, I think so.

Let us assume for a moment that the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. NEWT GINGRICH, continues to be the putative leader of the Republican Party and asks to be Speaker again, if he has that opportunity at the 1996 election. Is there any question in anyone's mind on what he will do to Medicare? Well, we already know his game plan. He was totally unrepentant and said it was wither on the vine. He would cut $270 billion out of Medicare in order to provide tax breaks for wealthy American people.

So those who are looking for a protector of Medicare in NEWT GINGRICH and the House Republicans had better keep looking. Unfortunately, on the other side of the rotunda, in the Senate, the Republican leadership is in lockstep with Mr. GINGRICH and his thinking.

So in 15 weeks the voters will have their last night and their last day and hour of deliberation before making what I think will be the most important choice, political choice in this half century, in this 1996 election. They will know what they can choose from: Bill Clinton, running for President, who vetoed the Gingrich-Dole cuts in Medicare, or the Gingrich-Dole team, which will come in and change Medicare and allow it to wither on the vine, as Mr. GINGRICH has said.

They will have a choice between Bill Clinton and his support for Medicaid, which is so important for poor children, disabled people, and elderly folks in nursing homes, or they can turn to the Dole and Gingrich team which wanted to make massive cuts in Medicaid, cuts that really would have endangered the future of a lot of young people and elderly alike.

They can vote for Bill Clinton and AL GORE, who have supported college student loans, who are talking now about creative ways to help working families pay for college education, talking about the opportunities of education and training, or the Dole-Gingrich team.

And what did they propose? They continue to suggest cutting college student loans, making them more expensive for kids from middle-income families, make it more difficult for kids from families like my own to ever have a chance to go to college.

And finally they can look at the environmental protection. They know what Bill Clinton's record has been. They know what the Democrats have stood for in Congress. And they know very clearly what we are going to have if it is a Dole-Gingrich leadership on Capitol Hill and in Washington, DC, the same NEWT GINGRICH who proposed eliminating 14 environmental protection laws endangering the safety of the air we breathe and the water that we drink.

This is a stark contrast. Republicans are very proud of what they stand for. I admire their tenacity. They are going to stick with this no matter what. But I think the voters, and particularly moderate Republicans and independent voters, see through the Dole-Gingrich agenda.

I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for bringing up the issue of Medicare tonight. I think he focuses us on what our decision as a Nation will be in 15 weeks. It will be the most important decision of my lifetime, and I sincerely hope that the people of this country will stick the Clinton-Gore leadership and the Democratic leadership on Capitol Hill, to bring about the right kind of change, to not go too far, as Mr. Dole and Mr. GINGRICH have gone in their last year and a half together as a team here on Capitol Hill. I thank the gentleman for yielding this time.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentlewoman from Connecticut, Ms. DELAURO.

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I want to just add onto something that my colleague from Illinois spoke about. That is, whom do you trust? Do you trust Bob Dole and his commentary about being proud to have voted against Medicare, and NEWT GINGRICH wanting it to wither on the vine?

Most recently in the publication "Roll Call" Morton Kondracke, a journalist, wrote in his column: "Asked whether Republicans will come back with a different agenda in 1997, the House majority whip, TOM DELAY, who was a Republican from Texas, told Morton Kondracke, this is a gentleman who is third in charge of the House of Representatives," said, again, "We wouldn't change a thing, including the plan to reduce Medicare growth by $270 billion over 6 years."

So the entire leadership, the entire leadership is bound and determined to see Medicare turned into something other than what it is now and the kinds of protections that it provides to seniors. This is not a passing moment, a past moment. This is a current moment, when we have the Gingrich-Dole leadership of this Congress in lockstep opposed to the Medicare system. Then they ask the American public to trust them with this program. How can it be?

I thank my colleague from Illinois for laying that out.

Mr. PALLONE. I think the gentlewoman is right. Just from talking to my own constituents, particularly this weekend, I think people understand that that is why they wanted President Clinton where he is, because they are concerned about the hurt that this Congress is doing, if you will, to the average American, particularly on the Medicare issue.

I yield to the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. STUPAK.

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for yielding to me.

I would like to take special note of the work he has done in this area, in bringing this health care and health issue to the attention of the American public, and also Ms. DELAURO, who has been here night after night helping raise the level of consciousness of what is really going on in this country and in this Congress.

As I sat in my office tonight, I heard you speak of what the Speaker had said about trying to get Medicare, "We will let it wither on the vine," and Mr. Dole bragging about how in 1965, he fought against Medicare. Then I was pleased to come down tonight to join you and Mr. KLINK. We sit on the Committee on Energy and Commerce and the Subcommittee on Health and the Environment, which has jurisdiction over Medicare and Medicaid. Again, Mr. DURBIN, who was here tonight, had many, many words to speak on this subject.

We were just talking about trust here a few minutes ago. Who do they trust to look after the health care needs of this Nation? Is it going to be the President or citizen Bob Dole?

As we take a look at it, I think more than just words we should look beyond the words. Let us look at some of the proposals that have been brought forth before the Committee on Commerce, the Subcommittee on Health and Environment which both of us sit on now.

Who do the children and the seniors of this country trust to provide for their needs? If we take a look at Medicaid, and we talked about Medicare, I guess is the most popular, but Medicaid and the drastic reductions proposed in Medicaid, Medicaid takes care of children, but also two-thirds of our seniors rely on Medicaid for nursing home care.

But the so-called Medicaid reform proposal that was put forth in early June here before the Committee on Energy and Commerce, the Subcommittee on Health and Environment, Democrats insisted on a couple things. First of all, we insisted to ensure that there is a safety net for elderly, the disabled and for impoverished children. The Democrats also insisted that Medicaid be a joint Federal-State partnership which would work together to provide critical health care needs for those who really truly need it in this country.

What did the Republican bill do? It removed the guarantee of health care for the elderly and disabled and replaced it with the hope of Governors across this country. I have no problem with Governors. I think they do a good job. But what my Republican friends forgot and they did not add was, we give it to the Governors, the reason why we have a Medicaid Program in the first place is because the States could not and did not provide for those people who needed care.

So the GOP bill, while it allows the States to define the scope, the amount and duration of any Medicaid benefit, and in that bill it states the Governors need to provide a nursing home benefit, it would allow the States to limit that nursing home benefit to just 5 days. People do not go to the nursing home because they only need care for 5 days.

So they would have 5 days a year, that is what the bill said, 5 days every calendar year. The average care for a person in a nursing home is $38,000. So we are going to help with 5 days' worth and after that they are on their own.

Where does that money go? For all the populations that this bill, the Republican bill, purported to protect, the elderly, disabled, children and low-income families, it did not even guarantee that they would receive quality care, let alone adequate care, when the nursing home benefit is defined as 5 days.

I received a letter from the Michigan Health and Hospital Association on this block grant, Medicaid block grant proposal. Here is what they said, and I quote:

We fear that under the Republican Medicaid block grant program, health care services for our most vulnerable population, the elderly living in nursing homes, the poor and children, may be jeopardized as hospitals who continue to bear a disproportionate share of the burden of caring for these individuals face reduced payments.

In other words, they are going to cut, for those who provide the care, even further.

Here is what else the Republican bill did. Currently, under current law, we have a prohibition against spousal and family impoverishment. That is current law. You cannot put a family into poverty while they are trying to provide for their parent in a nursing home. Unlike current law, the proposal does not prohibit States from charging high copayments for Medicaid or contributions associated with long-term care.

Another troubling aspect of the proposal, and I asked the drafters of the bill when it came before the committee, I said this legislation does not require the benefits provided by the program to be provided equally across a State. I am from Michigan. I represent northern Michigan, a very rural area.

So, for instance, if Michigan chose to provide for long-term care in Grand Rapids, would they deny that same long-term care benefit to the folks in the upper peninsula of Michigan? The drafters of the bill said they could do that. So even in the State they are not even going to get equal treatment if it is left to this Republican bill on Medicaid.

Medicaid recipients and their families cannot afford substantial cuts in State spending and the Federal Government, and we cannot afford to shift it all from the Federal Government to the State because neither one can do it standing alone.

But I want to balance the budget. I know Mr. PALLONE wants to, and Mr. DOGGETT and Mr. DURBIN, but there is a right way and there is a wrong way to do it. So to try to fix things, Democrats offered a number of amendments on Medicaid. Let me just hit 12 of them, if I can, briefly.

Let us have an amendment in there would effectively prohibit fraud and abuse in Medicaid. That was rejected. That was Mr. DINGELL who brought up that amendment.

So we said, Ms. ESHOO from California brought up an amendment that said, let us have a guarantee of coverage for children, make sure the kids are taken care of under Medicaid. Rejected.

Well, then let us take care of the elderly who need nursing home care. That is what Medicare, that is what we spend two-thirds of the money for. Let us do that. That was your amendment and Mr. MARKEY from Massachusetts. That amendment was rejected.

We said, surely there has to be some compassion here. So let us provide coverage for the elderly who have Alzheimer's disease. That was Mr. DEUTSCH of Florida. He offered that amendment. Rejected.

So we said, surely we are going to take care of our veterans who need nursing home care. Remember that one? Mr. GORDON of Tennessee brought up that amendment. They will not even take care of veterans. That was rejected under the Medicaid bill.

So we said, all right, can we at least take care of the seniors who are in a nursing home now receiving Medicaid benefits. can we take care of that one? Mr. KLINK brought up that amendment. That was rejected.

Well, how about one of the Republicans, Mr. GANSKE. He is a doctor on the committee. He brought up, let us just guarantee current law to take care of the kids. That was rejected.

Well, Mr. RICHARDSON, he brought up the amendment that said, let us guarantee coverage for native Americans, Indians. I have seven tribes in my district, great amendment. That was rejected by the majority party.

How about just allowing, this was Mr. ENGEL of New York and Mr. SHERRON BROWN of Ohio, how about just allowing the right of the elderly to choose their own nursing home. If you are going to go on Medicaid, you go to a nursing home, seniors, you get to choose which one you want to go to. Rejected.

How about Ms. FURSE of Oregon, who said, how about if we take care of pregnant women and infants, kids under 2. That was rejected 14 to 25.

We said, all right, how about current law, we provide for women with cancer, breast cancer and cervical cancer. Can we keep that coverage going under Medicaid. No, that was rejected, 17 to 23. We lost that one.

I said, hey, I am concerned about rural areas. We are treated different than urban areas. Pay us the same, whether you live in Escanaba, MI in the Upper Peninsula or in Grand Rapids, if you are in a nursing home you should get paid the same. That was rejected. That way my amendment.

How about just restoring the minimum payment standards for hospital and nursing homes and managed care plans, restore the current minimum funding for them. That your amendment, Mr. PALLONE. That was rejected 16 to 24.

So the point is, it is more than just words. We offered commonsense amendment for breast cancer, veterans, to let seniors choose their nursing homes, take care of children, infants, help them out, come together in a partnership, that is what this trust issue is all about. Every one of our proposals were rejected.

So more than just the words of citizen Bob Dole or more than just the words of Speaker NEWT GINGRICH, look at what their legislation really does. As we move into this election year, I do hope we have debates. And I hope they are not about just the words of what someone said but, rather, the legislation they are proposing, because I think when you look at the legislation that is proposed and what we as Democrats have tried to stand up for, that safety net for seniors, for veterans, for children, and see it being cut away, torn away by votes of 16 to 24, where we lose commonsense amendments, then I think the trust will be with the Democratic Party. The trust will be with more than just words but, rather, with what the legislation proposes.

Again, I thank the gentleman from New Jersey for his leadership on this issue. It is always a pleasure to work with you on the Energy and Commerce Committee, especially the Health and Environment Subcommittee, as we continue to bring common sense to this area.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman.

I am really pleased that the gentleman pointed out the relationship between Medicaid and Medicare, because I think many people think that Medicaid is a program that is primarily for the poor. Of course, it is. But the bottom line is that two-thirds of the money under Medicaid pays for nursing home care. It is very easy for someone who is middle class or someone who is fairly wealthy after a few months or a few years, in some cases, in a nursing home to find themselves on Medicaid. That is why so much of the Medicaid dollars in fact go for senior citizens.

It is interesting, I want to yield, but I just wanted to say that we started out the year, I think, certainly last year where the Republican leadership was trying to cut and change dramatically Medicare. I think as they realized politically that that was not working too well with the American people, they started to talk about it less and less. Now they do not want us to remind them about it.

Then they started going to Medicaid, because they figured, well, maybe we can cut that and we can change that and people will not worry about it so much because it only affects poor people. Then they realized that these senior citizens, in particular, who are impacted by changes in Medicaid, who objected to it, we brought it out. So now we do not hear much talk about changes in Medicaid anymore either.

I think we can be sure that if the Republican leadership were to continue into the next Congress and if we did not have President Clinton out there threatening to veto these changes in Medicare and Medicaid, we would see both the drastic changes in Medicare and Medicaid come up once again.

Mr. STUPAK. I mean look, if the partnership that I spoke of is no longer there, that we are in Medicaid which pays for nursing home care, and it is $38,000 a year, and you are only there for 5 days and they pull the rug out from underneath you, who pays for it? If the senior citizen cannot, it goes to the family. It is an indirect tax on the families of this country. You are not going to throw your parents out on the street for 360 days and get 5 days next year and then throw them out again. You are going to pick up that cost, that $30,000 a year. Who is going to be able to afford that?

Mr. PALLONE. Exactly; thank you.

I yield to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DOGGETT].

Mr. DOGGETT. I thank the gentleman, and, you know, as I have listened to your comments this evening and those of our other colleagues, I think there are several conclusions that can be drawn about this Medicare debate, and as important as Medicaid and Medicare are themselves, some of the most important programs ever set up in this Congress, I think the first conclusion is even more important than Medicare, and that is the conclusion that, as you listen to this debate, and you listen to the way the Republican leadership has run away from Medicare, it is because the American people are paying attention, and most of the people who are informed, who have followed this debate, understand what the Republican majority, the first time they got a majority in this Congress, the first thing they went after was Medicare and Medicaid. They set out to undermine and dismantle those systems, and the American people understand that.

All of the excuses and the subterfuges that have been brought up here, when you get right down to it, the American people all over this country who have followed this debate, they understand it, and they know that Speaker GINGRICH set out to cut Medicare and that he is still committed to that program.

And I think the second conclusion that is very apparent from this debate is there is no doubt what Speaker GINGRICH was talking about, and I know in the course of this special order you had the speech, almost his entire speech, given again for him by our colleague from Pennsylvania, but I want to emphasize that it is not only the words of that speech, but as some of our other colleagues pointed out, and I am quoting from a story in the New York Times 2 days after he gave the speech, he was at a town meeting down in his district near Atlanta, and the Atlanta Journal and Constitution reported that, quote, Gingrich said he was referring to the fee-for-service portion of Medicare which he believed that seniors would leave. That is what he said about "wither on the vine." And 2 days after that, the Los Angeles Times referred to his press secretary, Mr. Blankley, who said here in Washington that what he was referring to in saying he wanted it to wither on the vine, that Mr. Blankley said Mr. GINGRICH's comments were consistent with the Republican belief that seniors would voluntarily leave the traditional Medicare system.

Now, that is one of the few times Mr. Blankley has said anything that I, frankly, have agreed with. I agree with him completely that the Speaker's comment that he wanted Medicare to wither on the vine was consistent with the overall strategy. Indeed this was occurring at the same time that our Republican colleagues, as you may already have pointed out on Medicaid, came before the same committee that our colleagues from Michigan was talking about, and they said, "Let's just totally eliminate, terminate forever, any Federal health and safety standards for those who are in nursing homes."

Now, I think that is the kind of extremism that the American people reject. They realize that too often our nursing homes, though there are many fine ones, some of them have kind of gone along from crisis to crisis, and to say we will just totally abolish any kind of health and safety standard for those who are not able to protect themselves in nursing homes was part of the same strategies that was going on at the same time. It was consistent with that.

But I would draw a third conclusion from your comments, and that would be a contrast between the Dole-Gingrich ticket with reference to Medicare because, you know, as coincidence would have it, or maybe it was not a coincidence, the same day that Speaker GINGRICH gave his speech, October 24, 1995, last fall when they were going gung ho, shut the Government down, we do not care how many billions of dollars it costs the taxpayers, close it down, which is what they did, and it came up to about a billion and a half dollars that were squandered of taxpayer money, but the very same day that Speaker GINGRICH made his comments Senator Dole was speaking the same day to a different group, and he said, and I quote, I was there fighting the fight, 1 of 12 voting against Medicare in 1965 because we knew it would not work.

It may not be expected in this election year for a Democrat to compliment a Republican, but I would tell my colleague from New Jersey that I do compliment Senator Dole, not on the substance of what he said about Medicare; indeed I could not disagree with him more on that, but at least, unlike the Speaker and the House Republicans, Senator Dole has not tried to run away from his comments. You do not see him going around and saying, "Well, when I was talking about voting against Medicare, I was only talking about the Health Care Financing Administration." He has stood by his statement. Indeed, he has taken pride in the fact that he has a record here. Just as Speaker GINGRICH and these Republican followers of him who wanted to let Medicare wither on the vine, Senator Dole has at least been willing to stand by his belief that Medicare was a mistake.

And I think that is where this debate should be. It should be about whether in the future of this country, and there is, no doubt, some need for some restructuring and some improvement and some strengthening of the Medicare and Medicaid system, but whether we will trust those who believe in the value of insuring all of our seniors and protecting them after all they have done for this country or whether we will turn it over to someone who said I was proud 30 years ago that I voted against Medicare at a time when well over half of the seniors had no health insurance program at all, whether you are going to turn it over to someone like that as well as someone who says, well, let us just let Medicare wither on the vine, instead of standing by their statements, as has so often happened here in the House on a variety of subjects.

Our Republican colleagues here in the House have, when caught and when the American people have realized what has occurred here, they have reacted by having their lawyers attempt to intimidate those who would spread the word. They would like to distract the American people and wait until after November to continue with letting Medicare wither on the vine and to intimidate anyone who would remind the American people, as our colleague from Pennsylvania pointed out, who would dare to put on television the Speaker saying this in his own words, who would dare to repeat those words to Americans who might not have heard the speech, to Americans who may, in their struggle to make ends meet, have forgotten what an outrageous comment and what an outrageous plan this was.

And I know that the gentleman from New Jersey will remember that when we were trying to get the details to find out how much they were going to hike the premiums, how much they were going to hike the deductibles, how much they were going to hike the copayments, all things that were in the secret plan originally, that the first plan that was laid out in public was not a plan about how Medicare could be restructured. It was a public relations plan. It was the one the gentleman will recall that talked about kind of the herd mentality among our seniors and that they could be led around by their nose basically and that they would not realize what was being done to them in this instance.

History in the recent months has certainly demonstrated that that public relations adviser, I think he is the same fellow involved in this so-called Contract on America, was all off because the American people are more intelligent than that. They realized what was happening here, and as I have discussed with some of our folks down there in Texas, you know if you have got a gardener that says, "Let it wither, let your plants wither on the vine," most people have the good sense to realize that what you need is a new gardener because that is not the kind of gardener you want tending to your plants, and it is certainly not the kind of gardener that you want tending to something that is important and is vital to people as Medicare.

And to all of those who say that this campaign with reference to Medicare and making American people aware of it is too hard hitting, I would just submit that they need to consider how hard hitting this plan was on seniors, on individuals with disabilities. If this plan, as originally envisioned, has gone into effect, the consequences would have been dramatic, and if this election passes and there are not more people here willing to stand up and fight against these Medicare cuts, there is no doubt they will be back with the same secret plans that they had in the past.

Mr. PALLONE. I would just add to the gentleman: You know, I think that that is what elections should be all about: issues. That is what we are talking about here. I would like to see less emphasis on personality, which is what so many campaigns are about, and just talk about issues. That is what we are talking about here, Medicare. It is an issue, and to the extent that there are ads running that point out where one side stands or the other on an issue as important as Medicare to the American people, that is what this should be all about, a public debate on the issues, and that is what the Democrats have been doing essentially for the last 18 months, trying to point out what the Republican leadership has been proposing on Medicare.

And I really think, as you said, Mr. DOGGETT, that most of my constituents are aware of it. Over the weekend I had a lot of people, I can just think of one woman in particular who came up to me when I was at church on Sunday and said, "You know, I don't want to lose my doctor." She was not even concerned about the level of funding. She just did not like the idea that she was going to be pushed into managed care, which is essentially what this Republican plan would propose to do.

So, I want to thank the gentleman for joining us tonight. We had a lot of participants here tonight, but we are not going to let this die, because I think we all realize that if this Republican leadership were allowed to have its way, we would see drastic changes in Medicare and cuts that ultimately would have it wither on the vine and cases to exist as a program that benefits seniors and provides for quality care and the level of services that they now have. So I want to thank the gentleman.

GETTING OUR FINANCIAL HOUSE IN ORDER

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. DICKEY). Under the Speaker's announced policy of May 12, 1995, the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. SHAYS] is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege to be here tonight to address this Chamber and to have you be the acting Speaker, and I thank you for your willingness to take the time to do this.

I was particularly motivated to come tonight because I listened to the presentation of my colleagues and I would like to give you the other side of the story.

I would also like to say without any hesitation that I believe when you tell the American people the truth, they will have you do the right thing, and I feel very strongly that what this new Republican majority tried to do last year and what we are trying to do this year will make our children better off than we, this generation, find ourselves, and that if we fail, I think they will be worse off. I believe that with all my heart and soul.

I believe that what we tried to do last year was to get our financial house in order and balance the Federal budget. I believe we tried to save our trust funds from bankruptcy, particularly Medicare, and I believe we tried and are still trying to transform our caretaking society into a caring society, our caretaking social and corporate and agricultural welfare state into a caring opportunity society, and in the process we are trying to bring power, money and influence out of this city back to local communities, back to our local communities, back in some cases to our State governments, but closer to home. That is what we are trying to do.

Now, I know that getting our financial house in order and balancing the Federal budget is not the end all and be all. There is no logic to saying that just balancing the budget is what we have to do and then we can walk away. Balancing the budget is what I view as just creating a strong foundation in which to build the many things that we need to build, but if we have a weak foundation, everything on top of it just crumbles away.

I do not know how my colleagues on the other side of the aisle feel comfortable when we know that we are spending over $233 billion just on interest on the national debt. It seems to me we would not want to spend $233 billion interest on the national debt. It would seem to me we would want to spend it on meaningful programs that help make individuals more self-sufficient.

But when we balance the Federal budget, we know logical things happen. We have a strong financial foundation in which to then do meaningful programs, not a lot, but meaningful programs. But we also know that interest rates come down. There is no question in anyone's mind that our interest rates have been high for many years and has slowed the productivity of this country and that we need to get interest rates down by balancing our Federal budget and getting our financial house in order.

Getting interest rates down does some significant things. It lowers the mortgages people pay on their houses, it lowers the amounts they pay on their cars, it lowers student loans. It seems kind of logical that we would want to do all those things simply by getting our financial house in order and balancing the Federal budget.

Mr. Speaker, we did that by basically cutting some programs. We cut Government programs. We made Government smaller. We did not want Government to keep growing, we wanted it to be smaller, so we eliminated a plethora of individual commissions and boards that were created by some Member of Congress so he could go out and have a press release and tell people that he created this new program that had a wonderful sounding name.

So what we did was we eliminated a lot of that. I do not know if many people know that almost 52 percent of all education programs do not even belong, are not even in the Department of Education. We have a Department of Education that has 48 percent of all education programs. Why?

Because there are a whole group of individuals here who wanted to make sure their committee had jurisdiction over an education program, so they made sure it came out of their committee. They did not oversee the Department of Education, so they made sure it came out of HUD or Labor or Veterans' Affairs or the Defense Department.

We have all these programs with great sounding names that we simply started to eliminate. We cut discretionary spending, and I know, Mr. Speaker, that you are on the Committee on Appropriations. When you came in this year, or last year, we were already halfway into our budget, or almost halfway. I guess we were about 4 months into our budget. You and the committee members made a decision to have a rescission package. You decided to cut $20 billion out of the existing budget. Now, there were cuts. You cut some programs. You saved $20 billion. That meant that taxpayers saved $20 billion.

Then this year the President wanted, the year we are in, and we had Government shutdowns, and we have 13 individual appropriations bills, and as some bills came out he signed some of them that we wanted that reduced the amount of Government spending, and he vetoed others. We had Government shutdowns. Those various parts of the budget, if it was HUD or Health and Human Services and he vetoed that budget, then we had Government shutdown. We had no budget.

Ultimately, though, we had an agreement. The agreement was pretty interesting. He wanted to spend $7 billion more than the previous year, and we ultimately had an agreement with him that we spent $23 billion less. So we spent $20 billion in the existing budget, that 1995 budget, and then we spent $23 billion less in the budget we are in right now. We have an agreement. We got the President to agree to slow growth by $23 billion.

He wanted us to spend some of that money differently and we had an agreement. That was a compromise. That is the way the system should work. But ultimately, we saved $20 billion last year, $23 billion this year; $43 billion less in the bottom line of the deficits. Each year the difference between the spending and the revenue is the deficit, and it is added to the national debt, so we made that national debt not grow as high.

So we cut what we call discretionary spending that came out of the Committee on Appropriations, and we made Government smaller, and it was what we said we would do before we were elected, and that is exactly what we did.

When we came to the defense spending, we froze defense spending. We did not increase it, we did not cut it. We froze it. Some would probably say, and

I am one who would like to have seen a reduction in defense, and others of my colleagues would have wanted to see an increase. But what we need to understand is that we are oversubscribed in defense budgets. We have so many programs, procurement programs for weapons systems, that funded out, they will be higher than what we even have in the budget.

So we are going to have significant cuts in defense, even with a freeze in defense spending, because we are going to have to pare down some of these programs. So we cut discretionary spending out of appropriations, we froze defense spending.

Then what we did is we came to entitlements. Entitlements are 50 percent of the budget. What is alarming about entitlements is that they are growing at 10 percent and 11 percent and 12 percent, so you have half the budget that is doubling every 5 to 6 to 7 years, and they are programs like Medicare, a very important program; programs like Medicaid; programs like our Federal and military retirement; food stamps; veterans' benefits; AFDC, which is welfare for mothers and children; the earned income tax credit, which is a program that goes to the working poor, so instead of their paying taxes, they actually get money back from the Government. It also includes student loan programs.

What did we do with entitlements? First off, I just want to say when I came from out of the State government where I voted for 100 percent of the budget, when I came here I found I only voted on a third of the budget, and I tried to control spending when I voted on a third of the budget. I only vote on the 13 budgets that came out of the Committee on Appropriations. I do not vote on interest on the national debt, about 30 percent of the budget, and I do not vote on 50 percent of the budget, which are entitlements. I did not have that opportunity. You fit the title on Medicare, Medicaid, student loan, agricultural subsidy, you fit the title, you get the money. You get the money. I do not vote on it.

What did we do with these very important programs, that are all very, very important programs? What did we do to these programs? We slowed their growth. Mr. Speaker, Medicare was going to grow at 10 percent a year. We decided, for instance, that we would allow it to grow at 7 percent a year.

I notice a colleague of mine is here. What I would like to do is just spend about 5 more minutes; then I would like to ask the gentleman from Iowa, Mr. GANSKE, to respond to the whole issue of health care. What I heard that preceded this special order just boggled my mind. I think my colleague can shed some light on it.

But this is what we did with some of these entitlements. We allowed the earned income tax credit, which is a payment to the poor who are working, to grow from $19.9 billion to $25 billion. That is an increase in spending. But in this place here, in Washington, in Congress, in the Senate, down here, people call it a cut. I am hard-pressed to know how going from $19 billion to $25 billion is a cut. In fact the only place I know that is called a cut is right here, and where the virus is spreading.

The Student Loan Program. I think of the Student Loan Program and I remember how outraged I was when I saw the President go to a school and basically tell the students that they would have no Student Loan Program, or excuse me, School Lunch Program, because Republicans were going to take it away. When I got back from the weekend, I went to my colleagues and said, how could we have done something so stupid? And they said, CHRIS tell me something; if it goes from $5.2 billion to $6.8 billion, is that a cut? It is not a cut. "But the President said we were cutting, we were going to spend less."

That is not true. It is simply not true. It is not factually correct. Our programs, percentage-wise, instead of growing at 5.2 percent, we said it could grow at 4.5 percent a year, and then we said that 20 percent of it could be allocated to the students that really needed it, because every student in this country is subsidized 13 cents in a school lunch program. My daughter is subsidized. I make a good salary. My wife makes a good salary. Why is my daughter's lunch subsidized?

We, under our program, said that we could take that money, the State could decide to take that money and give it to an urban area that might want to have a breakfast program or a lunch program or a meal in the evening for a kid who simply may need that meal.

Then the Student Loan Program, this is the one that really gets me, it grows from $24 billion to $36 billion. That was our plan last year. That was referred to as a cut. If it is $24 billion and we are adding $12 billion more in the seventh year, in the seventh year we are going to spend $12 billion more than we spend today, and it is $24 billion more than we spend today, and it is $24 billion, I am hard-pressed to know how that is a cut. It seems to me it is a 15-percent increase in spending. It is simply not a cut, it is an increase in spending.

Now we get to the health care issues. In the health care, under our plan last year it was to grow at $89 billion to $127 billion. Again, in this place, that is called a cut. Back in my home when you spend $89 billion in the last year, and in the seventh year, in the year 2002, you are going to spend $127 billion on Medicaid, health care for the poor and nursing care for the elderly who are poor, I call it an increase in spending, I think most rational people do.

Now we come to Medicare. This is where I would like to really engage my colleague. We learned from the trustees last year it was going to go bankrupt, Medicare part B, by the year 2002. Then we learned this year, as we suspected, because the fund actually started to go insolvent this last year, so we knew it was going to ultimately become insolvent totally and completely sooner than they said, and they said at the beginning of the year 2001, and the beginning of the year 2001 is really the end of the year 2000, it is going bankrupt.

What did Republicans do? We said that Medicare could grow from $178 billion to $289 billion, a 60-percent increase in the total amount we spend, and people said, yes, yes, but you have a lot more seniors in the program. True, we have more. On a per person basis it went from $4,800 last year to $7,100, a 50-percent increase per beneficiary. We slowed the growth and saved $240 billion. Yet, we are still allowing the program to grow from $4,800 to $7,100. That is called a cut? No, it is called an increase of 60 percent in terms of total dollars, 50 percent per beneficiary in total dollars.

Before I call on my colleague, I would just point out, we did it without increasing the copayment, without increasing the deductible, without increasing the premium. Seniors paid last year 31½ percent and the taxpayers paid 68.5 percent. We said freeze it. Do not increase it, do not subtract from it, freeze it.

We were able to save $240 billion for the taxpayers, and in this program, the reason we were able to save it was we were able to bring in the private sector, that said if you allow Medicare to grow at 7 percent, we can make money and we can offer a whole host of new services: eye care, dental care, a rebate and a copayment of the deductible; maybe even pay the premium, maybe even pay MediGap. We had some providers who said if you allow it to grow at 7 percent, which is very generous, we can provide a whole host of programs and we can save you money, because it does not have to grow at 10 percent a year.

Then the seniors said, what happens if I do not like the program? Then the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GANSKE], for instance argued they should be allowed to go back each and every month for the next 24 months. The gentleman from Iowa worked on this program with others, but he was a leader in this area, and he created a better program and saved money. I am just really grateful that he is here. I would love to give him the opportunity to just kind of express his concerns about what we did.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GANSKE].

Mr. GANSKE. I appreciate the gentleman sharing some of his time with me, Mr. Speaker, I, too, was watching the previous colleagues who were having a discussion on some of the important programs, including Medicare. I felt stimulated to come to the floor, as the gentleman did.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the gentleman hit upon the appropriate word, and that was "better." The General Accounting Office, the Inspector General, has looked at the way the current Medicare Program is working and has found significant areas of fraud and waste and abuse in the current program, the way it is currently working.

There was recently an editorial in the Washington Post that outlined some of the abuses that occur in the home health care industry, where, for instance, care is provided at $125 an hour or a visit. Total care for home health care is under no competitive bidding. There is no prospect of a payment system in the current plan. There is no effort to control abuses in that area like there is in some of the ways Medicare has worked on preventing abuses in hospital billing.

So there are lots of ways that we can make the Medicare system work better. I think that is a crucial point, because let me just read a letter to the editor from the Des Moines Register: "Congressman Ganske has voted for increased spending in Medicare." This is a letter by James Winger, president of the Iowa Federation of Labor AFL-CIO on Friday, July 19: "Congressman Ganske has voted for increased spending in Medicare. However, this increase is not enough to provide Medicare recipients with the same coverage they have today."

Now, it is the second part of that statement that is incorrect. Because the assumption is that you cannot do it better than it is being done today. I think that I just do not accept that. I think we can do it better. We can devise a system where, in my home State of Iowa, quite frankly by equalizing funding formulas to make rural areas comparable to urban areas, we can actually improve benefits for senior citizens.

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, I remember being the chairman of the task force, on the Committee on the Budget, on Medicare and Medicaid, and I remember the fact that the gentleman was not going to vote for the plan unless we realized that urban areas were treated in a much more beneficial way than a number of your communities. I remember you having a dialog with me, and more particularly the Speaker, and convincing him to put more money into the rural areas so they would in fact get more.

Mr. GANSKE. We have a situation, as you mentioned before, where in some parts of the country senior citizens can sign up for health plans where they get practically free prescription drugs, eyeglasses, hearing aids, trips to and from the doctor's office, and even memberships in health fitness clubs; that is, New York City, Florida, Los Angeles.

But there is nothing like that available for senior citizens in some of the rural areas, or even in urban areas that have done a very good job with controlling their utilization. That is not fair. That is the way the current system is working. It is not fair, because people in every part of the country are paying the same into Medicare as they are in other parts of the country.

So we equalize that. We did not decrease the amount in those areas that are high now. We simply said you will have to grow at a slower rate than the areas that are not at such a high average. We will move those up faster and we will equalize it. We will make it more fair across the country. That is one way that you can make the system work better.

But you know, I want to go back to a little broader concept. I think all of us want to have a cleaner environment. All of us would like to see education emphasized. We all want to see safe streets. We all want to see secure borders. All of those items are in what is called the discretionary part of the budget.

The other part of the budget is the entitlement part, the nondiscretionary part. These are things like Medicare, Medicaid, welfare and interest payments on the debt.

Mr. SHAYS. If the gentleman would just allow me to make the point that entitlements are 50 percent of the budget, and when we add interest payments, we are talking about two-thirds of the budget and the discretionary is only one-third of the budget.

Mr. GANSKE. The gentleman is correct. But in 1965, the discretionary part of the budget was two-thirds of the budget, that is, things like education, safe streets, drug prevention, crime prevention, environmental things. In 1965 that was two-thirds of the budget. Today it is one-third of the budget. Because in 1965 the entitlements plus interest were one-third of the budget and today they are two-thirds of the budget.

So all of those people who, like you and I, are concerned about those important things, need to be concerned about being able to control the rate of growth in the entitlements. It is estimated that in 10 years, the entitlements plus interest will consume all of the revenues from the Federal Government. That means that there will be nothing else left for the important things that we need to do.

So what we are talking about in terms of addressing the problem that Medicare is going to go bankrupt in 5 years is trying to devise a system that works better than it does now so that we can reduce the rate of growth and, therefore, allow the Federal budget to function in the other important areas, like education, the environment, drug prevention, and securing our borders that we all think are important.

I should point out, the bill that we passed had about a 7-percent annual rate of growth. That far exceeds the numbers of senior citizens that are coming in. If we look at the private sector, the amount of health care inflation has been close to 1 percent or less for the last several years. What we want to do is we want to learn for the Government programs how the private sector has been able to make things work more efficiently. The Government in effect has been growing at over 10 percent. We need to learn how to be able to offer benefits in a more efficient way. It is not just in health care, it is also in areas like welfare and other areas.

Mr. SHAYS. I would love to just illustrate, if the colleague would allow me, a real-life example of what the gentleman is talking about with the growth of entitlements. Entitlements are 50 percent of the budget and doubling every 5 to 6 years, crowding out the discretionary part of the budget.

I have had constituents who come and say, "We need to spend more for this education program," or more for this child care program that comes out of the discretionary budget. I say, "Yes, we do need to do that."

Then they say, "And, by the way, don't cut Medicare and Medicaid."

I say, "Well, I don't want to cut Medicare and Medicaid, but let me understand something. If we allow Medicare and Medicaid to continue to grow at 10 percent a year, how will we be able to do all those things you want?"

It is a concept of opportunity cost. If you spend your money here, you give up the opportunity to spend it here.

If we can make savings in Medicare and Medicaid, allow it to grow much faster than any other part of the budget, we then have some resources to spend on some good programs that come out of what we call the appropriations side of the budget.

Mr. GANSKE. If I may jump in here, many would criticize our specific plans, either to balance the budget or to reform and preserve and protect Medicare. I am sure that there are some things in all of those areas that the gentleman and I might prefer to see changed in some respects, too. We cannot have legislation that is this big and agree with every single thing. But the overall thrust is responsibility.

I would say this: I think the American public feels very strongly that there should be a sense of fairness. So if the opposition criticizes our plan to save Medicare in 5 years, and we all know, everyone agrees that the trust fund will be empty and there will be insufficient funds to pay the bills in 5 years. We all know that. This is a given.

Mr. SHAYS. We have wasted a year already.

Mr. GANSKE. If that is a given and the opposition criticizes our plan, then does the opposition not have a responsibility to offer their plans? Some of the moderate and conservation Democrats on the other side of the aisle did offer a plan. The fact of the matter is that we just passed another budget bill that basically took into consideration some of the proposals that they had made and the level of savings and, in fact, what we are currently dealing with today are savings of about $160 billion. That is very, very close to what the moderate and conservative Democrats have been for and it is not all that far from what President Clinton has proposed for savings in Medicare.

Mr. SHAYS. The difference is that when he refers to it, he calls it a savings. When he refers to ours, he calls it a cut.

But before we leave Medicare, I do not want to leave it without just summarizing the fact that we allow Medicare to grow from $178 billion to $289 billion, a 60-percent increase in Government spending on Medicare. On a per-person basis, we allowed it last year to grow from $4,800 to $7,100, a 50-percent increase per beneficiary.

Mr. GANSKE. I think we ought to emphasize this: In order to achieve those savings, we cannot just leave the program exactly as it is, because in the current program there are areas of waste, fraud, and abuse that administration, there are a number of areas that we can improve the plan. If we put the structural changes in there, then we can effect some savings and yet we can still maintain good quality.

Mr. SHAYS. To illustrate, we did not increase the copayment to the seniors or the deductible and we kept the premium the same, but what we allowed them is the opportunity to have what you and I have as Federal employees, we get choice in health care. We are going to allow seniors to choose different health care plans. Because of your instance and a wise one, we allowed seniors to go back, if they did not like that private plan, and just go back to the traditional fee-for-service Medicare system that we have had since 1960.

So we left the existing plan in place, but we gave choices. To me, the choice was the most exciting part. In part of our plan we said if a senior discovered something that was a waste in the program, we would allow them to receive some of the benefit if they reported it. It is even in our health bill that Senator KENNEDY is holding up right now by not allowing for a conference committee between the House and the Senate.

We passed a health care bill dealing with portability in health care and allowing people if they have an illness to go to another health care plan, if they have been in a health care plan, and that is being held up. But in that bill is the same thing we had in our Medicare plan, allowing seniors to report programs that they thought were abused.

I would like to talk about one abuse because I am on a committee that oversees HCFA, which was the agency that the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. GINGRICH] was referring to when he talked about it withering on the vine, not Medicare, which our colleagues like to distort.

Mr. GANSKE. If I may interject, am I not correct in that, I believe it was in 1992, President Clinton, at that time running for office, made a statement very, very close to Speaker GINGRICH, where he basically said the Health Care Financing Administration, HCFA, the bureaucracy, not Medicare, not the program but the bureaucracy, was not working as good as it should be and something should be done about that?

Mr. SHAYS. The bottom line is that the bureaucracy was working terribly. I started to talk about some of the abuses. I sit on a committee where we see a number of different abuses.

Medicare cannot buy a particular health service, let us say an oxygen concentrator, and reprice it at the market rate. It has to buy it at whatever the market cost is on the chart. If they want to reassign the cost, they have to go through a 2 to 3-year process. So the inspector general came in and looked at this process and said that Medicare was overpaying for a lot of goods, like an oxygen concentrator. The oxygen concentrator for the Veterans Department, if we paid the same price they paid, in 5 years we would save $4 billion. But we cannot reprice it without this long, laborious process.

Mr. GANSKE. If the gentleman would yield for a minute, one of the mechanisms that we had in our reform bill that would help address this problem of abuse in the system was that we set up a mechanism whereby if a Medicare recipient identified areas of fraud, waste and abuse, reported that to the government program and then savings were utilized, then that recipient would get to keep part of the savings.

This was a real carrot in order to encourage senior citizens to look carefully at their bills and help the program work better for the benefit of everybody. But without that type of incentive, then it is like, "Well, somebody else is paying for it, and I guess, you know, it doesn't matter to me." So there was a real incentive system built into our reform bill that would help address some of those areas of abuse that the gentleman is talking about.

Mr. SHAYS. Exactly. That was one. The other area was that we made health care fraud a Federal offense in terms of Medicare and Medicaid so that you would not have to find someone guilty because of wire or mail fraud but you could find them guilty for the actual offense. We all know that fraud, waste and abuse in our Medicare system is about 10 percent, if not more. That alone is a $17 billion savings.

Mr. GANSKE. If the gentleman would yield again, we both know that we can effect savings in that area. We do not want to give, I think, the inaccurate representation that by addressing that area alone one could effect enough savings to save the trust fund. But it is one of the many important steps that we took in the reform bill to make the system work better.

Mr. SHAYS. Let me ask the gentleman, why would they call it a cut, our colleagues on the other side of the aisle, when we spend 60 percent more and 50 percent more per beneficiary? I am trying to understand, and I have to say I thought President Clinton would do a number of things. I did not think he would veto our Medicare plan. I honestly did not think he would do it.

I described it this way to my daughter. I do not have the resources to give my daughter $20,000, but if I had $20,000 and I said to my daughter, "I want you to buy a particular automobile but of course you can't afford to have leather seats and other nice features in the automobile. I can't give you more than $20,000 this is what I have. And so I want you to go buy that automobile." And she comes back to me and she says, "Dad, I bought that automobile you talked about but I didn't spend $20,000. By the way, I got leather seats and a sun roof." I said, "Honey, I told you you could not do that. I only had $20,000." She said, "Dad, I bought it for $18,000" I would not call that a cut. I would say she got a better car and she saved $2,000.

Mr. GANSKE. If the gentleman would yield, one of the reforms that we passed at the beginning of the Congress last year was the issue of baseline budgeting, and this is what we are talking about.

In Washington if your salary is $20,000 this year but next year it is $22,000, that could be called a cut because it is not $23,000. This is the only place in the country where we do budgeting like that.

Let me just give the gentleman an example. I have a little boy who is almost 8 years old, his name is Carl. Sometimes Carl accompanies me on some of my meetings around the district. I have a chart. The chart shows that in the last 7 years, we spent about $925 billion on Medicare. We voted for a plan where in the next 7 years we would spend about $1,685 billion. I look at my little 7-year-old boy and I say, "Carl, which of these is bigger, $1,685 billion or $925 billion? I tell you, a third-grader knows the difference. If you factor into that the fact that this is more than twice the rate of inflation, it more than accounts for new seniors coming into the system, it still provides excellent benefits, there is no increase in copayments, no increase in deductibles, seniors would pay the same percentage of their premium as they have in the past, then I think that it is not accurate to represent our plan as a cut.

Mr. SHAYS. And they get a choice. They get to choose a plan that could be better or a number of plans that could be better and in the end if they did not like those plans they could go back to the traditional system.

Mr. GANSKE. And for large areas of our country, we would also have an equalization in the funding that would be very important as well.

Mr. SHAYS. This Republican majority is trying to get our financial house in order and balance the Federal budget. My colleague knows that just balancing the budget is not the end all and be all. It is just the logical realization that we would rather spend our money on real programs rather than interest on the national debt. We want a strong foundation in which to build.

The second thing is we are trying to save our trust funds from bankruptcy, particularly Medicare, and last year when we were trying to save it, when we did our Medicare plan we saved about $240 billion that could be used directly to save Medicare part A and Medicare part B. To save it from bankruptcy we extended the program out from the year 2001 to basically 2010. We are going to have another problem that we are not going to get into right now, but it is going to be a mammoth issue of how do we deal with the baby boomers.

But we did the responsible thing of slowing the growth of programs, still allowing them to grow 60 percent more total dollars and 50 percent more per beneficiary, but saving about $240 billion that could be used to then make sure the program was solvent for the next 15 years. And the President vetoed that plan.

Mr. GANSKE. If I may interject, what is the alternatives? I want to go back to this. If someone does not like our program, then I think they have a responsibility to offer their own specific plan to save the program, which will be insolvent in 5 years. That is only fair. It is a very, very important issue.

We either effect some reductions in the rate of growth or, in order to keep the system solvent, what is the alternative? The alternative is the same alternative that we have seen from Congresses for the last 30 years, and that is very simple: A doubling or a tripling of Medicare taxes.

As both of you and I know, the effect of that would be very transitory. That could probably extend the life of the trust fund for 3 years, and then what would we do? We would go back there, if we return to the way that it has been done before, and we would double or triple those Medicare taxes again. I tell you what, I cannot do that to the working families in my district.

If we look at an average income working family in 1950, and adjust the amount of taxes they were paying to the government to 1990 dollars, so that we are going to compare the same dollars for 1950 in taxes to the dollars in 1995, an average income family, not the rich and the wealthy, in 1950 was spending about $7,000 to the government in 1990 dollars. Today the average income family, 1995, is sending about $21,000 to the Federal Government.

The amounts are not so important, although they are getting so high. What is important is to recognize the fact that in the last 30 years, for the average working family, taxes, government taxes have tripled. What that means today is that couples are no longer afforded the luxury of one or the other of the spouses staying home with the kids.

It means that in 1950 one of the spouses could work, the other could take care of the children, if they so chose. Today what it means is that one is working to put food on the table, to pay the expenses for the rest of their family, and the other spouse is working for the government.

Now, this is not rocket science. If we are going to keep the trust fund solvent, we are either going to have to reduce the rate of growth in a responsible way to make the system work better, or else we are going to have to raise taxes, and raise taxes a lot and raise them again and again, and I just cannot do that.

I know how hard the working families in my district are working, and they are pushed. They have been running harder and harder on that treadmill just to stay in the same spot. So I think it is our responsibility to address this in the way that we have addressed this, a responsible way, a way to make the program work better.

But I think maybe it would be useful to turn to another topic. I was very interested in your comments on the earned income tax credit, because I think both the gentleman and I would agree that this is a useful program. It was designed originally and still functions to help people who are just above the poverty level to have benefits, slowly work their way out and get a helping hand away from poverty.

The gentleman pointed out that we funded the EITC at $19 billion and increased it to $25 billion, but what he neglected to mention, and I am sure that he just did not get to it, was the fact that the General Accounting Office did a study and showed, or possibly it was the IRS, the IRS did a study and showed that there was about 30 to 35 percent abuse, in some cases outright fraud in people taking the earned income tax credit when they should not.

The program was designed to help families, that is, families with children, and it was designed to help people that were just above the poverty level. There were lots of cases, as much as 30 to 35 percent of abuse, so what did we do? We addressed some corrections in the way the system is supposed to work. That is what we are supposed to be doing here in Congress. We are supposed to be helping this Government work more efficiently and better, and yet when we have a good idea, we will keep it. I would be happy to yield back.

Mr. SHAYS. I was thinking, as my colleague was talking, that it was quite difficult during the fall when we started to get this program through the House and the Senate, present it to the President, when he called the earned income tax credit a cut when we went from $19 billion to $25 billion; in the School Lunch Program when we went from $5.2 to $6.8. The Student Loan Program he is calling a cut when we went from $24 billion to $36 billion.

I really believe in the earned income tax credit, because this gets to the third effort. We are trying to balance the budget, get our financial house in order. The second thing is we are trying to save our trust funds for future generations, so we are not the only ones that enjoy the trust funds but they are there for our kids and our kids' kids. The third thing is we are trying to transform our caretaking society into a caring society, to transform our caretaking social and corporate and welfare state—we just do not have welfare for individuals, we have it for corporations, and we even have it in the farming communities to some extent as well—and to try and move it into a caring opportunity society.

We know that one of the better programs is the earned income tax credit for someone who is at the level of welfare but making money, working, not getting something from the Government, but really not enough to survive. They actually get a cash payment of $1,000 or $2,000, in some cases it could be $3,000. Instead of paying taxes, they get back $2,000 or $3,000.

But what we found was that some people simply were not reporting their income. Well, they were reporting it, saying they were not going to make money when they actually made money. We found that a lot of single people were able to get some of the benefits when it was not intended for individuals, it was intended for families.

So we are going to spend lots more, but we just want it to go for the people it was designed to help. It gets to this whole issue that is something I have had to wrestle with as what I view as a moderate Republican. I think I am pretty much down the center in terms of the political ideology.

I believe that what we have done for too many of our young people, and we see the result of it, I see too many young kids who are pregnant, I see too many young children that are selling drugs. I see too many young children who are literally killing each other. We have 18-year-olds who cannot read their diplomas.

The thing that gets me is when I see a 20-year-old or 22-year-old who has never had a job, not because jobs do not exist. I would acknowledge if everyone who wanted a job sought one, there might not be. But we have too many people who are not answering the opportunity to work because they say it is a dead-end job.

If I ever said to my dad, "I do not want that job, it is dead-end," my dad would have said to me, "Son, how many hours are you working there?" I would have said 10. He would have said it just doubled to 20. He would have known that so-called dead-end job would have taught me to get up in the morning, it would have taught me that for that work I earned something, that I was of service, instead of taking something from someone else.

That is what welfare does. It is taking something that someone else earned, and getting it without having to earn it but it was given to them. There are people who have needs, and we have to make sure their needs are met, but we do not want the system to be perpetual so that we now have 30-year-old grandparents who literally, they are on welfare, their kids are on welfare, and their kids' kid is on welfare, three generations.

Mr. GANSKE. If the gentleman would yield, we just passed last week I think really landmark legislation. That was a welfare reform bill that is a very, very good bill, that emphasizes exactly the direction that we think our country should move in terms of responsibility and in terms of opportunities, because it does have strong requirements for work and it does have strong requirements for responsibility for the fathers of children who abandon those children and leave those young mothers to an awfully hard row to hoe.

There were significant corrections in the reform bill in terms of food stamps. Nutrition is very important. I grew up working in my dad's grocery store.

Mr. SHAYS. You did not tell your dad you did not want to do it because it was a dead-end job?

Mr. GANSKE. I think working in that grocery store was one of the best training periods of my entire life.

Mr. SHAYS. I bet it was.

Mr. GANSKE. You get to meet people from every walk of life, and I thank my dad every time I see him for that, although at the time as a younger kid there were times when I probably would have preferred on those Saturdays to be playing golf or something else.

Mr. SHAYS. Or watching a football game.

Mr. GANSKE. But the point that I wanted to pursue is that even back when I was working in the store—my dad just recently retired from managing a grocery store—there is a significant and a growing problem with abuse in the Food Stamp Program.

It is not that food stamps should not be there for the people who need them. Both the gentleman and I know that they should. It is that there has been a growing problem with people abusing the system, and we know that food stamps have been used as a form of currency for drugs, to help fund drug abuse, that able-bodied people who should be working have been getting food stamps.

So what we did in our reform bill was we addressed that. We set up encouragement for electronic billing to try to cut down on the technical problems with food stamp waste and fraud.

I just am very optimistic. I believe that there is a role for government. I happen to believe that government can work a lot better than we have seen it work. But every time we try to change something, we run up against special interest groups that have a vested interest in seeing no change, and it is a real battle.

Mr. SHAYS. No one said it would be easy, did they?

Mr. GANSKE. Nobody ever said it would be easy, and in the political process, our Founding Fathers devised a system that requires multiple steps and it requires eternal vigilance. As one of our Founding Fathers said, that is the price of democracy.

Mr. SHAYS. I just wanted to emphasize that one of the things that we are doing with welfare is we are giving it back to the States with resources. We are not just saying "It is your responsibility." We are giving significant resources for day care, for the actual payment to the recipient but also for day care and jobs, because we know that a caring bill has got to provide someone the opportunity for training and a place to have your child so that you can get that training and ultimately get that job.

But what we do know is that a lot of the traditional job training programs have been basically make-work, not really teaching someone for a job that exists but just giving them some kind of program that in the end does not serve any value to them in terms of actually getting a job. So the day care and job training kind of programs that we are seeing now are quite significantly different.

Mr. GANSKE. If I may add to that, in the welfare reform bill there are some significant other items that reinforce the fact that citizens need to be responsible. When a citizen sponsors an immigrant to come into the country, they basically are promising that they will help that new immigrant for 5 years.

Mr. SHAYS. Yes.

Mr. GANSKE. That is current law. However, there has never been any teeth in that current law, and we even have examples where in Chinese newspapers from the west coast, Dear Abby columns, you will have somebody writing in, "My relative just came, got off the boat. How can I get them on to SSI?" I would submit to you that we have hundreds of millions of people around the world that would love the opportunity to come to this country to work hard, to achieve the American dream that are not interested in coming to this country and immediately getting on welfare, and we have corrected that in this welfare reform bill.

Mr. SHAYS. But see, some people would call that a cut in the program. That is what is ludicrous about the description. If we save money in the program, therefore, do not have to spend as much because we eliminate an abuse like this, it is referred to as a cut, and that is just simply an inaccurate way to describe what we did.

Mr. GANSKE. But to interject, this goes back to the point that we have made several times before, and that is that the people who are always talking about cuts, cutting this, that you are cutting that, they are the people who, in essence, are arguing not to change anything. If you are interested in, in education, the environment, preventing crime, in order to take care of those problems, we have to change the programs to make them work better than they are working now.

Mr. SHAYS. I was making reference to the fact as a moderate Republican I voted for a number of programs that I have had to look at and say in some ways what that has allowed me to do is it has allowed me to go back to some of my constituents and say, you know I care because I voted for that program. But as I have seen the program unfold, some of them, not all of them, I have had to go back and say you know, really what I have been is a caretaker and I have done something the exact opposite of what you would do for someone you love.

What I started to do about 3 years ago is I asked anyone who really started up in a lower echelon economically who now is a very successful person, far more successful than I would be, and I would say, what happened? Why are you so successful? When you were there in a development, in poverty, happened to have been a minority, so you had the laws against you and so on, and you had racial prejudice; and yet you succeeded?

Yet in every instance, in every instance it was, I had someone who took an interest in me, I had someone who sometimes kicked me in the butt. I had someone who did not always give me what I wanted. I had someone who did not let me get away with the excuse I do not want that because it is a dead-end job. I had someone would taught me to dream.

There were a lot of things they had, but they did not have someone just giving them something.

When I was growing up, my dad would commute from Darien, CT, for an hour commute into New York. He would get to read three papers in the morning and three at night because he had an hour on the train. He would read, and he would come back, and he would be filled with information. We would have a wonderful dialog at the dining room table.

He would invariably make some reference to something written in Ann Landers, and Ann Landers would write something back, and it would be kind of a crazy story.

I found myself looking at these calendars. I had these calendars with the thought of the day. I noticed the calendar for April 3. It was a Wednesday. I looked at it, and it was Ann Landers. And I thought, oh, my gosh, there is Ann. And I read it. And in a sense I thought this summarizes a lot about how I think about what we have to do in government. She wrote, "In the final analysis it is not what you do for your children, but what you have taught them to do for themselves that will make them successful human beings."

Now, we want our constituents to be successful human beings. We do not want them just used to handouts. We want them to be basically creators. We want them to be contributors to society. I was thinking about the true love that I think our society has shown and the true caring for making sure that people in our society are truly learning to do things for themselves, to be independent.

It is really great. I have gone to some programs where welfare recipients have taken meaningful job training programs, had the day care they needed, and then they have a mentor who follows them for a year or so in the job to make sure they do get up in the morning, make sure when they have an excuse not to go to work, help them sort out that that excuse will not be very helpful in their job. And what they do in these graduations a year later is they hold up a check and say: "You know what I like about my job? I earned this."

We had to encourage everyone to have that same kind of feeling of accomplishment and contribution because it is there in the heart of every American citizen. Every person wants to add and to be of contribution.

They also then make reference to the fact that not only did they earn it and how proud they are but how proud their kids are of them because mom is making a contribution to society and helping to support the family without having to turn to someone else.

Before yielding to my colleague, if I could say this. I proactively went out looking for some people to work in my office who, frankly, were not white, who were maybe Hispanic or black; and I guess I would call that affirmative action. One person that we ended up hiring was someone who had gone through a job training program. She is a very valued member of my office. But I had a program that I was trying to help people understand how they could buy a home, and she did not want to come to this program as a staff person on a Saturday, but we needed her. She was happy to come based on that. And she came. And a month later I found out that she had just bought a home.

She had gone to this program, learned how she could own a home. She and her brother and her sister bought this home and live in a beautiful home in the city of Bridgeport, now realizing all the pluses and minuses of home ownership. But a few years ago she was on welfare. She had job training. She had day care.

She had tremendous initiative. She is a very important person in our office, someone who is making a wonderful contribution and someone who we receive a lot of compliments on because of the way she treats people and the way she is able to help people.

To me, it is just a very satisfying thing, and this can be repeated time and time again. That should be our goal.

I would love to yield to my colleague.

Mr. GANSKE. I appreciate that and agree with what my colleague has been saying.

I have to smile because when he was talking about his father coming home and discussing the three or six newspapers that he had read that day with you and all of the ideas, I remembered that usually my dad and I discussed the sports page.

But to return to welfare, I think there are principles in our welfare reform bill that are very, very important. The first one is the able-bodied should work. The second one is that there should be time limits. We do not want to see one generation after another generation, four or five generations, caught in welfare.

Another idea that is very important is that for those welfare recipients who are under the age of 18, there should be strong incentives for them to continue and stay in school. You do not receive benefits unless you are living with an adult and unless you are in school because, if you do not stay in school, there is very little chance that you are ever going to get out of the trap of the welfare system.

So I think there are a lot of good things that we have been trying to do. I would like to go to one thing, though, and that relates to what we are talking about in terms of cuts. An example is the most recent HHS appropriations bill, where for the Department of Education we increased funding this year by roughly $2.4 billion. That was somewhere between a 4- and a 5-percent increase.

Now, within that we shifted some of the funds around. We took it out of the Washington bureaucracy and we gave it back to the States and the local areas. That is crucial because, when we talk about education, I want to see an increased teacher-student ratio, and I want to see a decreased bureaucrat-teacher or bureaucrat-student ratio. And that is what we are trying to do here. We are trying to get power back to the States, to the local areas.

People can do jobs better when government is closest to them. We want to do it in a responsible way, and I think that I am very optimistic with the progress we have made.

I will just yield back to the gentleman for a final closing statement.

Mr. SHAYS. This Republican majority is working to get our financial house in order and balance the Federal budget. We are looking to save our trust funds for future generations, and we are also looking to transform our caretaking social, corporate and agricultural welfare state into a caring opportunity society. In the process we are looking to bring power, money and influence out of Washington and bring it back to local communities.

In the process we are looking to empower people who are in our communities. So it is an effort that we are working hard at. Very candidly, we are not looking at the polls. If Abraham Lincoln had looked at the polls, we would not be one Nation, under God, indivisible. We would be two nations very much divided. For us the polls simply do not matter. What matters is our kids.

Mr. Rabin, the former prime minister of Israel, said you and I, politicians, are elected by adults to represent the children. And frankly that is what this is all about, representing the children.

Mr. GANSKE. I am happy to join the gentleman I think on some of the principles that we want to accomplish. We want to accomplish an opportunity society. We want to help make government smaller and more responsive to the citizens. And we basically want safer and sounder families. I am happy to join my colleague in his work.

Mr. SHAYS. I appreciate my colleague for that and thank you, Mr. Speaker, for taking the time to listen to us. With than we yield back the balance of our time however short it may be.

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 104th CONGRESS, SECOND SESSION

WASHINGTON, MONDAY, JULY 22, 1996

No. 108

Senate

The Senate met at 10 a.m., and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

God of all nations, Lord of all life, we thank You that You place within all of us the pursuit of excellence. The longing to be our best is stirred in us as we watch the creative competition of the Olympics in Atlanta. It is inspiring to see men and women press the limits as they go for the gold. Whether it is the 100-meter short run for lasting fame, or the daring high dive with no splash, we look on with renewed desire to live at full potential in our own responsibilities and relationships. We admire the dedication, the sacrifice, the indefatigable practice, the mastery, the joy of the Olympic athletes. Today we join the Nation in cheering Tom Dolan's gallant victory over physical limitations to win the swimming 400-meter individual medley.

Then we wonder about our own discipline in prayer, spiritual growth, and character development. What could happen in our lives if we had the commitment of these runners, gymnasts, swimmers, and team players have to their sport and their nation. Today we want to run the race of our lives, stretching every part of our being toward the high calling of serving You with excellence in our work in Government. Bless the men and women of this Senate and all of us called to work with them as we make this a day to go for the gold of glorifying You with all the intellect of our minds, the passion of our hearts, and the strength of our souls. Through our Lord and Savior. Amen.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able chairman of the Budget Committee, Senator DOMENICI, is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. DOMENICI. This morning the Senate will immediately resume consideration of the reconciliation bill until the hour of 2 p.m. Any Senator still intending to offer an amendment to that bill must do so prior to that time. Under the consent agreement reached on Friday, all previously ordered votes on amendments as well as votes ordered today will begin at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow morning. No rollcall votes will occur today. However, all Senators should be notified that there will be a lengthy series of rollcall votes on Tuesday morning. Also, at 2 o'clock today the Senate will begin the Agriculture appropriations bill, and once again any votes ordered in relation to that bill will occur following the stacked votes at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow morning.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY, WORK OPPORTUNITY, AND MEDICAID RESTRUCTURING ACT OF 1996

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report the bill.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, let me summarize where we are for Senators and staffers. We have used approximately 16 of the 20-hour statutory time. As of today, we will have disposed of over 23 amendments. We have had 10 rollcall votes and 13 voice votes. As of Friday night, we have 15 amendments pending for possible votes beginning tomorrow at 9:30, and we could add to that list today as many as another 19 amendments. I am not saying we will, but we could if all of those remaining on the agreed-on list that we agreed on Thursday night are offered today. So it is possible that beginning tomorrow we could have as many as 34 rollcall votes but certainly at least 20, not counting final passage.

It is my understanding that the distinguished Senator from Kentucky [Mr. FORD], is first. It is on that side.

AMENDMENT NO. 4940

(Purpose: To allow States the option to provide non-cash assistance to children after the 5-year time limit, as provided in report No. 104-430 (the conference report to H.R. 4 as passed during the 1st session of the 104th Congress))

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. FORD] proposes an amendment numbered 4940.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

On page 250, line 4, insert "cash" before "assistance".

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, this is an amendment that I think could almost be accepted. Although we could not agree on the Breaux amendment of last week regarding noncash assistance for children, I hope we can agree on this one. One of the reasons welfare reform is so complicated is that it is usually hard to separate the adults on welfare from the children. Many want to get tougher on the adults, especially those who have been on welfare for a long period of time. But I do not hear anyone who says get tougher on children. This amendment separates those issues because it is about how we as a Nation are ultimately responsible for the welfare of our children.

Under the Republican bill, after 5 years, States may not use any Federal block grant money to assist families whatsoever. This applies to cash and noncash benefits as well. The current bill goes much further than H.R. 4, which passed Congress last year and was vetoed by the President. In my view, this makes the bill much tougher on children. H.R. 4 prohibited cash assistance after 5 years. It did not prohibit noncash assistance like vouchers that could be used for clothing or medicine or other needs of our children.

My amendment makes this bill identical to H.R. 4 by allowing States to use Federal block grant funds to provide noncash assistance after adults on welfare have reached their 5-year limit.

If you favor State flexibility, you should support this amendment. Some supporters of this bill have said State flexibility is one of their top priorities, yet on this issue the bill is less flexible than H.R. 4. We say send this welfare reform back to the States, but yet we say: States, do it the way we tell you to do it. That is not flexibility for the States.

The National Governors' Association supports this amendment. This amendment does not increase the cost of the bill, nor add to the deficit. It deals with how the Federal block grant funds allocated to each State may be used. And so, Mr. President, in a letter dated June 26, 1996, the National Governors' Conference urged support for an amendment to apply the time limit in the bill only to cash assistance.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of this letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NATIONAL GOVERNORS ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, June 26, 1996.
SENATE FINANCE COMMITTEE,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR FINANCE COMMITTEE MEMBER: The nation's Governors appreciate that S. 1795, as introduced, incorporated many of the National Governors' Association's (NGA) recommendations on welfare reform. NGA hopes that Congress will continue to look to the Governors' bipartisan efforts on a welfare reform policy and build on the lessons learned through a decade of state experimentation in welfare reform.

However, upon initial review of the Chairman's mark, NGA believes that many of the changes contained in the mark are contradictory to the NGA bipartisan agreement. The mark includes unreasonable modifications to the work requirement, and additional administrative burdens, restrictions and penalties that are unacceptable. Governors believe these changes in the Chairman's mark greatly restrict state flexibility and will result in increased, unfunded costs for states, while at the same time undermining states ability to implement effective welfare reform programs. These changes threaten the ability of Governors to provide any support for the revised welfare package, and may, in fact, result in Governors opposing the bill.

As you mark up the welfare provisions of S. 1795, the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Act of 1996, NGA strongly urges you to consider the recommendations contained in the welfare reform policy adopted unanimously by the nation's Governors in February. Governors believe that these changes are needed to create a welfare reform measure that will foster independence and promote responsibility, provide adequate support for families that are engaged in work, and accord states the flexibility and resources they need to transform welfare into a transitional program leading to work.

Below is a partial list of amendments that may be offered during the committee markup and revisions included in the Chairman's mark that are either opposed or supported by NGA. This list is not meant to be exhaustive, and there may be other amendments or revisions of interest or concern to Governors that are not on this list. In the NGA welfare reform policy, the Governors did not take a position on the provisions related to benefits for immigrants, and NGA will not be making recommendations on amendments in these areas. As you mark up S. 1795, NGA urges you to consider the following recommendations based on the policy statement of the nation's Governors on welfare reform.

THE GOVERNORS URGE YOU TO SUPPORT THE FOLLOWING AMENDMENTS:

Support the amendment to permit states to count toward the work participation rate calculation those individuals who have left welfare for work for the first six months that they are in the workforce (Breaux). The Governors believe states should receive credit in the participation rate for successfully moving people off of welfare and into employment, thereby meeting one of the primary goals of welfare reform. This will also provide states with an incentive to expand their job retention efforts.

Support the amendment that applies the time limit only to cash assistance (Breaux). S. 1795 sets a sixty-month lifetime limit on any federally funded assistance under the block grant. This would prohibit states from using the block grant for important work supports such as transportation or job retention counseling after the five-year limit. Consistent with the NGA welfare reform policy, NGA urges you to support the Breaux amendment that would apply the time limit only to cash assistance.

Support the amendment to restore funding for the Social Service Block Grant (Rockefeller). This amendment would limit the cut in the Social Services Block Grant (SSBG) to 10 percent rather than 20 percent. States use a significant portion of their SSBG funds for child care for low-income families. Thus, the additional cut currently contained in S. 1795 negates much of the increase in child care funding provided under the bill.

Support technical improvements to the contingency fund (Breaux). Access to additional matching funds is critical to states during periods of economic recession. NGA supports two amendments proposed by Senator Breaux. One clarifies the language relating to maintenance of effort in the contingency fund and another modifies the fund so states that access the contingency fund during only part of the year are not penalized with a less advantageous match rate.

Support the amendment to extend the 75 percent enhanced match rate through fiscal 1997 for statewide automated child welfare information systems (SACWIS), (Chafee, Rockefeller). Although not specifically addressed in the NGA policy, this extension is important for many states that are trying to meet systems requirements that will strengthen their child welfare and child protection efforts.

Governors urge you to oppose amendments or revisions to the Chairman's mark that would limit state flexibility, create unreasonable work requirements, impose new mandates, or encroach on the ability of each state to direct resources and design a welfare reform program to meet its unique needs.

In the area of work, Governors strongly oppose any efforts to increase penalties, increase work participation rates, further restrict what activities count toward the work participation rate or change the hours of work required. The Governors' policy included specific recommendations in these areas, many of which were subsequently incorporated into S. 1795, as introduced. The recommendations reflect a careful balancing of the goals of welfare reform, the availability of resources, and the recognition that economic and demographic circumstances differ among states. Imposing any additional limitations or modifications to the work requirements would limit state flexibility.

THE GOVERNORS URGE YOU TO OPPOSE THE FOLLOWING AMENDMENTS OR REVISIONS IN THE AREA OF WORK

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to increase the number of hours of work required per week to thirty-five hours in future years. NGA's recommendation that the work requirement be set at twenty-five hours was incorporated into S. 1795. Many states will set higher hourly requirements, but this flexibility will enable states to design programs that are consistent with local labor market opportunities and the availability of child care.

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to decrease to four weeks the number of weeks that job search can count as work. NGA supports the twelve weeks of job search contained in S. 1795, as introduced. Job search has proven to be effective when an individual first enters a program and also after the completion of individual work components, such as workfare or community service. A reduction to four weeks would limit state flexibility to use this cost-effective strategy to move recipients into work.

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to increase the work participation rates. NGA opposes any increase in the work participation rates above the original S. 1795 requirements. Many training and education activities that are currently counted under JOBS will not count toward the new work requirements. Consequently, states will face the challenge of transforming their current JOBS program into a program that emphasizes quick movement into the labor force. An increase in the work rates will result in increased costs to states for child care and work programs.

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to increase penalties for failure to meet the work participation requirements. The proposed amendment to increase the penalty by 5 percent for each consecutive failure to meet the work rate is unduly harsh, particularly given the stringent nature of the work requirements. Ironically, the loss of block grant funds due to penalties will make it even more difficult for a state to meet the work requirements.

Oppose the amendment requiring states to count exempt families in the work participation rate calculation (Gramm). This amendment would retain the state option to exempt families with children below age one from the work requirements but add the requirement that such families count in the denominator for purposes of determining the work participation rate. This penalizes states that grant the exemption, effectively eliminating this option. The exemption in S. 1795 is an acknowledgment that child care costs for infants are very high and that there often is a shortage of infant care.

Oppose the amendment to increase work hours by ten hours a week for families receiving subsidized child care (Gramm). This amendment would greatly increase child care costs as well as impose a higher work requirement on families with younger children, because families with other children—particularly teenagers—are less likely to need subsidized child care assistance.

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to exempt families with children below age eleven. S. 1795, as introduced, prohibits states from sanctioning families with children below age six for failure to participate in work if failure to participate was because of a lack of child care. This revision would raise the age to eleven. NGA is concerned that this revision effectively penalizes states because they still would be required to count these individuals in the denominator of the work participation rate.

THE GOVERNORS URGE YOU TO OPPOSE THE FOLLOWING AMENDMENTS OR REVISIONS IN THE CHAIRMAN'S MARK IN THESE ADDITIONAL AREAS

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to increase the maintenance-of-effort requirement above the 75 percent in the cash assistance block grant or further narrow the definition of what counts toward maintenance-of-effort.

Oppose the revisions in the Chairman's mark that increase state plan requirements and include additional state penalties.

Oppose the amendment to limit hardship exemption to 15 percent (Gramm). NGA policy supports the current provision in S. 1795, as introduced, that allows states to exempt up to 20 percent of their caseload from the five-year lifetime limit on benefits.

Oppose the amendment to mandate that states provide in-kind vouchers to families after a state or federal time limit on benefits is triggered (Breau, Moseley-Braun). NGA believes that states should have the option to provide non-cash forms of assistance after the time limit, but they should not be mandated to do so.

Oppose the provision in the Chairman's mark to restrict the transferability of funds out of the cash assistance block grant to the child care block grant only. The Governors believe that it is appropriate to allow a transfer of funds into the foster care program or the Social Services Block Grant.

Oppose a family cap mandate in the Chairman's mark. NGA supports a family cap as an option, rather than a mandate, to prohibit benefits to additional children born or conceived while the parent is on welfare.

Governors urge you to consider the above recommendations.

Sincerely,

RAYMOND C. SCHEPPACH.

Mr. FORD. The administration supports this amendment, Mr. President. In a letter dated July 16, 1996, the acting OMB Director urges the adoption of voucher language that protects children.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of this letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT,
OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET,

Washington, DC, July 16, 1996.

Hon. JOHN R. KASICH,

Chairman, Committee on the Budget, U.S. House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I am writing to transmit the Administration's views on the welfare provisions of H.R. 3734, the "Welfare and Medicaid Reform Act of 1996." We understand that the Rules Committee plans to separate the welfare and Medicaid portions of the bill and consider only the welfare provisions on the House floor.

We are pleased that the Congress has decided to separate welfare reform from a proposal to repeal Medicaid's guarantee of health care for the elderly, poor, pregnant and people with disabilities. We hope that removing this "poison pill" from welfare reform is a breakthrough that indicates that the Congressional leadership is serious about passing bipartisan welfare reform this year.

It is among the Administration's highest priorities to achieve bipartisan welfare reform reflecting the principles of work, family, and responsibility. For the past three and a half years, the President has demonstrated his commitment to enacting real welfare reform by working with Congress to create legislation that moves people from welfare to work, encourages responsibility, and protects children. The Administration sent to Congress a stand-alone welfare bill that requires welfare recipients to work, imposes strict time limits on welfare, toughens child support enforcement, is fair to children, and is consistent with the President's commitment to balance the budget.

The Administration is also pleased that the bill makes many of the important improvements—improvements that were also included in the bipartisan National Governors' Association and Castle-Tanner proposals. We urge the Committee to build upon these improvements. At the same time, however, the Administration is deeply concerned about certain provisions of H.R. 3734 that would adversely affect benefits for food stamp households and legal immigrants, as well as with the need for strong State accountability and flexibility. And, the bill would still raise taxes on millions of working families by cutting the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC).

We appreciate the Committees' efforts to strengthen provisions that are central to work-based reform, such as child care, and to provide some additional protections for children and families. In rejecting H.R. 4, the President singled out a number of provisions that were tough on children and did too little to move people from welfare to work. H.R. 3734 includes important changes to these provisions that move the legislation closer to the President's vision of true welfare reform. We are particularly pleased with the following improvements:

Child Care. As the President has insisted throughout the welfare reform debate, child care is essential to move people from welfare to work. The bill reflects a better understanding of the child care resources that States will need to implement welfare reform, adding $4 billion for child care above the level in H.R. 4. The bill also recognizes that parents of school-age children need child care in order to work and protect the health and safety of children in care.

Food Stamps. The bill removes the annual spending cap on Food Stamps that was included in H.R. 4, preserving the program's ability to expand during periods of economic recession and help families when they are most in need.

Child Nutrition. The bill no longer includes the H.R. 4 provisions for a child nutrition block-grant demonstration, which would have undermined the program's ability to respond automatically to economic changes and maintain national nutrition standards.

Child Protection. We commend the Committee for preserving the open-ended nature of Title IV-E foster care and adoption assistance programs, current Medicaid coverage of eligible children, and the national child data collection initiative.

Supplemental Security Income (SSI). The bill removes the proposed two-tiered benefit system for disabled children receiving SSI that was included in H.R. 4, and retains full cash benefits for all eligible children.

Work Performance Bonus. We commend the Committee for giving states an incentive to move people from welfare to work by providing $1 billion in work performance bonuses by 2003. This provision is an important element of the Administration's bill, and will help change the culture of the welfare office.

Contingency Fund. The bill adopts the National Governors Association (NGA) recommendation to double the size of the Contingency Fund to $2 billion, and add a more responsive trigger based on the Food Stamp caseload changes. Further steps the Congress should take to strengthen this provision are outlined below.

Hardship Exemption. We commend the Committee for following the NGA recommendation and the Senate-passed welfare reform bill by allowing states to exempt up to 20% of hardship cases that reach the five-year time limit.

We remain pleased that Congress has decided to include central elements of the President's approach—time limits, work requirements, the toughest possible child support enforcement, requiring minor mothers to live at home as a condition of assistance—in this legislation.

The Administration strongly supports several provisions included in S. 1795, as reported by the Senate Finance Committee. These provisions include: allowing transfers only to the child care block grant, increasing the maintenance of effort requirement with a tightened definition of what counts toward this requirement, improving the fair and equitable treatment and enforcement language, and eliminating the child protection block grant. We urge the Congress to include these provisions in H.R. 3734.

KEY CONCERNS WITH H.R. 3734

The Administration however remains deeply concerned that the bill still lacks other important provisions that have earned bipartisan endorsement.

Size of the cuts. The welfare provisions incorporate most of the cuts that were in the vetoed bill—$59 billion over 6 years (including the EITC and related savings in Medicaid) over six years. These cuts far exceed those proposed by the NGA or the Administration. Cuts in Food Stamps and benefits to legal immigrants are particularly deep. The President's budget demonstrates that cuts of this size are not necessary to achieve real welfare reform, nor are they needed to balance the budget.

Food Stamps. The Administration strongly opposes the inclusion of a Food Stamp block grant, which has the potential to seriously undermine the Federal nature of the program, jeopardizing the nutrition and health of millions of children, working families, and the elderly, and eliminating the program's ability to respond to economic changes. The Administration is also concerned that the bill makes deep cuts in the Food Stamp program, including a cut in benefits to households with high shelter costs that disproportionately affects families with children, and a four-month time limit on childless adults who are willing to work, but are not offered a work slot.

Legal Immigrants. The bill retains the excessively harsh and uncompromising immigration provisions of last year's vetoed bill. While we support the strengthening of requirements on the sponsors of legal immigrants applying for SSI, Food Stamps, and AFDC, the bill bans SSI and Food Stamps for virtually all legal immigrants, and imposes a five-year ban on all other Federal programs, including non-emergency Medicaid, for new legal immigrants. These bans would even cover legal immigrants who become disabled after entering the country, families with children, and current recipients. The bill would deny benefits to 0.3 million immigrant children and would affect many more children whose parents are denied assistance. The proposal unfairly shifts costs to States with high numbers of legal immigrants. In addition, the bill requires virtually all Federal, State, and local benefits programs to verify recipients' citizenship or alien status. These mandates would create significant administrative burdens for State, local, and non-profit service providers, and barriers to participation for citizens.

Medical Assistance Guarantee. Even after the proposed removal of the Medicaid reconciliation provisions from H.R. 3734, the Administration opposes provisions that do not guarantee continued Medicaid eligibility when States change AFDC rules. Specifically, we are concerned that families who reach the 5 year time limit or additional children born to families that are already receiving assistance could lose their Medicaid eligibility and would be unable to receive the health care services that they need.

Protection in Economic Downturn. Although the contingency fund is twice the size of that contained in the vetoed bill, it still does not allow for further expansions during poor economic conditions and periods of increased need. We are also concerned about provisions that reduce the match rate on contingency funds for states that access the fund for periods of less than one year.

State Maintenance of Effort. Under H.R. 3437, States could reduce the resources they provide to poor children. We are deeply concerned that the bill provides the proposed cash assistance block grant with transfer authority to the Social Services Block Grant (SSBG). Transfers to SSBG could lead States to substitute Federal dollars for State dollars in an array of State social services activities, potentially cutting the effective State maintenance of effort levels required for the cash block grant.

Resources for Work. Based on Congressional Budget Office (CBO) estimates, H.R. 3734 would leave states with a $9 billion shortfall over six years in resources for work if they maintained their current level of cash assistance. Moreover, the Economic and Educational Opportunity Committee increased this shortfall and cut State flexibility by raising the weekly number of hours that States must place recipients in work activities and increasing the participation rates. The Economic and Educational Opportunities amendments would also create a shortfall in child care funding. As CBO has noted, most states would probably accept block grant penalties rather than meet the bill's participation rates and truly refocus the system on work.

Vouchers. The bill actually reduces State flexibility by prohibiting States from using block grant funds to provide vouchers to children whose parents reach the time limit. H.R. 4 contained no such prohibition, and the NGA opposes it. We strongly urge the adoption of the voucher language that protects children similar to that in the Administration's bill and Castle-Tanner.

Worker Displacement. We are deeply concerned that the bill does not include adequate protections against worker displacement. Workers are not protected from partial displacement such as reduction in hours, wages, or benefits, and the bill does not establish any avenue for displaced employees to seek redress.

Family Caps. The House bill reverts back to the opt-out provision on family caps which would restrict State flexibility in this area. The Administration, as well as NGA, seeks complete State flexibility to set family cap policy.

EITC. The Administration opposes the provisions in H.R. 3734 that increase the EITC phase-out rates thereby raising taxes on more than four million low-income working families, with seven million children. In addition, the budget resolution instructs the revenue committees to cut up to $18.5 billion more from the EITC. Thus, EITC cuts could total over $2 billion, and such large increases on working families are particularly ill-conceived when considered in the context of real welfare reform—that is, encouraging work and making work pay.

We are also concerned that the bill repeals the Family Preservation and Support program, which may mean less State spending on abuse and neglect prevention activities.

We strongly support the bipartisan welfare reform initiatives from moderate Republicans and Democrats in both Houses of Congress. The Castle-Tanner proposal addresses many of our concerns, and it would strengthen State accountability efforts, welfare to work measures, and protections for children. It provides a foundation on which this Committee should build in order to provide more State flexibility, incentives for AFDC recipients to move from welfare to work; more parental responsibility; and protections for children. It is a good strong bill that would end welfare as we know it. Castle-Tanner provides the much needed opportunity for a real bipartisan compromise and should be the basis for a quick agreement between the parties.

The President stands ready to work with the Congress to address the outstanding concerns so that we can enact a strong bipartisan welfare reform bill to replace the current system with one that demands responsibility, strengthens families, protects children, and gives States broad flexibility and the needed resources to get the job done.

Sincerely,

JACOB J. LEW,
Acting Director.

Mr. FORD. As I have stated, my amendment makes the bill identical to H.R. 4. If we are serious about passing a welfare reform bill acceptable to both the Congress and the administration, why should we allow this bill to be even tougher on children than H.R. 4 which the President vetoed?

Mr. President, the American Public Welfare Association also supports this amendment. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of a June 26, 1996, letter from APWA be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMERICAN PUBLIC WELFARE ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, June 26, 1996.

DEAR SENATOR: As the Senate Finance Committee considers amendments to S. 1795, the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Act of 1996, the American Public Welfare Association (APWA) urges your commitment to increased state flexibility in the design and implementation of welfare programs in light of the promising reform efforts underway in states throughout the country. Listed below are amendments that may be offered during the Committee's consideration of S. 1795. In accordance with the policies adopted by the APWA, we urge your support or opposition to the following amendments:

AMENDMENTS TO SUPPORT

Calculation of Work Participation Rate (Breux): An amendment to count clients who leave welfare for work in the work participation rate calculation. States would be permitted to count their participation for the first 6 months they are engaged in at least 25 hours of work per week in a private sector job. APWA strongly supports this amendment to credit states with successfully moving welfare clients off welfare and into private sector employment.

Child Welfare Information Systems (Chafee/Rockefeller): An amendment to extend the enhanced match rate of 75% for federal fiscal year 1997 for the statewide automated child welfare information systems (SACWIS). APWA strongly supports continued funding for SACWIS systems which are critical to improving child welfare services.

Title XX Reductions (Rockefeller): An amendment to reduce the proposed 20 percent cut in the Social Services Block Grant (Title XX) to 10 percent. APWA urges the adoption of this amendment to reduce cuts in the Title XX Block Grant which states use to provide critical supportive work and family services.

AMENDMENTS TO SUPPORT

Contingency Fund (Breau): An amendment to clarify the calculation of state maintenance of effort in the contingency fund. APWA strongly supports this clarification of qualified state expenditures for the purpose of calculating state maintenance of effort.

Contingency Fund (Breau): An amendment to modify the contingency fund to provide that states which access contingency fund during only part of the year are not penalized. APWA strongly supports this amendment to ensure that states do not have their federal match rate for contingency funds reduced if these states only require funds for part of the year.

Child Welfare Services (Chafee): An amendment to retain current law that makes alien children, who do not qualify for AFDC, eligible for IV-E foster care and adoption assistance if they meet the other eligibility requirements. APWA policy supports current law for Title IV-E or its optional block grant proposal for this program. Consistent with this policy, APWA supports retaining this particular provision in current law that has been omitted in the bill.

Five Year Time Limit (Breau): An amendment to provide states with the flexibility to use Temporary Assistance to Needy Family (TANF) block grant funds as in-kind assistance to children of families which have reached the 5 year lifetime time limit.

AMENDMENTS TO OPPOSE

Work Exemption (Conrad): An amendment to exempt single parents with children under age 11 who cannot find child care from the penalties for refusing to meet work requirements. APWA opposes this amendment because it would exempt single adults from work requirements, yet financially penalizes states for failure to meet the bills work participation rates.

Increased Hours of Work (Pressler): An amendment to increase hours of work required per week. APWA opposes this amendment because it fails to provide additional funds for the provision of child care services needed to meet increased hours of work.

AMENDMENTS TO OPPOSE

Decreased Job Search (Pressler): An amendment to decrease the number of weeks job search activities can count towards the work participation rate. APWA supports job search as a valid work activity that should count toward work participation.

Increase work participation rate (Pressler): An amendment to increase work participation rates contained in the bill. APWA opposes this amendment because it fails to provide additional funds for placement, child care and other supportive work services needed to meet increased work participation rates.

Work Participation Rate Penalties (Gramm): An amendment to impose an additional 5 percent penalty on states for consecutive failure to meet the work participation requirements. APWA opposes this amendment to increase penalties on states beyond those contained in the bill.

Work Participation Rate (Gramm): An amendment to limit to one year the exception to the work participation rate calculation for families with children under 1 year of age.

Exemption (Gramm): An amendment to allow states to exempt families with children under 1 year of age from the work requirement, but require that such exempt families count for purposes of determining the work participation rate. APWA opposes this amendment because it would exempt single adults from work requirements, yet financially penalizes states for failure to meet the bills work participation rates.

Work Requirement (Gramm): An amendment to increase the work requirement on families if they receive federally funded child care assistance by: 1) 10 additional hours a week for a single parents and b) 30 hours per week for the nonworking spouse in a two-parent family. APWA opposes this amendment because it fails to recognize the additional funds required for placement, child care and other supportive work services needed to meet increased work requirements.

Paternity Establishment (Gramm): An amendment to strengthen the requirements for paternity establishment as a condition for receiving benefits, with a state option to exempt as much as 25% of the population. APWA believes states should have the option to impose this requirement, but it should not be a mandate.

Hardship Exemption (Gramm): An amendment to limit the hardship exemption from the five year lifetime time limit to 15 percent from the 20 percent exemption in S. 1795. APWA supports the hardship exemption of at least 20 percent of the entire caseload.

Thank you for your consideration of these APWA positions. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me or Elaine Ryan at (202) 682-0100.

Sincerely,

A. SIDNEY JOHNSON III,

Executive Director.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, we can keep the restriction on cash assistance after 5 years, but let us not take a step backward and prohibit all forms of noncash assistance. This prohibition is aimed directly at our children, and I think it is misguided.

If we want a welfare reform compromise, if we want to avoid being unnecessarily harsh on our children, if we want to maximize State flexibility, we should pass this amendment. It is supported by the National Governors' Association, and it makes the bill identical to H.R. 4, which passed the Congress last year. It does not add to the cost of the bill and it promotes State flexibility.

During the conference last year, the Governors lobbied hard for this particular amendment. I know none of my colleagues take these decisions lightly, but I hope you will remember that each one of us will be forever wedded to these decisions. We are essentially providing a road map for the future, the futures of hundreds of thousands of children in this country. Make no mistake about it, 5 or 10 or 15 years from now, when these children have become young adults, you and I must take some responsibility for their successes or failures.

Of course, they will have their setbacks, just like you and me. But let us assure that those setbacks are not set in motion by the decisions we make today. By passing this amendment, I believe one day each of us can look at our future parents, doctors, lawyers, farmers and teachers, taking pride in our role to assure they grew up with a safe place to sleep at night, clothes on their backs, and food in their stomachs.

If we fail to pass this amendment, the children who become trapped in lives of mediocrity or fall through the cracks to obscurity will belong to us as well.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent a letter from my Governor in Kentucky, who is now part of the leadership of the National Governors' Association, supporting this amendment be printed in the RECORD at this point.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF KENTUCKY,

OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,

Frankfort, KY, July 18, 1996.

Hon. WENDELL FORD,

Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR FORD: As the Senate begins its welfare debate this week, I understand you plan to offer an amendment that would allow states to use federal block grant funds to provide non-cash assistance to the children of welfare families, after a family has reached the proposed five-year lifetime limit on benefits. I am writing to offer my full support of that amendment.

Welfare has always been a federal-state partnership and responsibility. The federal government must continue to assist states' efforts to support children of welfare parents. To abandon these children after any amount of time is a horrible breach of this partnership and adds up to nothing but an over-burdensome unfunded mandate on the states. As a nation, we have committed ourselves to protecting the lives and well-being of the innocent. In this case, we are talking about the most innocent of all—our children.

Any welfare reform legislation must include provisions to move recipients to work. I support a tough and responsible approach that makes welfare recipients work and urges them to move off the program. However, any welfare reform must also continue to provide a safety net for those recipients' children. These children have no control over the direction of their young lives.

It is also conceivable that in a span of 20-30 years, a hard working family trying to carry their own weight in our society and provide for their families could fall on hard times during downturns in the economy. It would be particularly unfortunate to punish these families who are attempting to contribute to society but who from time to time need limited assistance.

Therefore, I fully support your amendment to insure the federal government does not shirk its responsibility to our children and lay an inappropriate fiscal burden on the states. You will find that other governors across the nation will also support this action. The National Governors' Association, in a June 26 letter to Congress, expressed its support for the content included in this amendment. Congress should defer to this bipartisan support from the nation's governors. After all, it is we governors who will be charged with implementing any national welfare reform program.

Thank you and please contact me if I can be of any further assistance on this matter.

Sincerely,

PAUL E. PATTON.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, the Catholic Bishops' Conference supports this amendment. I ask unanimous consent a letter from the Catholic Bishops' Conference in support of my amendment be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. CATHOLIC CONFERENCE,
Washington, DC, July 17, 1996.

DEAR SENATOR: The Catholic Bishops' Conference has long suggested genuine welfare reform that strengthens families, encourages productive work, and protects vulnerable children. We believe genuine welfare reform is an urgent national priority, but we oppose abandonment of the federal government's necessary role in helping families overcome poverty and meet their children's basic needs. Simply cutting resources and transferring responsibility is not genuine reform.

As Chairman of the Domestic Policy Committee of the United States Catholic Conference, I share the goals of reducing illegitimacy and dependency, promoting work and empowering families. However, I am writing to you to express our concern about provisions in S 1795, (Senate Budget Committee's Reconciliation report S 1956), which would result in more poverty, hunger and illness for poor children. As the Senate considers this bill, we strongly urge you to support amendments in five essential areas.

(1) FAMILY CAP

We urge the Senate to support efforts to remove the family cap which denies increased assistance for additional children born to mothers on welfare unless state law repeals it. See the attached briefing sheet on why the "opt out" is effectively a mandatory cap which the Senate rejected on a bipartisan basis 66-34. We urge the Senate again to reject this measure which will encourage abortions and hurt children.

We believe the so-called "opt-out" provision is, in reality, a federally mandated family cap because it can only be removed by the unprecedented and extreme requirement that both houses of a state legislative pass and the Governor sign a law repealing the federal mandate. The Bishops' Conference's opposition to the family cap is based on the belief that children should not be denied benefits because of their mothers' age or dependence on welfare. These provisions, whatever their intentions, are likely to encourage abortion, especially in those states which pay for abortions, but not for assistance to these children. These states say to a young woman, we will pay for your abortion, but we will not help you to raise your child in dignity.

New Jersey is the state with the most experience with a family cap. In May 1995, New Jersey welfare officials announced that the abortion rate among poor women increased 3.6% in the eight months after New Jersey barred additional payments to women on welfare who gave birth to additional children. This increase is exactly what pro-life opponents of the family cap predicted. A study conducted by Rutgers University also has shown that the New Jersey law barring additional payments to welfare mothers who have more children has not affected birth-rates significantly among those women. The study refutes several earlier announcements that birth rates among New Jersey welfare mothers had dropped dramatically since the state implemented the policy in 1992. While state officials recently reported a drop in the birth rate among welfare mothers, officials are wary of linking this decline with imposition of the family cap.

Although these results are preliminary, the abortion increase coupled with the absence of an association between the family cap and birth rates suggest that the policy of denying children benefits doesn't do much to reduce illegitimate births except by increasing abortions.

On a related matter, we support efforts to assure that teen parents are offered the education, training and supervision necessary for them to become good parents and productive adults. We also believe that teen parents should be discouraged from setting up independent households and endorsed this approach in our own statement on welfare reform.

(2) NATIONAL SAFETY NET

We urge the Senate to permit states to provide vouchers or cash payments for the needs of children after the time limits have been reached. The Senate bill cuts off all assistance after two consecutive years on welfare and five years in a lifetime, regardless of the efforts of the family or the needs of children.

We support more creative and responsive federal-state-community partnership, but we cannot support destruction of the social safety net which will make it more difficult for poor children to grow into productive individuals. We cannot support reform that destroys the structures, ends entitlements, and eliminates resources that have provided an essential safety net for vulnerable children or permits states to reduce their commitment in these areas. Society has a responsibility to help meet the needs of those who cannot care for themselves especially young children. In the absence of cash benefits, vouchers would provide essential support for poor children.

(3) FOOD AND NUTRITION

We urge the Senate to remove the optional state block grant and reduce the cuts in food stamps. The Senate bill cuts more than $25 billion in food assistance to poor children and families, permits a state block grant of the federal food stamp program, and cuts single adults (18-50) from food stamps even if they have made every effort to find a job or a training slot.

We cannot support "reform" that eliminates resources that have provided an essential safety net for vulnerable families and children. Over half the cuts in this bill are in the Food Stamp program. These cuts will likely create an even greater burden on children and families when coupled with other changes called for in this bill. The optional food stamp block grant also troubles us. These fixed payments will make it difficult for states to respond to increased need in times of economic downturns.

(4) EARNED INCOME TAX CREDIT

We urge the Senate to reduce the cuts in the EITC. S 1795, as passed by the Finance Committee, includes $5 billion in EITC cuts, nearly 40% coming from the credit for low-income working families without significant assets. These reductions would affect nearly five million families with children.

We support real welfare reform which leads to productive work with wages and benefits that permit a family to live in dignity. Real jobs at decent wages, and tax policies like an effective Earned Income Tax Credit [EITC], can help keep families off welfare.

(4) LEGAL IMMIGRANTS

We urge the Senate to permit legal immigrants to receive essential benefits and at the very least to receive health care through Medicaid. The Senate bill denies assistance to all legal immigrants in "means-tested programs" (i.e., AFDC, Medicaid, Food Stamps). We urge the Senate to reject this unfair provision and, at least, substitute the less punitive restrictions contained in the recently passed Immigration bill (i.e., permit Medicaid assistance, etc.).

We cannot support punitive approaches that target immigrants, including legal residents, and take away the minimal benefits that they now receive. The provisions in the Immigration and Reform Act of 1995 [H.R.2202] would at least leave fewer families and children without essential health care and cash supports, even though these provisions go beyond what the bishops would support.

In summary, we urge you to support genuine welfare reform, not this legislation which simply reduces resources and reallocates responsibilities without adequately protecting children and helping families overcome poverty. Without substantial changes, this legislation falls short of the criteria for welfare reform articulated by the nation's Roman Catholic bishops and we urge you to oppose it.

Sincerely,

Rev. WILLIAM S. SKYLSTAD,

Bishop of Spokane,

Chair, Domestic Policy Committee.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, the Catholic Conference of Kentucky has written a letter endorsing and supporting my amendment. I ask unanimous consent it be printed in the RECORD also.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CATHOLIC CONFERENCE OF KENTUCKY,

Frankfort, KY, July 19, 1996.

Senator WENDELL FORD,

Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR FORD: As you are well aware from previous correspondence with the Catholic Conference of Kentucky, the Bishops have major concerns about the welfare reform legislation which passed the House on Thursday. The United States Catholic Conference Office of Government Liaison has informed staff that the Senate is expected to take this up immediately. On behalf of the Bishops, I'd like to touch upon key issues with you.

The Family Cap, which your voting record has been perfect on, will prohibit states from using federal funds to provide cash assistance to children born to current welfare recipients. The "opt-out" provision is virtually a federal mandatory cap. We ask you to continue to support removing this prohibition on Kentucky's use of federal funds for Kentucky's children.

The Social Safety Net would no longer exist as this bill ends the guarantee of basic assistance to poor children and families. Please support any amendments which would allow Kentucky to meet their needs through continued support either as cash payments or vouchers when they reach the time limit.

The Food Stamp program would experience massive spending reductions. Please support any amendments to remove the optional food stamp block grant and ease the harshness of the provision which terminates food stamps to individuals, 18 to 50 years old, who cannot find work.

Legal immigrants would be denied benefits when, despite their contributions through work and taxes, they fall on hard times. Please support any amendments which would permit legal immigrants to receive benefits and, at the very least, to receive health care through Medicaid.

We know that the debate will be heated and the rhetoric will flow, but we know that Kentuckians can look to their Senior Senator for balance. Thanks so much for your consideration of these matters and for all that you do for us in Washington, D.C. Please do not hesitate to call if you have questions concerning any of this. See you at Fancy Farm!

Sincerely,

JANE J. CHILES.

Mr. FORD. So, Mr. President, I think this amendment moves us closer to compromise. I urge the adoption of my amendment. As I said earlier, this is one that ought to be accepted. The distinguished former Governor of New Hampshire, on the floor of the Senate last week said, as it related to the Breaux amendment, he did not like the first half, but the second half of the amendment he liked very much, which is basically the amendment I offered here today.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, as I understand it, nothing we are doing here today precludes us from raising a point of order on this amendment?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOMENICI. If one lies. We are not sure at this point. We are going to go see if it does.

Mr. FORD. If I may say to my friend, Mr. President, the point of order would lie against the Breaux amendment. But in talking with the Parliamentarian and others, this particular amendment would not have a point of order against it. I hope the Senator would not do that.

Mr. DOMENICI. We are not going to do that unless it lies. If it lies, we will do that.

Mr. FORD. Fine. Let us find out.

Mr. DOMENICI. Let me say, the arguments have been made more eloquently than I can make them. As I understand it, tomorrow, when this matter comes up for a vote, we will each have a minute to respond. I think I will not respond at this point other than to say clearly there are benefits beyond the cash assistance benefit that is being modified here. That program called AFDC, the cash assistance, we are trying to terminate that as a way of life after 5 years. That does not mean that other programs that assist people who are poor, including poor children, are terminated by this bill. So voucher-type programs in the housing area and others are still going to be available.

The question is, Do you want to break the cycle of dependency in this basic AFDC Program at 5 years, or do you want to break that and then start up another one? That is the issue. Do you want to start up a whole new bureaucracy of vouchers and the like, or do you want to break that dependency and get on with changing the very culture of the welfare system.

I think part of that is what this amendment addresses. We will have to decide as a Senate what we want to do about that.

I yield back any time I have in opposition to the amendment at this point. I assume the Senator is going to yield his back shortly, I say to my colleague?

Mr. FORD. Yes, I will.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The distinguished Democratic whip is recognized.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, flexibility by the Governors of the various States, is very important. Regarding the Governors who will be responsible for this, their association has asked they be allowed to do this without being cut off.

Last week they said this amendment would be unnecessary because States can already use title XX money, the social services block grant, to fund these vouchers. Social services block grant, title XX, is simply inadequate to meet those needs. Title XX has been funded at essentially the same level since 1991. There is a greater demand on these funds today than ever before.

Title XX funds are used to provide—now listen to this—title XX funds are used to provide aid to the homebound elderly. What the opponents of this amendment are saying to States is: Choose between your homebound elderly and your poorest children, but do not expect any State flexibility to use your welfare block grant. That is what they are saying.

I have never seen and heard people being against poor children as I have heard for the last several days. Everyone says to Governors, to whom we want to give flexibility and give this block grant to, that you cannot have flexibility with children. It just does not make sense. I have been a Governor. We have had hard times. My State is one of the States that has not asked for a waiver. Our welfare rolls are down 23 percent. It is because of the economy, basically. We still have about 14 or 15 counties that are in double-digit unemployment. They have problems.

What if we have an economic downturn? We are going to need all the flexibility in the States we can have. But we come here and listen, day after day after day: "There are other programs you can use. You can use title XX," the Republicans said last week. But that is aid to the homebound elderly. Are you going to force a Governor to make the decision between the homebound elderly and our poorest children? Do not expect any State flexibility to use your welfare block grant, Governor.

Title XX block grants are also used for preventing or remedying neglect, abuse, exploitation of children unable to protect their own interests, like preventing or reducing inappropriate institutional care by providing community-based or home-based care, or other alternatives. That is title XX.

Why not give the Governors and the States the flexibility they are asking for? All we are doing is just returning this bill to the same position as H.R. 4, in the last session, that most people on the other side voted for.

Now we say, "Oh, they've got other places." This bill allows States to exempt 20 percent of the welfare rolls, it does not count time spent on welfare as a minor—it allows all these things. But after 5 years, you are through. Period.

If you are going to give them the welfare block grant, they ought to have an opportunity. It is just beyond me, after you work your heart out to try to eliminate poverty in your State and your counties and your cities and you know what needs to be done, that we say up here, for sound bites—sound bites—we are going to give it back to the States, but we are going to tell the States how to do it. That does not make sense to a former Governor. It does not make sense. If you are going to put the responsibility on my back, if you are going to put the responsibility on a Governor somewhere, give him the ability to make decisions and not strip him of that ability, do not keep him in a box where he cannot reach out and help children.

That is all I am asking for, Mr. President, is the ability of a Governor to have flexibility to use the money that we send to him, and it will be shorter than it is this year. Do not kid yourself about title XX. It has not been increased in 5 years. It is the same amount of money, and we are growing—more people. The percentage of elderly is growing every year, but we are not sending any more money. It is the same amount. It has been level, it has been flat for 5 years, and they say, take it out of title XX, take it out of homebound elderly, and give it to the poorest of children? That is a heck of a choice to give to an individual who has the responsibility of leading his State.

So, Mr. President, I hope that my colleagues will join with me in saying to those Governors out there, "We're going to give you a very heavy load to carry, and that load is trying to work out welfare reform and make it work in your State." Let's not handcuff him or her. Let's give him or her the flexibility to do what is in the best interest, particularly for children.

I yield the floor.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee.

Mr. DOMENICI. I yield back the remainder of my time.

I gather now, under previous arrangements, Senator ASHCROFT is going to offer an amendment. Mr. President, is the Senator ready?

Mr. ASHCROFT. Yes, I am.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The junior Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. FORD. Will the Senator yield for 10 seconds? I apologize for this.

Mr. ASHCROFT. No problem at all.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senator REID be added as a cosponsor of my amendment.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. FORD. I thank the Senator from Missouri.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The able Senator from Missouri is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 4941

(Purpose: To provide that a family may not receive TANF assistance for more than 24 consecutive months at a time unless an adult in the family is working or a State exempts an adult in the family from working for reasons of hardship, and that a family may not receive TANF assistance if the family includes an adult who fails to ensure that their minor dependent children attend school or such adult does not have, or is not working toward attaining, a high school diploma or its equivalent)

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk for consideration.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Missouri [Mr. ASHCROFT] proposes an amendment numbered 4941.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike section 408(a)(8) of the Social Security Act, as added by section 2103(a)(1), and insert the following:

(I) for 60 months (whether or not consecutive) after the date the State program funded under this part commences; or

(ii) to a family that includes an adult who has received assistance under any State program funded under this part attributable to funds provided by the Federal Government or under the food stamp program, as defined in section 3(h) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977, unless such adult ensures that the minor dependent children of such adult attend school as required by the law of the State in which the minor children reside; or,

(iii) to a family that includes an adult who is older than age 20 and younger than age 51 who has received assistance under any State program funded under this part attributable to funds provided by the Federal Government or under the food stamp program, as defined in section 3(h) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977, if such adult does not have, or is not working toward attaining, a secondary school diploma or its recognized equivalent unless such adult has been determined in the judgment of medical, psychiatric, or other appropriate professionals to lack the requisite capacity to complete successfully a course of study that would lead to a secondary school diploma or its recognized equivalent.

(B) MINOR CHILD EXCEPTION.—In determining the number of months for which an individual who is a parent or pregnant has received assistance under the State program funded under this part for purposes of subparagraph (A)(i), the State shall disregard any month for which such assistance was provided with respect to the individual and during which the individual was—

(i) a minor child; and

(ii) not the head of a household or married to the head of a household.

(C) HARDSHIP EXCEPTION.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The State may exempt a family from the application of subparagraph (A) of this paragraph, or subparagraph (B) of paragraph (I), by reason of hardship or if the family includes an individual who has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty.

(ii) LIMITATION.—The number of families with respect to which an exemption made by a State under clause (i) is in effect for a fiscal year shall not exceed 20 percent of the average monthly number of families to which assistance is provided under the State program funded under this part.

(iii) BATTERED OR SUBJECT TO EXTREME CRUELTY DEFINED.—For purposes of clause (i), an individual has been battered or subjected to extreme cruelty if the individual has been subjected to—

(I) physical acts that resulted in, or threatened to result in, physical injury to the individual;

(II) sexual abuse;

(III) sexual activity involving a dependent child;

(IV) being forced as the caretaker relative of a dependent child to engage in nonconsensual acts or activities;

(V) threats of, or attempts at, physical or sexual abuse;

(VI) mental abuse; or

(VII) neglect or deprivation of medical care.

(D) RULE OF INTERPRETATION.—Subparagraph (A)(i) of this paragraph and subparagraph (B) of paragraph (I) shall not be interpreted to require any State to provide assistance to any individual for any period of time under the State program funded under this part.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Missouri, do we have a copy of the Senator's amendment?

Mr. ASHCROFT. The Senator will be pleased to send a copy of the amendment to the Senator from New Mexico.

The Senator from Missouri inquires, should we be operating under a time agreement here?

Mr. DOMENICI. We do not have to. I know of no other Senator prepared to offer an amendment. Take as much time as you like. You are entitled to an hour.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I am sure we will be able to accomplish what we need to accomplish in substantially less time.

Mr. President, thank you for this opportunity to offer an amendment. I believe that it is important for us in this Congress, and in the bill which is before the Senate, to change the character of welfare. That is the challenge which is before us. We have to change a system which has provided people with a condition—a condition of dependence, a condition of relying on others, a condition which has been a trap—and we need to change welfare from being a condition to being a transition.

The welfare situation should be a time when we prepare ourselves for the next step in our lives, when we prepare ourselves to be out of dependence and out of reliance on others, we prepare ourselves to be industrious, to be independent and reliant upon ourselves.

Welfare cannot be something that is a lifestyle. It has to be something that just for a while. It has to be something that moves us forward. I believe there are fundamental components of this bill which will do that, but we can enhance them substantially in their capacity to change the character of welfare, to change it from a way of life, to change it to a way of escape, to change it from a lifestyle, to change it to being a transition, to change it from a condition to being a transition.

Mr. President, according to Senator MOYNIHAN, the average welfare recipient spends 12.98 years on the rolls. That is a substantial and monumental waste of human resource. We have individuals who are reliant, who are dependent, whose level of contribution and productivity in our culture is very, very, very low, and that 12 years is a teaching time as well as a time of existence.

Unfortunately, that 12 years becomes a time when young people are taught dependence instead of independence. They are taught reliance on Government instead of self-reliance.

One of the things we should ask ourselves about everything we do in Government is: What does it teach? What does it reinforce? What basic principles and values are advanced by it? And a welfare system that provides for 12.98 years as the average time a welfare recipient spends on the rolls—what about those that are on there longer? This is not teaching something that is valuable to our culture. We need to be reinforcing, providing incentives for support for a system that does not institute a condition for life, making a career of welfare, but energizes a transition for life, leaving welfare and going to work.

The 12.98 years is reflected in the fact that we have had soaring rates in the kind of social conditions that intensify the challenge and the condition of welfare—a 600-percent increase in illegitimacy over the last three decades. I think we can agree that the welfare system we now have is a miserable failure, but if we do not build into this system things to change the outcomes, we are going to end up with the same problems just being tougher and tougher to solve.

Industrialist friends of mine tell me that whatever system you have, you can be assured that it is perfectly designed to give you what you are getting, and if you do not like what you are getting, you need to change the system.

This welfare bill that we are debating today will shorten the time from 12.98 years down. It will limit most welfare recipients to a 5-year lifetime limit on temporary assistance to needy families.

The big challenge of the 12-year problem is, What kind of habits do you build in 12 years?

I suspect that if you involve yourself in a routine for 12 years, it is very difficult ever to break that routine. Sociologists tell us, if you want to lose weight—that is one of the things I want to do—they say you have to change your habits for about 6 or 7 weeks in order to have a new habit of diet, a new way to consume food. We are talking about changing habits that people have hardened for 12.98 years on average.

One of the problems I have is that we have said we are going to change this by shortening the time period to 5 years. Well, 5 years will build a habit which is so strong that it is almost impossible to break. I think we need to find a way to restructure the system so that everyone looks at that 5-year period as if it is an insurance policy and they do not want to take any more out of that bank of 5 years than they need to at the moment because there might come a time sometime later in life when they would have a desperate need for assistance. I believe that is what we need to do.

So we need to help people understand that there is 5 years. That is a lifetime limit. You should only draw from that savings account or reserve for emergencies what you desperately need and not use that 5 years as a way to create the habit of dependence which will be almost impossible for you to break.

But this bill would allow for most individuals 5 years—5 years—without work. Five years without work would build such a habit that I believe we would nearly disable the individuals, as we have with our current system.

I was stunned when I read in one of my home State papers last year that there was an experiment under a waiver granted by the Federal Government where they invited 140 welfare recipients to show up at a Tyson Foods plant. Only half of them showed up for work. They were invited to come in to look for a job. Of the half that showed up, only 39 accepted jobs. Of the 39 that accepted jobs, fewer than 30 were on the job a week after.

See, what we have done is we have built habits. We have established a condition for welfare. We do not have welfare as a transition, as a place of movement; it has become a place of repose. I believe we need to change that. For us to say that, even under this bill, which is a significant reform, for us to say that we would allow people to have 5 straight years without work, where your self-esteem or your skills, your motivation would atrophy, would wither—if you do not use a muscle for 5 weeks, it gets weak. If you do not do not use it for 5 months, it almost disappears. If you do not use it for 5 years, it is gone.

We have here the most important muscle in human character—self-esteem, skills, motivations. We are still providing in this bill that for as long as 5 years you can simply be there not working. The bill, as it stands, requires 15 percent of the unexempted population to work in the first year period, and 25 percent in the second year period—25 percent. That is one out of four. So for three out of four, they could go right by the first 2-year period and not even be involved in work.

I believe, though, as a result of this, that welfare recipients, other than that 25 percent who actually went to work, could just choose to coast along for the full 5 years of benefits with no additional incentive to get a job. I think that is where this bill needs correction. It needs dramatic correction.

I propose to amend this welfare bill to allow welfare recipients, able-bodied welfare recipients without infant children, to collect only 24 months of consecutive temporary assistance-to-needy-families benefits. At the end of those 2 years, if the recipient still refuses to work, I say, cut the benefit. What this really does is not result in cut benefits; this results in more people being willing to work.

Instead of saying to an individual who gets on welfare, if you work the system, you can last for 5 years, create the habits of reliance, create the habits of repose, reject the habits of industry and work; this would basically say, you better get to work, learning to get a job right away, because after 2 years, in spite of the fact that there is a 5-year lifetime limit, there is a 24-month consecutive receipt-of-benefit limit for able-bodied adults without infant children.

If a welfare recipient then decides not to work in the 2-year time span, the payment would cease. By doing this, we simply hope to inject a concept which is too novel which ought to be commonplace. That is the concept that work is beneficial and that it pays better and is better than welfare. Otherwise, we are simply going to be tempting people to stay on and approximate, or approach at least, as much as they can of the 12.98 years of time on welfare, which is now a debilitating and disabling influence in the American culture for too many Americans.

Our intention is to leave the time period between any times you consume your 24 consecutive months total up to the States, so that recipients could not leave the welfare rolls and sign up again a week later. I think States could make these judgments about what kind of interval that would be needed between the 24-month periods. Our central point, our responsibility here, is to say that we want to provide as part of the structure of our reform the energy to change, legislation that changes welfare from being a lifestyle to being a transition. We want to start to energize a commitment on the part of recipients to make the changes in the way they live so that they avoid prolonged exposures to the welfare system and find themselves at an earlier time being capable of sustaining themselves.

We want welfare recipients to look at this 5-year period as a lifetime cushion, not to be consumed in the first need or the second need, hopefully never to be consumed. Our objective should be that no one ever bumps the 5-year limit. Our objective should be that we energize people to go to work so quickly and so enthusiastically that they maintain their reserve to the day they die.

Permitting able-bodied welfare recipients to remain on assistance for a straight 5-year-long block of time simply would reinforce, reteach, perpetuate, and underscore the current cycle of dependence. We need to stop this cycle of dependence, not just for individuals, but for what it teaches to our children. Welfare has become an intergenerational phenomenon, where people are on so long that their children grow up knowing only one lifestyle—it is welfare. By limiting the uninterrupted block of time that welfare recipients remain on the rolls, we will reduce the level of dependence on government assistance.

Welfare can be habit forming, and has been habit forming. It can be addictive. It can be destructive, and it has been. We need to take the structural components of the welfare system, which are dehumanizing, demeaning and disabling, out of the system. We need to energize each individual to view welfare as transitional. We should do that by saying there can be no more than 24 consecutive months on welfare for any able-bodied individual without infant children, unless they will work.

I just indicate that on Tuesday of this last week President Clinton ordered that in case we do not pass welfare reform in the next few months, the Department of Health and Human Services will give States the power to cut off benefits if an able-bodied adult refuses to work after 2 years. This is not a Draconian message. This is a message and this is a concept called for by the President of the United States.

For us to deliver a welfare system back to the American people which reinforces, underlines, and strengthens the bad habit of long-term dependency would not only be an affront to the American people, but it would be our failure to respond to a President who has asked us to do much better. There is something much better that we should be doing, and something we can do. If we want to break the long-term aspects, the intergenerational aspects of welfare, we have to be a part of this teaching idea in a real way.

When I was Governor of the State of Missouri and I had the great privilege of serving the people of my State, we came to Washington to ask for a waiver, a waiver from the regulations of the Federal Government. The waiver was simply this: We said, please give Missouri the right to say to welfare recipients, if you do not make sure your kids are in school, you will not get your full benefit. It was a way of saying welfare is not a place where you can throw responsibility to the wind. It was a way of saying, if you are a parent, you have to be responsible for at least some fundamental basic things, like getting your kids to school, because we do not want your kids to stay at home and learn welfare, we want your kids to go to school and learn how to be productive. We were able to get that waiver. The program was called People Attaining Self-Sufficiency, PASS. PASS had some reference to school. We wanted kids to pass in school by having good attendance.

I think there is another part of the structure of welfare reform that we should embrace as we send the bill to the President of the United States. We should not have to have States coming to Washington, waiting 2 or 3 years, filling out enough paperwork to choke a horse in order to have the privilege of saying to people, "We expect you to make sure your kids are in school or we are not going to make sure your check is in the mail." It is that simple. It is very fundamental. If you are on welfare, your kids should be in school, because it is especially important to break the intergenerational chain of dependence. Part of this measure is to make sure we say to the individuals, "You have some responsibility."

Another important concept of this amendment is that it would allow States to require temporary assistance to needy families and food stamp recipients to either have a high school education or work toward attaining a high school education. It is my judgment that it is not very realistic to say to people, "We are sending you to work, but you do not have to have the kind of fundamental and basic skills that come from education." I am not talking about worker training here, I am talking about education. I am talking about the fact that an educated person can read the manual and train himself or herself. I am talking about the fundamental responsibility of culture, not the responsibility of a business to train people to do its business. I am talking about the fundamental responsibility of a culture to train its citizens by way of education.

Education is different, really, from training. Education is the basis upon which training builds. A person who cannot read or write will have a hard time, no matter how much training she gets. I believe if a person is going to be receiving this assistance that we need to say to them, "You are going to have to invest in yourself to the extent of having a high school education or a general equivalency diploma. The truth of the matter is you have a responsibility, and you have to be prepared to meet that responsibility."

As a matter of fact, this is a far more important thing than it has ever been before, because once we put a time limit on these matters, we need to energize people to be ready in order to fend for themselves when the time limit has expired. I hope we will have a 2-year time length on consecutive months of benefits, 24 months, and I believe in a 5-year lifetime benefit, as well. With that in mind we will have to make sure that people can fend for themselves at the expiration of that time.

Mr. President, I reserve the balance of my time, but I am happy to yield back my time on the amendment when all time is ready to be yielded back.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I see the distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee on the floor; is he seeking recognition?

Mr. DOMENICI. I wondered who on the Democratic side was going to oppose this amendment.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I was going to make a general statement. I will be introducing an amendment later. I was going to be making a short but general statement, if there is no objection to that.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, might I ask staff, perhaps they could confer with Senator LEAHY.

Is there somebody on your side that wants to respond to this amendment?

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I say to the distinguished Senator from New Mexico, I came to the floor because there was not anybody on the floor at this moment. I notice there that have been some quorum calls. I thought rather than hold up anything later on, as I would take probably less time than it would take now in discussing this, if I could just make a couple of comments about the nutrition aspects of the reconciliation bill.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I have no objection if the distinguished Senator from Missouri has no objection to temporarily setting this aside while the Senator from Vermont proceeds.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I wish to speak just briefly on matters involving nutrition aspects of the reconciliation bill. I will, later on, have amendments in that regard. It seems like this was a good time to speak.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, we need not set anything aside, but give him unanimous consent to proceed on a matter not related to this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MCCAIN). The unanimous-consent request by the Senator from New Mexico is agreed to, and the Senator from Vermont is recognized to speak.

Mr. LEAHY. I thank my distinguished friend from New Mexico, the distinguished Presiding Officer from Arizona, and the distinguished Senator from Missouri.

Mr. President, my message today is very simple—my concern is that the nutrition cuts in the reconciliation bill are going to make children go hungry if they are allowed to stay as they are.

At the beginning of this Congress, I attacked some of those people with the Contract With America crowd because they wanted to repeal the School Lunch Act, at that time in the name of balancing the budget. I also attacked them because they wanted to repeal the school breakfast program and then they wanted to repeal the summer food service program. I am not sure why they did that, but it was interesting to see how the American public reacted. They reacted with outrage.

Now I am afraid that the same American public is being fooled, because these nutrition cuts are now being made in a reconciliation bill. The same nutrition cuts that could not be made frontally are going to be made indirectly in the reconciliation bill.

It appears to me that the Contract With America crowd has totally abandoned its effort to balance the budget. Now they will settle for just taking food from children. The amendment to strike Medicaid without an offset means that senior citizens vote, but it shows they understand that children do not vote. If children could vote, there is no doubt in my mind these nutrition cuts would not be in this bill. In fact, if children could vote, the nutrition cuts that cut the school lunch, school breakfast, and summer reading programs would not even be attempted.

Nationwide, the nutrition cuts will take the equivalent of 20 billion meals from low-income families over the next 6 years. Children do not have political PAC's. Children do not vote. But now we find out what happens, children are the ones that will be hurt by these cuts.

If these cuts had something to do with balancing the budget, or were part of a larger effort to balance the budget, that would at least provide some justification. These programs that the Republican majority propose in child care food programs, these cuts hurt preschool-age children in day care homes in my home State of Vermont and in the rest of the Nation. Families with children will absorb at least 70 percent of the food stamp reductions. The impact on Vermont will be significant. The average food stamp benefit will drop to 65 cents per person per meal. Defy anybody to eat at 65 cents per meal. I think parents will have a very difficult time feeding hungry children on a 65-cent budget. I remember my three children when they were going up could eat you out of house and home. They certainly could not be fed on 65 cents a meal.

Most of these food stamp cuts are done cleverly. There is $23 billion that comes from provisions that alter the mathematical factors and formula used in computer software, so nobody sees or figures it out. But the end result is there are lower benefits for children.

Children will go hungry because new computer programs are used. These hungry children will not even know they have been reformed; neither will their parents. All they will know is they are going to be a lot, lot hungrier once the computers turn on.

Over 95 percent of the cuts in nutrition programs are unrelated to welfare reform. Most cuts are simply implemented by computer software. I do not know how that represents reform—unless somebody feels that a computer can think and feed and knows hunger, and a computer can recognize hungry children.

In fact, in a couple of years, hunger among Vermont children will dramatically increase under this bill. As it is now written in the nutrition areas, it is antifamily, antichild, it is mean-spirited, and it is really beneath what a great country should stand for. It takes food from children, and it does virtually nothing to reform or improve nutrition programs. In fact, it is not even an attempt to balance the budget, so we can at least say we are doing that for the children in future years.

A lot of talk was made last year about the Contract With America and about how the budget will be balanced with real cuts. I said at that time that I did not think the people who were "talking that talk" would "walk the walk" by making the real cuts. I was right.

That net result of this Congress will be that the Agriculture Committee baseline is greatly reduced, and that other committees will get away without contributing a penny, let alone their fair share, toward balancing the budget. But what that means is, when it works its way down, it works its way down to children. Why? As I said before, children do not vote, children do not contribute to PAC's, children do not hire lobbyists, children do not get involved in campaigns. So children will go hungry. It is as simple as that. Everybody else gets protected.

The distinguished chairman of the Budget Committee was on the floor here a minute ago. I remember when he came before the Agriculture Committee in 1990. He called the Food Stamp Program "the backbone of our way of helping the needy in this country." I agreed with Senator DOMENICI when he said that. But now that backbone is being broken in this bill. In a couple of years, there will be a stream of news stories about hungry children standing in lines at soup kitchens, because over 80 percent of food stamp benefits go to families with children.

Let us not have a bill that punishes children because they cannot vote. Let us do what the distinguished Senator from New Mexico said in 1990. Let us remember our children. Let us remember the Food Stamp Program, which, as he said so eloquently, "is the backbone of our way of helping the needy in this country."

So, Mr. President, I will have amendments later on to improve this, unless improvements are made before that time. I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I understand that the Democratic side will have no one responding to the Senator from Missouri. If the Senator finishes, he can yield back the remainder of his time, and we will ask that they yield back any time they have, and the Senator's amendment will be final, unless the point of order lies, and the Senator will have time tomorrow to explain it.

I appreciate the comments of the distinguished Senator from Vermont. I say, however, that statements I made with reference to food stamps should not mean that the Senator from New Mexico does not think that, from time to time, we must look at the program, because it is frequently abused and abused in many ways. We have lent ourselves to some of that abuse by the way we have written the law.

I know we are setting about in this bill to reform food stamps and make sure that it is less fraudulently used. But I wanted to make sure that my entire thoughts about it, as I went before the committee in 1990, are at least here in principle in the RECORD today.

Mr. LEAHY. If the Senator will yield on that point, would the Senator from New Mexico agree with me that the Food Stamp Program, properly used, can be of extreme benefit to low-income children.

Mr. DOMENICI. There is no question about it. We do not have a better program—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. I admonish both Senators to observe the rules of the Senate. You must address each other through the Chair.

Mr. LEAHY. I believe I had, Mr. President. I believe I asked if the Senator would yield so I might ask him a question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. But the Chair did not rule. Without objection, the Senator from Vermont is recognized to ask a question of the Senator from New Mexico.

I think the Senator from Vermont knows the rules.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I repeat my question to the Senator from New Mexico. Would he not agree that the food stamp proposal, properly used, is extremely helpful in feeding low-income children in this country?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I was going to respond to the question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Certainly, I agree. I do not know that we have found a better way, yet, even with all of its faults, to get nutrition into the hands of the poor. I repeat that, however, I think the Senator from Vermont knows that no matter how good it is, it is frequently abused. We sometimes "right it" in ways that make it subject to being abused more so. I only wanted to make that comment. I agree that we have not yet found a better way. Cash benefits do not seem to work as well because, indeed, they are not used for nutritional items. If we keep a tight grasp on making sure they are not fraudulently traded and they are used for nutrition, we do not have anything better yet that I am aware of.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, my point is that we have seen some great changes in the Food Stamp Program, some very significant improvements, over the years. We have seen other improvements that we wait to come forth, like the use of electronic benefit transfer.

I have been very proud to work very closely with the now chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee and, before that, the ranking member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, the senior Senator from Indiana, in making these improvements. They have saved a lot of money. I also point out that the Food Stamp Program is extremely important.

During the last administration, 40,000 to 45,000 people were added every single week in the 4 years President Bush was President—40,000 to 45,000 every single week for 4 years were added. That is, in over 200 weeks they were added to the food stamp rolls.

Let me just remind my friend from New Mexico and others about this. When we talk about whether this program is utilized in a Republican or Democratic administration, it is a program for everybody. During the Bush administration, every single week, because of the way the economy was, 40,000 people were added, at the taxpayers' expense, to the food stamp rolls.

We have been fortunate with the efforts to balance the budget and improve the economy, and since President Clinton came in, 2 million people have been able to drop from the food stamp rolls, as compared to 40,000 people a week being added in the 200 weeks during the past administration. Two million people have now been taken off in this administration. That is good news for the economy and good news for the taxpayers. But it also points out that in both Democratic and Republican administrations, we should be protecting the Food Stamp Program.

Reform it? Yes. My point is, of course, that a computer program that simply cuts children off without reform is not reform. We should be willing to stand up as legislators and make the tough decisions on how to reform the Food Stamp Program, and not simply say to a computer program: Here, you do it. We cannot totally cut off children because they do not vote, they do not contribute, and they are not part of the political process. They will never complain.

We will not touch anything in areas of senior citizens, or anybody else, because they do vote and they do complain. By golly, those children—tough. Go hungry.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HATFIELD). Who seeks recognition?

Mr. ASHCROFT addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Thank you, Mr. President. I will make a few remarks about the amendment which I proposed.

I want to reinforce again the concept that we need to change the character of welfare. We need to change welfare from being a condition in which people exist to being a transition from dependency—not only from dependency but long-term dependency—to independence, to work, to growth, and to opportunity. If we are going to do that, we should not acquiesce to a 5-year limit which allows people to go onto welfare and just get on it and stay for 5 years without doing anything. We should require of individuals—or at least provide that States require of individuals—that a number of things be done.

One, we should say no longer can you stay on welfare for more than 24 months in any one stretch without going to work or preparing for work by taking work training and getting an education.

Second, we should say never can you stay on welfare if you do not fulfill your responsibility to send your kids to school. If you are going to be on welfare, your kids ought to be in school. Children who are in school are less of a burden to individuals on welfare than children who are allowed to stay home or otherwise avoid their responsibility.

Third, if we expect people eventually to become self-reliant in their own setting, we are going to have to ask those individuals to have fundamental educational qualifications as well. In my judgment, that is the reason we ought to allow States to require that individuals who are seeking to continue to receive welfare benefits either have or be in the process of attaining the kind of educational qualifications that would come with a high school diploma or a GED.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that all time be yielded back on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. ASHCROFT addressed the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 4942 TO AMENDMENT NO. 4941

(Purpose: To provide that a family may not receive TANF assistance for more than 24 consecutive months at a time unless an adult in the family is working or a State exempts an adult in the family from working for reasons of hardship)

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I send my amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Missouri (Mr. ASHCROFT) proposes an amendment numbered 4942 to amendment No. 4941.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment, insert the following:

for 60 months (whether or not consecutive) after the date the State program funded under this part commences. However, a State shall not use any part of such grant to provide assistance to a family that includes an adult who has received assistance under any State program funded under this part attributable to funds provided by the Federal Government for more than 24 consecutive months unless such an adult is—

(ii) exempted by the State from such 24 consecutive month limitation by reason of hardship, pursuant to subparagraph (C)."

(B) MINOR CHILD EXCEPTION.—In determining the number of months for which an individual who is a parent or pregnant has received assistance under the State program funded under this part for purposes of subparagraph (A), the State shall disregard any month for which such assistance was provided with respect to the individual and during which the individual was—

(i) a minor child; and

(ii) not the head of a household or married to the head of a household.

(C) HARDSHIP EXCEPTION.—

(VII) neglect or deprivation of medical care.

(D) RULE OF INTERPRETATION.—Subparagraph (A) of this paragraph and subparagraph (B) of paragraph (I) shall not be interpreted to require any State to provide assistance to any individual for any period of time under the State program funded under this part.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I ask unanimous consent that all time be yielded back on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4943 TO AMENDMENT NO. 4941

(Purpose: To provide that a state may sanction a family's TANF assistance if the family includes an adult who fails to ensure that their minor dependent children attend school)

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Missouri (Mr. ASHCROFT) proposes an amendment numbered 4943 to amendment No. 4941.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

Mr. DOMENICI. I object. I do not know what the amendment is.

Mr. President, I no longer have an objection, if he would renew his request. I understand what he is doing now. I did not understand. I do now.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

In the language proposed to be inserted by the amendment, strike all after the first word and insert the following:

SANCTION WELFARE RECIPIENTS FOR FAILING TO ENSURE THAT MINOR DEPENDENT CHILDREN ATTEND SCHOOL.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A State to which a grant is made under section 403 shall not be prohibited from sanctioning a family that includes an adult who has received assistance under any State program funded under this part attributable to funds provided by the Federal Government or under the food stamp program, as defined in section 3(h) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977, if such adult fails to ensure that the minor dependent children of such adult attend school as required by the law of the State in which the minor children reside.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, without the Senator losing his right to the floor, might I ask unanimous consent to have the privilege of the floor to ask a question of the Senator?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. Is it the purpose of the amendment—it is perfectly legitimate and proper—to make sure that there is no second-degree amendment offered to the Senator's amendment?

Mr. ASHCROFT. That is correct.

Mr. DOMENICI. I believe I have authority from the other side. If the Senator wants to propose a unanimous consent request that there be no second-degree amendment, it would be granted. Does the Senator prefer not to do that?

Mr. ASHCROFT. Yes. I would prefer to have the amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 4944 TO AMENDMENT NO. 4941

(Purpose: To provide that a state may sanction a family's TANF assistance if the family includes an adult who does not have, or is not working toward attaining, a secondary school diploma or its recognized equivalent)

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk, and I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Missouri (Mr. ASHCROFT) proposes an amendment numbered 4944 to amendment No. 4941.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

In the language proposed to be stricken by the amendment, strike all after the first word and insert the following:

REQUIREMENT FOR HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA OR EQUIVALENT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A State to which a grant is made under section 403 shall not be prohibited from sanctioning a family that includes an adult who is older than age 20 and younger than age 51 and who has received assistance under any State program funded under this part attributable to funds provided by the Federal Government or under the food stamp program, as defined in section 3(h) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977, if such adult does not have, or is not working toward attaining, a secondary school diploma or its recognized equivalent unless such adult has been determined in the judgment of medical, psychiatric, or other appropriate professionals to lack the requisite capacity to complete successfully a course of study that would lead to a secondary school diploma or its recognized equivalent.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, there are three basic thrusts that are undertaken in these amendments. They are the conversion of a system from being a system of conditioning people to be dependent to transitioning people to be at work.

The first thrust is that we would have a 24-consecutive-month limit on welfare for those who refuse to work or get training at the end of the 24 months. It seems to me that is something that the President of the United States called for last week and which we ought to have.

The second component of this strategy is to say that those who are on welfare should have their children in school. It is not something that is unknown or mysterious. The fact of the matter is that high school dropouts average $12,809 a year, a poverty-level standard of living for a family of three. For an individual who has a high school degree, the average is $18,737, a 46-percent higher income than the average for dropouts.

Half of those arrested for drug violations in 1995 did not have a high school diploma. And the preponderance of all crimes, 40 percent of all crimes, were committed by those who did not finish high school. It is time for us to ask those who are involved in the welfare system by way of receiving benefits under temporary assistance to needy families to make sure that their children are in school.

A high school degree is a key to escaping from the welfare trap. Statistics show that it keeps kids out of jail. Every parent has a principal and primary responsibility to make sure their children receive the kinds of fundamentals that will allow them to fend for themselves. Every child can attend school in America. Every child can earn a high school diploma. It costs nothing but commitment and responsibility. Too often this opportunity is ignored—even trashed. Teens drop out of school, grade school, or skip classes. This is a tragic waste of a precious resource, one on which our culture must rely.

All of our Government institutions should do everything possible to ensure that children go to school and earn a degree. Government should certainly not be paying parents to let their kids play hooky and skip school. If you are on welfare, your kids should be in school. Parents should not be co-conspirators in perpetuating their children in a lifetime on and off of welfare, in and out of minimum-wage jobs, and irresponsibility. Children must go to school in order to break the cycle of dependency, to change welfare from being a long-term condition into being a transition.

The amendment that I propose allows States—I repeat, allows States—to sanction welfare recipients of the temporary assistance to needy families that do not ensure that their children are attending school. It also allows States to sanction food stamp recipients who do not send their children to school. Children who graduate from a welfare system should be armed with a degree rather than with a habit of dependence. It is the key to self-reliance and success.

We have watched, as the Nation has watched, the Olympics. We need our full team on the field whenever we play. Even “The Dream Team” would have a tough time if they did not have the entire capacity of the team available as a resource. And yet we allow our citizens sometimes to ask for our help and to persist in receiving it without equipping themselves, without making a commitment to themselves. The last component of my amendments is really a way of saying if you are going to be on welfare, you have to have or be working toward a high school diploma so you can work for yourself and help yourself.

It is no mystery. States may require that temporary assistance to needy families and food stamp recipients work toward attaining a high school diploma or its equivalent as a condition of receiving welfare assistance. This requirement would not apply if an individual was determined in the judgment of medical, psychiatric, or other appropriate professionals to lack the requisite capacity to attain a high school diploma or GED.

During the debate this year in the Senate, Senator SIMON once said, “We can have all the job training in the world, but if we do not face the problem of basic education, we are not going to do what we ought to do for this country.”

I cannot agree more with that statement. It does not pay us to provide job training upon job training upon job training when welfare recipients have not achieved proficiency in the fundamental underlying skills of mathematics, English, and reading which provide people with the tools to benefit from job training and to assimilate changes in the job market. We do not have jobs and crafts that do not change. They all have new processes and new procedures. As technology marches on, it is important to make sure that individuals cannot only get the right kind of job training but they possess the fundamental characteristic of being educated in order to be able to take advantage of job training when it comes along.

A person over 18 without a high school diploma averages $12,800 in earnings; with a high school diploma, $18,700 in earnings. A $6,000 difference is the difference between dependence and independence, the difference between self-reliance and reliance on Government. The U.S. Sentencing Commission determined that 40 percent of the individuals who commit crimes are individuals without high school diplomas. The Commission also found that these individuals are responsible for 50 percent of all drug violations. If people are going to receive welfare benefits, they should at least be working toward the fundamental equipping, enabling, freeing achievement of having a high school education.

Mr. President, I would be pleased together with the opponents of this amendment on the other side of the aisle to yield back the remainder of the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has yielded back the remainder—

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I need somebody from the other side of the aisle to yield back their time or we cannot proceed with any other amendments.

Mr. CONRAD. We are willing to yield back the time on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded back.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, pursuant to the previous understanding, I believe the distinguished Senator is entitled to offer his amendment at this point.

AMENDMENT NO. 4945

(Purpose: To expand State flexibility in order to encourage food stamp recipients to look for work and to prevent hardship)

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I would call up my amendment that is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. CONRAD], for himself and Mr. LEAHY, proposes an amendment numbered 4945.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 6, strike lines 14 through 16 and insert the following:

Section 5(d)(7) of the Food Stamp Act of 1977 (7 U.S.C. 2014(d)(7)) is amended by striking “21 years of age or younger” and inserting “19 years of age or younger (17 years of age or younger in fiscal year 2002)”.

On page 21, line 3, strike “$5,100” and insert “$4,650”.

On page 49, line 3, strike “10” and insert “20”.

On page 49, line 12, strike “1 month” and insert “2 months”.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. CONRAD. I thank the Chair.

I am joined in this amendment by my colleague from Vermont, Senator LEAHY, the ranking member of the Senate Agriculture Committee. This amendment addresses a serious problem with the food stamp provisions of the welfare bill that is before us now.

As I describe our amendment, I would like to bring my colleagues' attention to the chart beside me and the number 600,000 because that is the impact of the food stamp provisions before us; 600,000 Americans will lose eligibility each month under the provision that is in the bill before us.

The 600,000 estimated by the Congressional Budget Office is to be the number of people who would be terminated from the Food Stamp Program in any given month because they are unable to find a job within the 4-month time limit provided for in this legislation. Our amendment insists on work, and that is as it should be. But it promotes State flexibility by giving States an option to assist people who would otherwise be at risk of going hungry. Our amendment achieves these goals in two ways. First, the amendment would expand the State option to exercise a hardship exemption. The amendment increases the hardship exemption from 10 percent to 20 percent of the eligible population and makes it consistent with the AFDC block grant.

Simply stated, we are allowing States, instead of being able to declare 10 percent of their eligible population hardship cases not bound by the 4-month limit, to increase that at State option to 20 percent.

Second, the amendment allows States to count job search as work for 2 months instead of the 1 month provided in the bill before us. I want to be clear to my colleagues that the cost of this amendment is fully offset over the 6-year budget period. The Agriculture Committee will still be in full compliance with its budget reconciliation target.

Mr. DOMENICI. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. CONRAD. I would be happy to yield to my colleague if we do not have an interruption.

Mr. DOMENICI. I want to use my time.

Mr. President, in behalf of the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Committee, I understand the amendment offered by Senator CONRAD allows States to exempt up to 20 percent of the able-bodied 18 to 50-year-olds from the work requirement and allow up to 2 months of job search per year to count as work.

Mr. CONRAD. That is correct.

Mr. DOMENICI. I believe the Food Stamp Program should have a strong work requirement as the Senator has indicated. I am now speaking in behalf of the chairman of the Agriculture Committee. Senator LUGAR understands the Senator's concern about the individuals who are willing to work may be unable to find a job due to circumstances beyond their control. Senator LUGAR continues on that in behalf of the Agriculture Committee, he finds the offsets acceptable and the amendment acceptable.

So at this point I want the Senator to know I am going to yield back all the time we have in opposition and indicate for the RECORD we are willing to accept the amendment.

Mr. CONRAD. I appreciate that from the able manager of the bill. I will just proceed briefly to outline the rationale for the amendment and then yield back our time as well.

Mr. President, everybody here agrees that work is important and that food stamp benefits should be temporary. But the work requirement provision in the pending welfare bill would have the unintended effect of preventing people who want to find work from securing a job. How can my colleagues seriously argue that people can be expected to find a job, to sit through an interview when they have not eaten? It does not work. I understand and support the work ethic in America, but I also believe our society has achieved a level of decency where we will not deny food assistance to people who have been unable to find a job in just 4 months.

The reason I felt it was important to offer this amendment is I have dealt with people who are in this exact circumstance. I remember very well a young fellow who worked construction in my State—very frankly, not the smartest guy in the world, and he had a hard time finding work, but he was able to work construction. He was a strong kid and he was able to work in that way. But the construction season in my state is not very long. You are lucky if you can be in construction 6 months out of the year in North Dakota some years.

This young fellow would work during the construction season, which usually starts in April in North Dakota, but come winter, November, the construction season ended. He was not able to find additional work. And I tell you, he came from a family that had next to nothing. He had next to nothing, lived in a very modest basement apartment, and that fellow needed some help during the winter to eat. That is just the reality of the circumstance.

Under this legislation, after 4 months, that guy would not get any help. Is that really what we want to do in America? Is that really what we want to do? We want to say to somebody, if you cannot find a job in 4 months, you do not get any food assistance? Is that what we have come to in this country? I find that hard to believe.

I really must say to my colleagues, if that is where we are, then something is radically wrong in this country. America is better than that. We are a wealthy nation, with a rich and abundant food supply. We should not knowingly adopt a national policy which promotes hunger. Certainly we should promote work, but not cut people off from food if they have not been able to find a job in 4 months. This amendment gives States the option to provide food for people who are unable to find a job within 4 months, at least 20 percent they can exempt as hardship cases, and they can count 2 months of looking for work as part of work.

As I already mentioned and as the chart serves to remind us, in addition to the number of people cut off the Food Stamp Program because of the tightened eligibility requirements and work registration requirements, the Congressional Budget Office has estimated the welfare bill before us will cut 600,000 people off of food stamps each month because they cannot find a job within the 4-month time limit. These 600,000 people will then be at risk of going hungry, more worried about finding their next meal than finding a job.

I cannot believe that is what we are about here in the U.S. Senate. According to a study done in 1993, 83 percent of the people who would be affected by this draconian provision are below 50 percent of the poverty line. We are talking about folks who do not have anything. Now we are going to say to them, "If you do not get a job within 4 months, you do not get to eat"? I cannot believe we are going to do that.

I am all for strong work requirements. I introduced my own welfare reform bill that had the toughest work requirements of any bill before us. But this is not a work provision. This is a hunger provision. We are talking about food for people who cannot find a job. I think it is entirely reasonable to give States the option to continue food stamp coverage for an additional month of intensive job search, to help make sure that poor people complete the transition from welfare to work.

The Senate-passed welfare reform bill that was supported by 87 Senators contained 6 months of food stamp eligibility for people in this category. Bipartisan efforts to reform the welfare system, including the Chafee-Breaux approach and the Specter-Biden proposal, also contained a 6-month food stamp time limit. These are far more humane and realistic provisions.

Mr. President, for those who think the majority of people affected by this provision are just scamming the system and are not interested in working, let me put this in perspective by translating it into dollar terms. Under the Food Stamp Program, the maximum level of benefits for a single person is $119 a month. That is about $4 a day. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that every one of the 600,000 who cannot find a job would accept job training or a work slot if one was available through the Food Stamp Employment Training Program. These 600,000 people are, consequently, receiving less than $4 a day in food stamps.

I ask my colleagues to think seriously about what this means, less than $4 a day in food stamps. Does it not make sense if there were actually minimum wage jobs available for $4.25 an hour that individuals would work at these jobs? Why would anyone trade a $4.25-an-hour job for $4 a day in food stamps? I do not think the vast majority of people would make that kind of trade. Clearly, we are talking about circumstances in which those jobs are not available. People cannot find those jobs. This is not a case of they are better off taking welfare than taking a job for $4 in food assistance. You would be much better off, clearly, with $4 an hour in a job.

Before I close, I want to spend just a minute talking about the hardship exemption. Again, I share the view of those who believe we must set limits and push people from welfare to work. But I think it is important to recognize there are people who just do not have the skills to find a job, or else have some personal hardship that means they will not be employed after 4 months on food stamps. Every one of us know people who, frankly, are marginal in the employment arena. They cannot find work. They are not educated, they are not trained, they may have one or more disabilities.

It is important, I think, also, to consider the devastating effects of natural disasters or economic downturn on a particular area, which may make it difficult for people to find employment in 4 months. If you have a natural disaster like a hurricane, tornado, earthquake, or a series of disasters as we have seen in California, all of a sudden an area may not have much in the way of employment. People may not be able to find a job.

I think it is also important for us to understand this issue affects urban areas and could cause increased tensions in some of America's biggest cities. A recent study showed that for every McDonald's opening in New York City, there were 14 applicants. They wanted to work, wanted to have a job. For whatever reason, they were not able to find a job. That circumstance has improved because the national economy has improved, but we all know the economy is subjected to cycles. Sometimes it is good and strong and sometimes it is not so good, not so strong.

What are we going to say to people who cannot find a job after 4 months? We are going to deny them food stamps? What are we telling them? Telling them to go to the garbage can to find something to eat?

I have people right now going through my neighborhood who are looking in garbage cans trying to find something to eat, and my neighborhood in this town is eight blocks from where we are right now, eight blocks due east of the Capitol of the United States. I have people every day going through my neighborhood, going through garbage cans. If we want more of it, I suppose we just stick with what is in the underlying bill.

I might say it is not just urban areas, but rural areas as well. There are parts of my State which have very low populations, small communities, and jobs are scarce in some of these areas. An individual who has worked hard for 20 years in a small business in a rural area, and maybe that business fails, now this person may be willing to work all night and all day if given the chance, but the harsh reality is he or she may not be able to find a job. The truth of the matter is, it may take more than 4 months for a new business to come to that community.

We need to give States the option to offer food assistance to hard-working people who experience extreme hardship. It is wrong to force States to cut these people off from food assistance. Instead, we should give States the flexibility to continue to provide food stamps to a limited number, up to 20 percent of individuals who face some special hardship. Mr. President, 20 percent of the eligible population, instead of 10 percent that is in the underlying bill.

Mr. President, it may not be politically popular to care about adults who are hungry and cannot find a job, but I want my colleagues to think about what it would be like to be without food. We are not talking here about the luxuries. We are talking about food. It strikes me it is bad policy, and bad for the country, to knowingly create a class of desperate people across the country, struggling for the most basic human necessity, food.

Fundamentally, it does not make sense to deny food to people who are working hard to find a job and cannot find one. These people are less, not more likely to find a job if they are spending their time trying to find their next meal instead of trying to find their next job.

I ask my colleagues to join me in giving States additional flexibility to continue to provide food assistance to people who are unable to find work within the 4 months provided for in this legislation.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4945) was agreed to.

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I have two amendments by Senator LIEBERMAN which we are going to accept.

AMENDMENT NO. 4946

(Purpose: To add provisions to reduce the incidence of statutory rape)

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, on behalf of Senator LIEBERMAN, I send an amendment to the desk. This amendment has been agreed to on both sides. I ask unanimous consent that it be agreed to and that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], for Mr. LIEBERMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 4946.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Section 2101 is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (7) through (9) as paragraphs (8) through (10), respectively;

(2) in paragraph (10), as so redesignated, by inserting “, and protection of teenage girls from pregnancy as well as predatory sexual behavior” after “birth”; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (6), the following:

(7) An effective strategy to combat teenage pregnancy must address the issue of male responsibility, including statutory rape culpability and prevention. The increase of teenage pregnancies among the youngest girls is particularly severe and is linked to predatory sexual practices by men who are significantly older.

(A) It is estimated that in the late 1980's the rate for girls age 14 and under giving birth increased 26 percent.

(B) Data indicates that at least half of the children born to teenage mothers are fathered by adult men. Available data suggests that almost 70 percent of births to teenage girls are fathered by men over age 20.

(C) Surveys of teen mothers have revealed that a majority of such mothers have histories of sexual and physical abuse, primarily with older adult men.

Section 402(a)(1)(A) of the Social Security Act, as added by section 2103(a)(1), is amended—

(1) by redesignating clauses (vi) and (vii) as clauses (vii) and (viii), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after clause (v), the following:

“(vi) Conduct a program, designed to reach State and local law enforcement officials, the education system, and relevant counseling services, that provides education and training on the problem of statutory rape so that teenage pregnancy prevention programs may be expanded in scope to include men.

Section 2908 is amended—

(1) by inserting “(a) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—” before “It”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

(b) JUSTICE DEPARTMENT PROGRAM ON STATUTORY RAPE.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—Not later than January 1, 1997, the Attorney General shall establish and implement a program that—

(A) studies the linkage between statutory rape and teenage pregnancy, particularly by predatory older men committing repeat offenses; and

(B) educates State and local criminal law enforcement officials on the prevention and prosecution of statutory rape, focusing in particular on the commission of statutory rape by predatory older men committing repeat offenses, and any links to teenage pregnancy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 4946) was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, that was an amendment to minimize the incidence of statutory rape that is occurring in the United States.

AMENDMENT NO. 4947

(Purpose: To require States which receive grants under title XX of the Social Security Act to dedicate 1 percent of such grants to programs and services for minors)

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I have a second amendment on behalf of Senator LIEBERMAN. I make the same unanimous-consent request. I ask unanimous consent that this amendment be agreed to and that the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

I send the amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], for Mr. LIEBERMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 4947.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Section 2903 is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a) IN GENERAL.—" before "Section"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

(b) DEDICATION OF BLOCK GRANT SHARE.—Section 2001 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1397) is amended—

(1) in the matter of preceding paragraph (1), by inserting "(a)" before "For"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) For any fiscal year in which a State receives an allotment under section 2003, such State shall dedicate an amount equal to 1 percent of such allotment to fund programs and services that teach minors to—

"(1) avoid out-of-wedlock pregnancies; and"

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 4947) was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, the subject matter of this amendment is a 1 percent setaside from the social services block grant which has been agreed to on our side by the respective chairmen of the committee.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. If I might ask the manager of the bill, Senator BYRD and I would like to introduce a piece of legislation. Inasmuch as I see no other Member seeking recognition to offer an amendment to the pending business, I ask unanimous consent to proceed as if in morning business with the understanding that if additional amendments become available, we—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DOMENICI. Reserving the right to object, could you give us an estimate as to how much time you might use?

Mr. DORGAN. I ask for 30 minutes and would expect not to use the entire 30 minutes.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I will not object so long as the Senator would add that the time used, even though it is as in morning business, would be charged against the time remaining on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. DORGAN and Mr. BYRD pertaining to the introduction of S. 1978 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. BUMPERS addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. MACK). The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, the Senator from Florida, Senator GRAHAM, offered an amendment on behalf of himself and the Senator from Arkansas Friday afternoon. Unhappily, I was not here and did not get a chance to speak on it. I would like to seize the opportunity now to just make a few remarks.

Before doing that, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to yield to the Senator from North Dakota to allow him to lay down an amendment without debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4948

(Purpose: To strike provisions relating to the Indian child care set aside)

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk sponsored by myself and cosponsored by Senator MCCAIN and Senator INOUE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN], for himself, Mr. MCCAIN, and Mr. INOUE, proposes an amendment numbered 4948.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

In section 2813(l), strike subparagraph (B).

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I intend to discuss this amendment briefly at some point following the presentation by the Senator from Arkansas, and I very much appreciate his indulgence.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a moment?

Mr. BUMPERS. Yes.

Mr. DOMENICI. This is child support regarding Indians?

We passed it on voice vote on Thursday.

Mr. BUMPERS. Will the Senator repeat that. I am sorry; I did not hear him.

Mr. DOMENICI. I just addressed the amendment sent to the desk.

Mr. DORGAN. It is a different amendment. It deals with the 3 percent set aside, and I do not believe it has been passed.

Mr. DOMENICI. Could we have the amendment?

I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

AMENDMENT NO. 4936

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, the amendment being offered by Senator GRAHAM of Florida and me is the same one we offered last year. It might have a few minor changes in it, but essentially it simply says that the block grant formula in this welfare bill should be changed to take into consideration the number of poor children in each State.

I am not very crazy about this bill to begin with, but I cannot possibly vote for a bill that discriminates against the State of Arkansas to the extent this one does. It is not just Arkansas, it is particularly Southern States, but a lot of other States get caught up in it, too.

Under the formula, the District of Columbia will get $4,222 for each welfare recipient and the State of Arkansas will get $390. Why is a child in the District of Columbia worth 11 times as much as a poor child in Arkansas? That is a legitimate question, is it not?

I will tell you the answer. The answer is, through the years, the Federal Government has matched the States to some percentage or another. It is not the same in every State. For example, in my State, because we are a relatively poor State, we get a big match, I think 73 to 75 percent. So for every dollar we put up, we get about $3 from the Federal Government. The District of Columbia does not do quite as well. But the reason the District of Columbia gets such a staggering amount of money per child is because they have used a tremendous amount of their resources to put into the AFDC Program.

That is perfectly laudable and I am not criticizing the District of Columbia. But I will tell you something, and it gives me no joy to say it publicly, I come from a State which has one of the lowest per capita incomes in the Nation. We are a poor State. We have been ever since the War Between the States. We have tried everything in the world and continue to strive to do everything we can to improve the plight of our people. We tried to improve our economy so there would be more jobs and better paying jobs, and in the past several years we have met with some success. But we are not New York, California, or New Jersey in per capita income.

The reason this bill is fundamentally flawed and unfair is because it says to you, the State of Arkansas, this is what you have received for the last 3 years, 1991 through 1994, and that is what you are going to continue to receive. In short, if you were poor, no matter how hard you tried to do better under the AFDC program, if you were poor and simply could not do it, it is tough.

What does this bill do? It says we are locking you in on the basis of what you got during that 3-year period. I do not care if you had floods, tornadoes, if you had a wave of immigrants move into your State, which brings a lot of poverty to States like Florida, you are still going to get what you got for 3 years, on average. There is a little 2½ percent "gimmie" in the bill, but not enough to amount to anything.

One of the things that really is a travesty in this bill is the treatment of AFDC administrative costs. I hate to say these things because I am not jumping on other States. I am simply trying to defend my own. But look what has happened in New York and New Jersey. The nationwide average, in 1994, of administrative costs for administering the program we have now was $53.42. During that same period of time, the average cost of administering the program in New York was $106.68 and in New Jersey $105.26. What do we do under this bill? We lock that administrative cost in and say we will continue to compensate you, no matter how inefficient you may have been.

I am sorry the Senator from West Virginia left the floor. The average administrative cost for administering the AFDC Program in West Virginia is $13.34, and that is what they are going to get through the year 2000 if this bill passes, while New York will be receiving eight times as much. We are going to give them that, lock them in, no matter how inefficient they may be in administering the program.

One of the interesting things about this bill was pointed out in the New York Times this morning. Let us take my State as an example, and let us assume push comes to shove and we are running out of money, we are suddenly not going to be able to continue. The Federal Government says, "That's tough, we gave you the block grant, you have to live with it. We do not care how many poor children you have, we are going to give you what you got as an average between 1991 and 1994, and you will live with it. Do not come back up here with your hand out."

Do you know what they allow the States to do? Kick people off welfare. Each State can make it's work requirements as stringent as they want to make them. What does the Federal Government do in such a case? We do not say, "If you kick those people off welfare we are going to quit giving you the money for that family." We continue to give them the money for the family. So there is an incentive to the States, if they have any difficulty at all with the program, to kick people off, knowing they are going to continue to get the same amount of money.

I do not want to take too much time. I know there is not a lot of time between now and 2 o'clock when we go to the agricultural appropriations bill. But one of the most troubling things about this bill, completely aside from this grossly unfair funding formula, is that I have heard people in the U.S. Senate and in Congress say things that are so punitive in nature. It is as though we are passing this bill to punish people for being poor. You can call that bleeding heart liberalism—call it whatever you want to call it. I am not for keeping people on the welfare cycle. I am for reforming welfare, to make jobs a lot more attractive to those people. I am for reforming welfare so women can have day care for their children and get job training and find a job, preferably one that provides health care so we do not have to pay for Medicaid for them.

But in the debate, just to use my own State as an example, there is sort of the suggestion that the youngsters, the babies that are born in College Station, AR, which is an unspeakably poor area, have the same opportunities as the children born in Pleasant Valley, our most affluent suburb. And everybody who does not happen to make it as well as the people in Pleasant Valley, somehow or another we seem to think they are lowdown.

I said on the floor before and I will say it again, my brother went to Harvard Law School, courtesy of the taxpayers of the United States on the GI bill. We have a little difficult time sometimes discussing these issues, but I remind him that it was more than Harvard Law School that made him successful.

I would not be a U.S. Senator if I had not been able to go to a good law school, like Northwestern, also compliments of the U.S. Government, who paid for all of it, except what Betty made working.

So I remind my brother about the largess of the Federal Government, which I have been trying to pay back all of my life, by thanking the taxpayers, being a good public servant, and doing my dead-level best to make this a better country for my children and grandchildren to grow up in. But I also remind my brother that we were also fortunate because we chose our parents well. These AFDC children did not choose their parents well. Somehow there is a certain vindictiveness, a punitive aspect to this bill toward those children, a lot of whom are going to suffer under the terms of this bill, and suffer a lot, because they had the temerity not to choose their parents well.

So, I do not have any trouble voting against this bill, especially because it discriminates against my State in a totally unacceptable way. I know my State. I was Governor of my State. I know where the money comes from, and I know where it goes. We have areas along the Mississippi River, which we call the delta, and if we are going to pass a bill to alleviate the tax burden on people in the District of Columbia because their people are moving out because of crime or the tax rate or something else, I want to include the delta.

I can tell you, you will not find an inner city in America with more deplorable poverty than you will find in the delta of Mississippi and Arkansas. So I want them to have the same break.

As I say, if we were not struggling to do the best we can, I would not object. But we do not have the money that New York, New Jersey, California, and other States have to put into this program. It is not just Arkansas. Mr. President, your home State of Florida, as you know all too well without me saying it, will lose $1 billion under this bill.

The two Senators from Texas voted against the Graham-Bumpers proposal last year—and I assume they will do it again—and it cost the State of Texas $3 billion. And on it goes. It is a grossly unfair formula. It is indefensible.

In this morning's New York Times, my position is vindicated at least by one columnist, David Ellwood, who is professor of public policy at Harvard School of Government. He says, and this is just a portion of it:

States would get block grants to use for welfare and work programs. But the grants for child care, job training, workfare, and cash assistance combined would amount to less than $15 per poor child per week in * * * Mississippi and Arkansas.

Mr. President, $15 a week for all of those things.

Mr. DOMENICI. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BUMBERS. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. DOMENICI. Does that not mean that is what they are getting now?

Mr. BUMBERS. I beg your pardon?

Mr. DOMENICI. Does that not mean that is what they are getting now?

Mr. BUMBERS. It means that is what they have gotten as an average for 1991 and 1994.

Mr. DOMENICI. Are you suggesting it is appreciably better than 1994?

Mr. BUMBERS. Well, I am sure it is somewhat better.

Mr. DOMENICI. Will the formula become more satisfactory if it was brought to 1995? I do not think we got the evidence. My point is, however we go—I do not know which way the Senate is going to go—the truth of the matter is, those poor children you are speaking of in those two States are not getting very much now. That is the reason they are not going to get very much under this bill.

Mr. BUMBERS. They are not going to get very much, but why do you want to lock in an inequity? You say it has always been unequal but want to lock it in?

Mr. DOMENICI. I did not say that. I wanted to make sure the RECORD reflected when you expressed yourself—and I have great respect for you. You are representing a cause and an approach that ought to be looked at carefully. But when you say they are only going to get $15 on average, it has to be made clear they are not getting much more than $15 now.

Mr. BUMPERS. That's true, they are not getting much more than that. I can tell you the number of poor children in my State is higher by far than the national average.

What I am saying is that if you want to address the problems of poor people, go where the poor people are, not where the people are more affluent. That is the reason I object; I object to these staggering sums going to the other States.

In 1994, Arkansas had a terrible Medicaid shortage of funds. We could not come up with our matching share to the extent that was necessary to provide health care for all of our poor children. Do you know what the State legislature did under the Governor's leadership? They passed one of the most unpopular taxes you can pass in any State. It was a nickel a bottle on soft drinks, and the money it raised kept us from kicking people out of nursing homes, and it kept us from having poor children on the streets who need health care and are not able to get it.

That is the reason I am complaining today. It was a monumental effort on the part of Arkansas to come up with our share of the money so we could take care of our children.

So here we have a formula that says in the future you are going to get $390 a year per poor child. And there are 38 additional States that will be hurt by this bill. You would think it would be adopted with flying colors.

If I may continue with the article from Mr. Ellwood of the New York Times:

Governor Thompson says he can make reform succeed with block grants. But the legislation provides more than three times as much money per poor child in wealthier States like Wisconsin, California, and New York as it does for many States with much higher levels of poverty. Even if they wanted to, there is no way poor States could carry out plans like Governor Thompson's.

Here is a man who spent his entire life studying this problem. He closes this article by saying:

Welfare politics has turned ugly. Rhetoric has replaced reality: saying a bill is about work or that cuts are in the best interests of children does not make it so. Apparently the legislation is being driven by election-year fears. But Members of Congress and President Clinton need to stand up for our children. This bill should not be passed. If legislation like this is adopted, I hope the President vetoes it in the name of real welfare reform.

Mr. President, I spoke about election-year issues the other day in the Energy Committee, on which I sit, when we were dealing with the Boundary Water Canoe Wilderness Area, about 1,100 lakes along the Minnesota-Canadian border. I went out there in 1978 for Wendy Anderson, who was serving in the Senate from the State of Minnesota at the time and with whom I served as Governor. The Boundary Water Canoe Wilderness Area came up the year Wendy was running for reelection. It was a big political issue. Wendy lost his seat, not for that reason only. But he lost plenty of votes because of the Boundary Water Canoe Wilderness Area dispute.

Now we have another big Boundary Water Canoe Wilderness Area dispute in Minnesota. I am not taking sides on that necessarily, but there are a lot of ads being run in Minnesota right now. I said in the committee—and I mean it—I will do everything I can to keep a bill of this kind from passing this year, because it is entirely too important for the U.S. Congress to be dealing with in an election year.

That is exactly the way I feel about this welfare bill. It ought to be passed next year, not now in an election year where everybody is trying to grow hair on their chest to prove they are tougher on welfare than everyone else. But we are not going to wait. As a consequence, we are getting ready to pass a bad bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the article by David T. Ellwood in the New York Times be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

WELFARE REFORM IN NAME ONLY
(By David T. Ellwood)

BONDURANT, WY.—I have spent much of my professional life seeking to reform welfare. I have worked with Republican and Democratic governors. And until I returned to academia a year ago, I was fortunate to be a co-chairman of President Clinton's welfare reform effort. I deeply believe that the well-being of the nation's children depends on real reform. We must turn away from the failed system focused on determining eligibility and check writing and create a new one based on work and responsibility.

But the Republican bills in the House and Senate are far more about budget-cutting than work. Bathed in the rhetoric of reform, they are more dangerous than most people realize. No bill that is likely to push more than a million additional children into poverty—many in working families—is real reform.

Proponents claim the bills are about work, and the legislation does obligate states to require large numbers of recipients to work. Fair enough. Serious work requirements are crucial to meaningful change. But it's one thing to write work into legislation, and it's another to get recipients jobs.

Gov. Tommy Thompson of Wisconsin, a Republican, has emphasized that reform often involves spending more, not less, money on things like job training and child care. Instead, the Congressional bills would make major cuts—reducing food stamps for the working poor, aid to disabled children and to legal immigrants who are not yet citizens. When the dust settles, there would not be much money for welfare reform at all.

States would get block grants to use for welfare and work programs. But the grants for child care, job training, workfare and cash assistance combined would amount to less than $15 per poor child per week in poor Southern states like Mississippi and Arkansas. Moving people from welfare to work is hard. On $15 a week—whom are we kidding?

Governor Thompson says he can make reform succeed with block grants. But the legislation provides more than three times as much money per poor child in wealthier states like Wisconsin, California and New York as it does for many states with much higher levels of poverty. Even if they wanted to, there is no way poor states could carry out plans like Governor Thompson's.

States cannot and will not do the impossible. The legislation gives them an out. They may set time limits of any length and simply cut families off welfare regardless of their circumstances—and still get their full Federal block grants.

It won't matter if the people want to work. It won't matter if they would happily take workfare jobs so they could provide something for their families. It won't matter if there are no private jobs available.

States may want to offer workfare jobs, but limited Federal grants may preclude that. People who are willing to work but are unable to find a job should not be abandoned. If they are, what happens to their children?

What is dangerous about the Republican legislation is not that it gives states the lead or reduces Federal rules. States really are the source of most creative work on true reform. Witness the approximately 40 states for which some Federal regulations have been waived.

It is worrisome that this legislation places new and often mean-spirited demands on states while changing the social and financial rules of the game in a way that strongly encourages cutting support rather than getting people jobs.

What is particularly distressing about the pre-election rush to enact legislation is that significant reform is finally starting at the state level, with active support from the Clinton Administration. Some remarkably exciting ideas (as well as some alarming ones) are being tried. There is no evidence that a lack of Federal legislation has seriously slowed this momentum.

Indeed, President Clinton has talked about issuing an executive order requiring states to put people to work after two years—without new legislation and without any danger of sizable rises in child poverty or major benefit cuts. Passing the legislation now in Congress seems far more likely to slow reform than speed it—and it could result not in greater independence of poor families but in a spiral of ever-increasing desperation.

Welfare politics has turned ugly. Rhetoric has replaced reality: saying a bill is about work or that cuts are in the best interests of children does not make it so. Apparently the legislation is being driven by election-year fears. But members of Congress and President Clinton need to stand up for our children. These bills should not be passed. And if legislation like this is adopted, I hope the President vetoes it in the name of real welfare reform.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I am certain that we will have some arguments in opposition to the amendment for doing the formula differently than Senator BUMPERS has addressed. I am trying to see if one of those who is from the committee that wrote the bill would come down and do that. If not, I will address the issue.

But I say, the part of your argument—I say this to Senator BUMPERS—that says we ought to put this matter off, I do not think so. I think you ought to get your chance here to present your case. I think we ought to proceed.

Part of the argument you make indicates that we have waited far too long to do something to reform this system and reforming the system in the context I am speaking of right now. I am not necessarily speaking about the workfare approach. It is way past due for that.

But essentially we have sat by for years since AFDC, a cash program, came into being decades ago. We have let it develop to the extent it has characteristics of the type you are speaking to. Obviously, poor States were given the option to have very poor programs. But if we would have told them, "You ought to have richer programs," they would have said, "We can't afford any richer program."

A State like New York, which you speak of, has very, very high taxes. They have had a very, very liberal approach to taxing their people. Thus, they can put up a lot of money for welfare. Since it is a high-pay State, they decided to have a very hefty welfare program. As a matter of fact, they have plenty of poor people in spite of all that.

I did not interrupt when you said we ought to put the money where the poor people are, but I would venture to say that there are far more poor people in the State of New York than there are in three or four of the States you spoke of combined, certainly more than Arkansas, Mississippi, States of that size.

Just because New York has a very high wage scale does not mean there are not a lot of poor people there. But the problem is, we are confronted with a welfare program that grew in an environment where we asked States to match. We gave them options as to how much they wanted to put into welfare. We even gave them options of how much they would pay the beneficiaries and how much per child in a welfare home. We have just left it there for years and did not do anything about it.

Now we have States with hardly a program in terms of real dollars and States like New York, which has spent a lot of money on the program. Sooner or later we have to decide, in reform, what do we do about that? Perhaps you suggest that you have a better idea on what we do to make that a situation in the future that is not as bad as you see it in the past. But this is not an easy one. Nor is it an easy one in Medicare. You addressed Medicare for a fleeting moment about—

Mr. BUMPERS. Medicaid.

Mr. DOMENICI. Excuse me. Medicaid. About your State being unable to pay. One of the things we are forgetting here in the United States and in this land when we debate Medicaid reform is that States cannot afford the Medicaid Program we are telling them to have.

Your State fell short of money a few years ago. Mine is short this year. There is $21 million they do not have to pay for the program in Medicaid. We only match it with 25 cents on the dollar. I do not know what yours is, but I would imagine, considering the profile of poverty, the demographics of poverty, you are probably at a 25-percent match, meaning that the Feds pay most of it, but it is so expensive to provide the service under the current system the States cannot even pay for it.

If we think here the evolution of a formula in transition was difficult for welfare, it is much more difficult on Medicaid because of the very same facts, plus the program is much, much more encompassing in terms of how many billions of dollars it spent. Welfare is a small program in terms of the dollars spent on Medicaid, even in your State and my State.

So it is not going to be easy to come up with a formula because we have let them grow up side by side with States like New York and States like Arkansas and States like Mississippi or New Mexico. I take that back. New Mexico's welfare program is in the middle of the ranks. Its Medicaid is about in the middle of the Nation.

So I would have asked that Harvard professor who wrote that article you quoted from—it sounded brilliant—I would ask—maybe he has done it—but where is his welfare program? He says we ought to have welfare reform. We need one. It is easy to say, throw one out. We need one. We have to make some decisions and get on with trying it. I yield the floor at this point.

Mr. BUMPERS. I wonder if the Senator would yield for a moment? Would the Senator yield for a unanimous consent request?

Mr. DOMENICI. I would be pleased to.

Mr. BUMPERS. Let me make one other observation, because I know the Senator has labored in the vineyard a long time on welfare. It is one of those issues for which the time never seems right. I said we ought to do it next year. We tried to do it last year, which was not an election year. It did not work out.

But I think the Senator, for whom I have the utmost respect—and when I talk about Members of Congress that seem to lack some compassion, I am certainly not talking about my friend from New Mexico. I know he has labored long and hard for this. It is a complex issue. The deeper I got into it on this amendment, the more complex it became.

But I will say this—and I think the Senator would agree with me—you cannot make a program like this work, not the way it ought to work, when, for example, a child in Massachusetts or New York or someplace else is worth 10 times as much as a child in Arkansas or Mississippi. We are not ever going to get our act together when we have that much disparity. I am not saying there does not have to be effort, because effort is important.

Some of these States have made monumental efforts. But effort is a comparative thing. We have made efforts, too. Compared to some others maybe it was not as great. When the Senator talks about how many poor children there are in New York, I know the Senator is correct when he says there are probably more poor children in New York than there are in Mississippi, Alabama, and Arkansas put together.

But we are talking about poor children as a percentage of the population. We are talking about how many poor children you have compared to all the children in the State or all the people in the State. When you get to that point, New York is not in the running with Arkansas. I want to say to the Senator from New Mexico, I appreciate his comments. As I say, I have the utmost respect for his efforts to get this bill passed and all the effort he has made in the past. I just happen to disagree with him. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. I wonder if we could do this, I say to Senator BUMPERS. The time is 1 o'clock. We are going to be finished and run out of time at 2 o'clock. I want to offer an opportunity for a couple of Senators who would be very adversely affected by the Senator's amendment to speak, not as long as the Senator did, but for some period of time. I am going to make one observation and then ask consent.

I say to Senators, they should know, for instance, under this amendment the State of Arkansas will have 151 percent increase; the State of Louisiana will have 170 percent; New Mexico would have an increase of 3 percent; California would have a reduction of $1.2 billion, a 31 percent reduction, New York a reduction of 49 percent; Massachusetts, 50 percent; and on and on. I think some of those Senators might want to come down and make their case as to why the formula should be based on what they have been putting into the program during the immediate past decade or so.

Having said that, I ask unanimous consent we set aside the Bumpers amendment, but from the Republican side we reserve up to 10 minutes of the hour that we might have in rebuttal, and that Senator BUMPERS be allowed, if that occurs, an additional 5 minutes, if we use 10.

Mr. BUMPERS. Either Senator GRAHAM or myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, let me make one other observation: According to the charts Senator GRAHAM has compiled, I do not know where the Senator got the figure that we will get such a big increase. The truth is we will get $282 million less per capita over the next 6 years simply because we are using the 1991 and 1994 formula.

Mr. DOMENICI. I will be happy to make available the formula of the Congressional Research Service, July 18, 1996. This formula has a chart for the increase in every State, and we just took your increase and put the percentage on it. That is where we got that number. We will be happy to make the chart available.

Mr. President, let me make one last point, then we will move to the next amendment. I use this time off the bill.

Mr. President, whatever the distinguished Senator from Arkansas has said relative to what we have been paying as part of the welfare program of the United States for children and this huge disparity of 10 to 1, the point I want to make is that is not the feature of this bill. That is what has transpired over time. It is the reality today. Maybe Senator BUMPERS and others would say that is why welfare has failed. I did not hear that before. I thought it was some other characteristic, but that is the truth.

Now we are confronted with, if you are going to change the basic quality of welfare and what is expected, what do you do about that financial disparity that existed over time, which is extreme. This bill tends to perpetuate that for 5 years in the form of a block grants, but there is a lot of flexibility added.

I do not want to speak to that amendment any more because we reserved time. I yield the floor.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, just prior to Senator BUMPERS making his statement, I offered an amendment. This is not the amendment that was agreed to last week. This is a different amendment. We have provided the amendment, I believe, or at least discussed it with both sides.

I wanted to take just 2 or 3 minutes to discuss that amendment, and I also wanted to introduce a second amendment which I believe is going to be agreed to. I am offering the second amendment on behalf of Senator DASCHLE, myself, Senator DOMENICI and Senator MCCAIN. It is an amendment that has been worked out by both sides to exempt certain individuals living in areas of low labor market participation from the 5-year limitation on assistance.

If I might, in a capsule, point out that the welfare reform bill provides a 20-percent exemption that is available to the States. What we could have and likely would have are circumstances where there are areas in which virtually no jobs are available and you have very high unemployment. That situation would soak up the exemption almost immediately. This amendment addresses and corrects that and provides some more flexibility to the States.

AMENDMENT NO. 4949

(Purpose: To exempt certain individuals living in areas of low labor market participation from the 5-year limitation on assistance)

Mr. DORGAN. I offer this amendment, and I send it to the desk.

Mr. DOMENICI. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. JEFFORDS). Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the amendment. The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. DORGAN], for Mr. DASCHLE, for himself, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. DOMENICI, and Mr. MCCAIN, proposes an amendment No. 4949.

Mr. DORGAN. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 250, line 2, strike "and (C)" and insert ", (C), and (D)".

On page 252, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following:

"(D) EXCEPTION FOR EXTREMELY LOW LABOR MARKET PARTICIPATION.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—In determining the number of months for which an adult received assistance under the State program funded under this part, the State may disregard any and all months in which the individual resided in an area of extremely low labor market participation (as defined under clause (i)).

"(ii) EXTREMELY LOW LABOR MARKET PARTICIPATION AREA.—For purposes of clause (i), an adult is considered to be living in an area of extremely low labor market participation if such adult resides on a reservation of an Indian Tribe—

"(I) with a population of at least 1,000 individuals; and

"(II) with at least 50% of the adult population not employed, as determined by the Secretary using the best available data from a Federal agency.

On page 252, line 10, strike "(D)" and insert "(E)".

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I am a cosponsor, and I indicate so that everybody would understand this does not say this is mandated. This says that the Governors, in putting together their plan for their State, can, if they find an area—and this is pretty much going to be Indian areas, I believe, because of the enormous unemployment number; it is 50 percent—it will be available as a flexible tool in terms of putting together packages.

Mr. DORGAN. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOMENICI. We accept the amendment on our side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4949) was agreed to.

Mr. DORGAN. I move to table the amendment.

Mr. DOMENICI. I move to reconsider the vote.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4948

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, if I might just for a couple of minutes address the previous amendment that I offered that deals with the tribal child care set-aside. I hope we perhaps might be able to see this amendment accepted before we go to votes tomorrow.

The amendment I have offered on behalf of myself, Senator MCCAIN, and Senator INOUE, restores the current set-aside for Indian child care funding. The current set-aside is 3 percent of the child care development block grant, which is now available to Indian tribes for child care. The welfare reform bill cuts that 3 percent down to 1 percent.

The funds the Indian tribes are now able to access with the child care development block grant have been very important. They have allowed the tribes to successfully run a wide range of child care programs. In 1994, that set-aside helped more than 500 tribes provide child care.

Last year, when the welfare reform bills passed both the House and the Senate, they retained the 3-percent set-aside for tribal child care programs. The conference bill inexplicably reduced that tribal allocation from 3 percent to 1 percent, the same level that is now contained in this reconciliation bill.

The reduction in the tribal set-aside occurs at the very same time that State child care funds would increase substantially. The question I ask is, if an increase in child care is critical to State efforts to move people from welfare to work, and I believe it is, then why is it not also critical for real welfare reform in Indian country and for Indian tribes to provide child care?

I want to make a point that Indian children under age 6 are more than twice as likely as the average child in America to live in circumstances of poverty. Indian children under 6 who live on reservations are three times more likely to live in circumstances of poverty than non-Indian children.

I toured, not so long ago, a child care center on a facility in North Dakota that is jointly run by four tribes, United Tribes Technical College. It is a wonderful place where American Indians come to receive educational and vocational training. They study, they graduate, they go out and get work. That center is run by a wonderful man named David Gipp, who does an extraordinarily good job. They have a child care center at U-Tech. I have toured that child care center a couple of times.

U-Tech reminds you of the need and the importance of child care in this building-block process to move people from welfare to work. You have to be able to get the job skills. Often, to get job skills, if you have children, you have to try to find child care. All of us know that it is not just in Indian country, but across this country, increasingly, that poverty is a problem often faced by young women with children in single-parent households.

Now, when they try to get skills and then get a job, the question is, What kind of child care can they access to take care of their children? To them, just like in every other household, the most important thing in their lives are their children. They want to make sure the children have an opportunity. If they go to work, when they go to work, they want to have an opportunity to place their children in child care in a place where they have some confidence and trust. That is why this amendment is so important.

It breaks your heart to take a look at what is happening in some areas of the country with very high unemployment, especially Indian reservations, with people who want an opportunity to work. They want a job. On many of these reservations—and we have a couple in North Dakota—there virtually are no jobs. If you look at the map and try to figure out, where do we carve out a reservation and say these are Indian reservations, do you think they carved out the fertile Red River Valley? No. They carved out reservations where there are no great opportunities and where there has not been a substantial amount of economic activity, not very many jobs, not very many companies moving in to provide opportunities.

As we attempt to decide how to reform the welfare system—and we should, because it does not work very well—we need to understand that the two linchpins that can help people move from welfare to work are child care and health care. The absence of one or both means that you cannot succeed in moving someone from welfare to work. The presence of both means that you can say to people that we expect something from you in response to what we are going to offer for you. Part of that is job training and employment, but also attendant to it is adequate and proper child care. I do hope that, between now and tomorrow, we might find an opportunity to see whether this amendment might be accepted.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the amendment offered by my colleague, Senator DORGAN. The amendment ensures that Indian tribes will continue to receive 3 percent of funding provided under the child care development block grant program, as it stands under current law.

I am pleased that the proposed budget reconciliation measure under consideration includes provisions which I and other Senators sponsored to address the unique needs and requirements of Indian country to directly administer welfare programs.

Mr. President, welfare assistance programs are intended to protect poor people and children. As reported, the bill does not go far enough to ensure that Indian tribes, particularly Indian children, who are the most vulnerable of our population and among the poorest of the poor, will be protected. Indian children under the age of 6 are more than twice as likely as the average non-Indian child to live in poverty. Indian children under the age of 6 residing on Indian reservations are three times more likely than non-Indian children to live in poverty.

The need in Indian country is enormous and far outweighs the limited Federal dollars allocated to Indian tribal governments. Because the need for assistance to Indian children is so compelling, I have been quite concerned that the reported bill reduced the tribal allocation from 3 percent to 1 percent. Such a cut would have harmed tribal efforts to bring more Indian people into the work force and resulted in diminishment of existing tribal child care programs.

Mr. President, I believe we should maintain the 3-percent-funding allocation under present law to ensure that Indian children receive an equal and fair opportunity to a brighter future as is provided to all other American children. This commitment also honors the unique trust relationship that the United States has with Indian tribal governments.

I am pleased that we have reached agreement to adopt this amendment and thank Senator DOMENICI, chairman of the Budget Committee, and Senator ROTH, chairman of the Finance Committee, for accepting it. I also want to thank Senator DORGAN for once again demonstrating his commitment to improve the lives of Indian children. I urge my colleagues to work diligently at conference with the House to ensure that the welfare bill we send to the President maintains this provision.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I want to make one additional comment, not on this amendment, but on the one offered by Senator CONRAD. That amendment is the issue of the optional food stamp block grant.

My understanding of the amendment is that the block grant option that exists in the bill is a problem, and the amendment would repeal the block grant. The amendment's supporters believe—and I firmly believe—that if we decide that it is a function of national will, a national objective to decide that those who do not have enough to eat, then we are going to try to help get them some food.

If that is a national issue, it is not an issue between one county and another county, or one State and another State, or one city and another city. It is an issue of national determination that we do not want people in this country to be hungry. We do not want kids to go without meals. We want to develop a national standard that makes sure this country, as good and generous and as strong as this country is, can feed those people among us who have suffered some difficulties, who were unfortunate enough to be born into circumstances of poverty, who have had some other disadvantages, and who find themselves down and out, down on their luck, and also hungry.

We know what to do about hunger. This is not some mysterious disease for which there is no cure. We know what causes hunger and how to resolve it.

Part of this bill deals with the issues of resolving hunger and helping people get prepared for the workplace. Another part says you cannot prepare 8-year-olds for a job. We ought not to prepare 10-year-olds for a job. If we have kids living in poverty, or grownups living in poverty, we want to make sure that we have a system to say that we will help them get back on their feet. While we are helping them get back on their feet, we do not want them to be hungry—kids, adults, anybody in this country. That is why we have had a Food Stamp Program. Is it perfect? No. Has it worked well? Sure. We ought not, in any way, decide that we should retreat from that. That is why I so strongly support the amendment offered by Senator CONRAD and Senator JEFFORDS.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, on the amendment which is pending, with reference to the 1 versus 3 percent set-aside, we have cleared this with the committee of jurisdiction. What will happen when we adopt this amendment is that we will return the percentage to its current law. This is a ceiling, not a mandated level. For those reasons, the committee indicates that we will accept it on our side.

Therefore, I yield back any time on the amendment and indicate that we are willing to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time is yielded back.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4948) was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DORGAN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the Senator for offering the amendment.

Mr. DORGAN. I thank the Senator from New Mexico for his help.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4950

(Purpose: To strike amendments to the summer food service program for children)

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. FORD], for Mrs. MURRAY, proposes an amendment numbered 4950.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike section 1206.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, Senator MURRAY is unavoidably detained. I am proposing her amendment.

This is an amendment she discussed last week and withdrew with the opportunity to be able to submit it today. It strikes section 1206. The bill reduces the rate of the Summer Food Service Program.

The Food Research Action Council's surveys and past experience leads them to conclude that the cut could result in:

A 30- to 35-percent drop in the number of sponsors;

A 20-percent cut in the number of children participating;

Many larger sponsors dropping their smaller sites;

A significant decline in meat quality as sponsors cut food costs.

I ask unanimous consent that "the need for the Murray amendment striking provisions relating to the Summer Food Program" be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The need for the Murray amendment striking provisions relating to the summer food program:

The Senate bill makes an eleven percent cut to the reimbursement rate for lunches provided in the summer food program. The reduction (a 23/20 cent cut on each lunch, from $2.16/$2.12 to $1.93) is substantial. Many programs around the country serve 50 or fewer children. Over half of current sponsors already lose money under current rates. Their margins to absorb cuts are extremely narrow. Estimates vary by state, but the Food Research Action Council's surveys and past experience lead them to conclude that the cut could result in: a 30-35 percent drop in the number of sponsors (especially in rural districts); a 20 percent cut in the number of children participating; many larger sponsors dropping their smaller sites; weaker supervision and monitoring and a decline in program integrity; a significant decline in meal quality as sponsors cut food costs; and very few new sponsors. It is already difficult to recruit new sponsors, even though only one in six eligible children receive meals. The recruitment of new sponsors by advocacy groups would likely stop, and with it, future growth.

The effect of the amendment:

Strikes section 1206 of the bill, which reduces the rates for the Summer Food Program.

Mr. FORD. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. We are not going to respond yet. We are just beginning to understand the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4951

(Purpose: To provide additional amendments)

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I offer in behalf of Senator ROTH technical amendments to the bill. These have been requested by the Finance Committee and been approved and recommended for adoption by the majority and the minority of the Finance Committee. I send the technical amendments to the desk and ask for their immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows.

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], for Mr. ROTH, proposes an amendment numbered 4951.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 193, line 8, strike "is" and insert "has been".

On page 238, line 4, insert "any temporary layoffs and" after "including".

On page 238, line 6, strike "overtime" and insert "nonovertime".

On page 238, strike line 7 through 13, and insert the following:

"wages, or employment benefits; and".

Mr. EXON. No objection.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.
The amendment (No. 4951) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4952

(Purpose: To strike additional penalties for consecutive failure to satisfy minimum participation rates)

Mr. GRAHAM addressed the Chair.
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. GRAHAM. I rise for purposes of offering an amendment. I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows.

The Senator from Florida [Mr. GRAHAM] proposes an amendment numbered 4952:

Strike section 409(a)(3)(C) of the Social Security Act, as added by section 2103(a)(1).

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, as read, the purpose of this motion to strike is to strike section 409(a)(3)(C) which was added to this bill during its consideration before the Senate Finance Committee. The provision which I would offer to strike provides:

Notwithstanding the limitation described in Subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall reduce the grant payable to the State . . . for a fiscal year, in addition to the reduction imposed under subsection (A), by an amount equal to 5 percent of the State family assistance grant, if the Secretary determines that the State failed to comply with section 407(a) for 2 or more consecutive preceding fiscal years.

That language was added in the Senate Finance Committee to language that had been in the bill in its previous form, in its current reconciliation version, as well as in other versions of welfare reform. That previous version states that the Secretary can sanction a State which fails to meet its work requirements by an amount up to 5 percent of the State's family assistance grant.

The amendment that was offered, first, removes the discretion from the Secretary; second, instead of saying up to 5 percent, it makes it an absolute 5 percent in addition to whatever sanction has been levied in the previous fiscal year against a State which failed to meet its work requirement.

Why am I offering this amendment? I am offering it, first, because the language of the amendment is very obscure. In its claimed reading, it seems to say that there will be an additional amount, equal to 5 percent of the State's family assistance grant, as a sanction if the State had failed for 2 consecutive years to meet its work requirements. That, apparently, is not the way it is being interpreted by others, including one of the groups which is strongly opposed to this provision, which is the National Conference of State Legislatures. They are interpreting this to be a cumulative sanction. That it would be, if you failed to meet your work requirements for 2 consecutive years and had been subject to a penalty because of failure to do so, you would be subject to an additional mandatory 5-percent cut in the third year; an additional 5-percent cut, or a cumulative 15 percent in the next year; an additional 5 percent in the year after that, up to a maximum of a 25-percent reduction in your grant.

So one of my concerns with this very important provision that was added—frankly, as a member of the Finance Committee, I can stipulate, without any consideration by the committee—is, just what does it mean? It could be very draconian in its impact. It could be only very serious.

So that is one issue. A second issue is the fact that the States, through the organizations that we have looked to, to do much of the policy work for a bill which purports to grant increased authority to States, are opposed to this provision.

I ask unanimous consent to have a series of letters from State-based organizations printed at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAHAM. I would like to use, illustrative of the letters I received, this letter dated today, July 22, from the National Conference of State Legislatures. This letter states, in part:

State legislators want welfare reform to succeed. In order to succeed, we need adequate implementation time to craft comprehensive welfare reform that best fits the needs in our individual states. In S. 1956, both the work participation rate requirements and penalties begin the first year of the block grant. Therefore, we strongly support Senator Bob Graham's amendment to strike the language imposing a cumulative penalty of five percent of the block grant per year on states that fail to meet the mandated work requirements. Imposing harsh and excessive penalties will only make it more difficult for states to succeed. State legislators are committed to welfare reform and have proved it through passage of numerous laws reforming their welfare systems. We have asked the federal government for flexibility to change the current system and hope for legislation to empower the states.

The Congress has challenged us to go even further, yet the current bill leaves no room for adjustment, even if a state experiences a recession, high unemployment or natural disaster. Despite our best effort, there may be states who cannot meet the work requirements. To add compounding financial penalties will severely restrict state efforts even further—just at the moment when they could use assistance from their federal partner.

Mr. President, the letter from the National Conference of State Legislatures points out a fundamental difference between the sanction that we had previously proposed, and which stays in this bill, and that which was added in the Finance Committee. The previous sanction made it in the discretion of the Secretary of HHS as to whether to levy such a penalty, and at what level to do it up to 5 percent. So the Secretary could take into consideration—maybe the reason the State of Vermont failed to meet its work requirement was because they had an unexpected natural disaster in Vermont, as we did in Florida with Hurricane Andrew, or maybe they had an unusual economic recession and more people were unable to find work, and therefore they could not meet the work requirements for those persons who are coming off welfare. The cumulative language gives no such discretion to the Secretary to take those kinds of real-world conditions into account.

A third reason for offering this amendment is the reason that was the basis of discussion earlier today by my colleague, Senator BUMPERS, and myself on Friday. That is, we start this process from a very inequitable allocation of funds among the 50 States. The reason it is so inequitable is because we are basically using the status quo which was based on a State's financial ability and political willingness to put up substantial amounts of money for welfare and then draw down an equivalent amount of Federal matching funds. That formula has resulted in disparities of in the range of 4 and 5 to 1 between high-benefit States and low-benefit States in the amount of funds that they have per poor person.

For instance, in the State of Arkansas, for every person in their State who has an income below the poverty level, they would get $397 of Federal support. In the State of New York, under this legislation, in the year 2000 they would get $1,961 for every person below 100 percent of poverty level. When you compound that large inequity in the amount of Federal funds per State with a common requirement that all States have to meet in terms of getting a proportion of their welfare population off welfare and into work, you have enormous differences in the impact of this legislation.

Mr. President, I am going to truncate my remarks because I know there are some amendments that have to be offered before 2 o'clock. But let me, just for my colleagues, point out that the State of Arkansas, in the year 2000, has estimated it will have to spend 49 percent of the funds which today go to provide economic support to pay for everything from school supplies to clothing to diapers to utilities, 49 percent of those funds will have to go to meet the work requirements, that is, to pay for the job training, to pay for the child care, to pay for the other support services such as job placement. That is in the State of Arkansas.

In my State, which is a middle State in terms of benefits, 36 percent of our funds would have to go to meet those requirements, whereas in New York State, only 14 percent of their combined State-Federal funds would be required in order to pay for exactly the same work assistance that Arkansas and Florida would have to provide, thus leaving a very inequitable amount left over for the fundamental economic support that this program for 60 years has been providing to indigent families in America.

So, for those three reasons—lack of clarity as to what this amendment is supposed to mean; second, the strong opposition of the States because of its lack of flexibility; and, third, the inequitable application of this cumulative sanction amendment—I offer this amendment. At the appropriate time, I will urge its support.

Washington, DC, July 22, 1996.

DEAR SENATOR: The National Conference of State Legislatures (NCSL) is committed to continuing our work with the Congress to enact comprehensive, bipartisan welfare reform legislation this year. As you consider amendments to S. 1795, state legislators offer the following positions for your consideration. We strongly believe that the final welfare reform bill must: (1) provide maximum flexibility to state and local governments; (2) preserve existing state authority and avoid preemption; (3) fund federally-mandated activities; (4) avoid cost-shifts to states; and (5) ensure that states have adequate implementation time for programs fully- or partially-devolved to the states.

State legislators want welfare reform to succeed. In order to succeed, we need adequate implementation time to craft comprehensive welfare reform that best fits the needs in our individual states. In S. 1795, both the work participation rate requirements and penalties begin in the first year of the block grant. Therefore, we strongly support Senator Bob Graham's amendment to strike the language imposing a cumulative penalty of five percent of the block grant per year on states that fail to meet the mandated work requirements. Imposing harsh and excessive penalties will only make it more difficult for states to succeed. State legislators are committed to welfare reform and have proved it through passage of numerous laws reforming their welfare systems. We have asked the federal government for flexibility to change the current system and hope for legislation to empower the states.

The Congress has challenged us to go even further, yet the current bill leaves no room for adjustment, even if a state experiences a recession, high employment or natural disaster. Despite our best effort, there may be states who cannot meet the work requirements. To add compounding financial penalties will severely restrict state efforts even further—just at the moment when they could use assistance from their federal partner. Senator Graham's amendment also allows the Secretary to reduce state penalties after assessing the individual experience of that state. We have always opposed cookie-cutter welfare reform. The current bill does not allow for the diversity of state experience in reforming the system and the timing of state legislative sessions to enact the laws necessary to change the system.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that there is a $13 billion shortfall in the cash assistance block grant to meet the work requirements. NCSL has always supported deficit reduction and we understand the limitation on available funds for work. However, the current bill as drafted penalizes us as we charter unknown waters to create a new system to retrain state workers, create employment slots, verify work slots and, of course, be successful at moving recipients to work. A distinction is not made for states who have made a good faith effort but fail to meet the requirements for reasons beyond their control. We are very concerned that this will hamper state creativity, innovation and excellence. State legislators urge you to support Senator Graham's amendment.

Sincerely,

CARL TUBBESING,
Deputy Executive Director.

NATIONAL GOVERNMENT ASSOCIATION,
Washington, DC, June 26, 1996.

Senate Finance Committee,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC

DEAR FINANCE COMMITTEE MEMBER: The nation's Governors appreciate that S. 1795, as introduced, incorporated many of the National Governors' Association's (NGA) recommendations on welfare reform. NGA hopes that Congress will continue to look to the Governor's bipartisan efforts on a welfare reform policy and build on the lessons learned through a decade of state experimentation in welfare reform.

However, upon initial review of the Chairman's mark, NGA believes that many of the changes contained in the mark are contradictory to the NGA bipartisan agreement. The mark includes unreasonable modifications to the work requirement, and additional administrative burdens, restrictions and penalties that are unacceptable. Governors believe these changes in the Chairman's mark greatly restrict state flexibility and will result in increased, unfunded costs for states, while at the same time undermining states ability to implement effective welfare reform programs. These changes threaten the ability of Governors to provide any support for the revised welfare package, and may, in fact, result in Governors opposing the bill.

As you mark up the welfare provisions of S. 1795, the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Act of 1996, NGA strongly urges you to consider the recommendations contained in the welfare reform policy adopted unanimously by the nation's Governors in February. Governors believe that these changes are needed to create a welfare reform measure that will foster independence and promote responsibility, provide adequate support for families that are engaged in work, and accord states the flexibility and resources they need to transform welfare into a transitional program leading to work.

Below is a partial list of amendments that may be offered during the committee markup and revisions included in the Chairman's mark that are either opposed or supported by NGA. This list is not meant to be exhaustive, and there may be other amendments or revisions of interest or concern to Governors that are not on this list. In the NGA welfare reform policy, the Governors did not take a position on the provisions related to benefits for immigrants, and NGA will not be making recommendations on amendments in these areas. As you markup S. 1795, NGA urges you to consider the following recommendations based on the policy statement of the nation's Governors on welfare reform.

The Governors urge to support the following amendments:

Support the amendment to permit states to count toward the work participation rate calculation those individuals who have left welfare for work for the first six months that they are in the workforce (Breux). The Governors believe states should receive credit in the participation rate for successfully moving people off of welfare and into employment, thereby meeting one of the primary goals of welfare reform. This will also provide states with an incentive to expand their job retention efforts.

Support the amendment that applies the time limit only to cash assistance (Breux). S. 1795 sets a sixty-month lifetime limit on any federally funded assistance under the block grant. This would prohibit states from using the block grant for important work supports such as transportation or job retention counseling after the five-year limit. Consistent with the NGA welfare reform policy, NGA urges you to support the Breux amendment that would apply the time limit only to cash assistance.

Support the amendment to restore funding for the Social Services Block Grant (Rockefeller). This amendment would limit the cut in the Social Services Block Grant (SSBG) to 10 percent rather than 20 percent. States use a significant portion of their SSBG funds for child care for low-income families. Thus, the additional cut currently contained in S. 1795 negates much of the increase in child care funding provided under the bill.

Support technical improvements to the contingency fund (Breux). Access to additional matching funds is critical to states during periods of economic recession. NGA supports two amendments proposed by Senator Breux. One clarifies the language relating to maintenance of effort in the contingency fund and another modifies the fund so states that access the contingency fund during only part of the year are not penalized with a less advantageous match rate.

Support the amendment to extend the 75 percent enhanced match rate through fiscal 1997 for statewide automated child welfare information systems (SACWIS), (Chafee, Rockefeller). Although not specifically addressed in the NGA policy, this extension is important for many states that are trying to meet systems requirements that will strengthen their child welfare and child protection efforts.

Governors urge you to oppose amendments or revisions to the Chairman's mark that would limit state flexibility, create unreasonable work requirements, impose new mandates, or encroach on the ability of each state to direct resources and design a welfare reform program to meet its unique needs.

In the area of work, Governors strongly oppose any efforts to increase penalties, increase work participation rates, further restrict what activities count toward the work participation rate, or change the hours of work required. The Governor's policy included specific recommendations in these areas, many of which were subsequently incorporated into S. 1795, as introduced. The recommendations reflect a careful balancing of the goals of welfare reform, the availability of resources, and the recognition that economic and demographic circumstances differ among states. Imposing any additional limitations or modifications to the work requirement would limit state flexibility.

The Governors urge you to oppose the following amendments or revisions in the area of work:

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to increase the number of hours of work required per week to thirty-five hours in future years. NGA's recommendation that the work requirement be set at twenty-five hours was incorporated into S. 1795. Many states will set higher hourly requirements, but this flexibility will enable states to design programs that are consistent with local labor market opportunities and the availability of child care.

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to decrease to four weeks the number of weeks that job search can count as work. NGA supports the twelve weeks of job search contained in S. 1795, as introduced. Job search has proven to be effective when an individual first enters a program and also after the completion of individual work components, such as workforce or community service. A reduction to four weeks would limit state flexibility to use this cost-effective strategy to move recipients into work.

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to increase the work participation rates. NGA opposes any increase in the work participation rates above the original S. 1795 requirements. Many training and education activities that are currently counted under JOBS will not count toward the new work requirements. Consequently, states will face the challenge of transforming their current JOBS program into a program that emphasizes quick movement into the labor force. An increase in the work rates will result in increased costs to states for child care and work programs.

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to increase penalties for failure to meet the work participation requirements. The proposed amendment to increase the penalty by 5 percent for each consecutive failure to meet the work rate is unduly harsh, particularly given the stringent nature of the work requirements. Ironically, the loss of block grant funds due to penalties will make it even more difficult for a state to meet the work requirements.

Oppose the amendment requiring states to count exempt families in the work participation rate calculation (Gramm). This amendment would retain the state option to exempt families with children below age one from the work requirements but add the requirement that such families count in the denominator for purposes of determining the work participation rate. This penalizes states that grant the exemption, effectively eliminating this option. The exemption in S. 1795 is an acknowledgment that child care costs for infants are very high and that there often is a shortage of infant care.

Oppose the amendment to increase work hours by ten hours a week for families receiving subsidized child care (Gramm). This amendment would greatly increase child care costs as well as impose a higher work requirement on families with younger children, because families with other children—particularly teenagers—are less likely to need subsidized child care assistance.

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to exempt families with children below age eleven. S. 1795, as introduced, prohibits states from sanctioning families with children below age six for failure to participate in work if failure to participate was because of a lack of child care. This revision would raise the age to eleven. NGA is concerned that this revision effectively penalizes states because they still would be required to count these individuals in the denominator of the work participation rate.

The Governors urge you to oppose the following amendments or revisions in the chairman's mark in these additional areas:

Oppose the revision in the Chairman's mark to increase the maintenance-of-effort requirement above the 75 percent in the cash assistance block grant or further narrow the definition of what counts toward maintenance-of-effort.

Oppose the revisions in the Chairman's mark that increase state plan requirements and include additional state penalties.

Oppose the amendment to limit hardship exemption to 15 percent (Gramm). NGA policy supports the current provision in S. 1795, as introduced, that allows states to exempt up to 20 percent of their caseload from the five-year lifetime limit on benefits.

Oppose the amendment to mandate that states provide in-kind vouchers to families after a state or federal time limit on benefits is triggered (Breux, Mosely-Braun). NGA believes that states should have the option to provide non-cash forms of assistance after the time limit, but they should not be mandated to do so.

Oppose the provision in the Chairman's mark to restrict the transferability of funds out of the cash assistance block grant to the child care block grant only. The governors believe that it is appropriate to allow a transfer of funds into the foster care program or the Social Services Block Grant.

Oppose a family cap mandate in the Chairman's mark. NGA supports a family cap as an option, rather than a mandate, to prohibit benefits to additional children born or conceived while the parent is on welfare.

Governors urge you to consider the above recommendations.

Sincerely,

RAYMOND C. SCHEPPACH,
Executive Director.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COUNTIES,
Washington, DC, July 12, 1996.

DEAR MEMBER OF CONGRESS: You may be voting soon on the Welfare and Medicaid reform bill (H.R. 3507/S. 1795). The National Association of Counties (NACo) is encouraged that there were improvements to the welfare section of the bill, including: increased funds for child care; maintaining current law for foster care adoption assistance maintenance and administration payments; and no funding cap for food stamps nor a block grant for child nutrition. However, there are not enough improvements to warrant our support. In some respects, particularly the work requirements, the bill has become even more burdensome. NACo particularly opposes the following welfare provisions:

1. The bill ends the entitlement of Aid to Families with Dependent Children, thereby dismantling the safety net for children and their families.

2. The eligibility restriction for legal immigrants goes too far. The most objectionable provisions include denying Supplemental Security Income and Food Stamps, particularly to older immigrants. In fact, by changing the implementation date for these provisions, the bill has become more onerous. NACo is also very concerned about the effect of the deeming requirements particularly with regard to Medicaid and children in need of protective services.

3. The participation requirements have become even more unrealistic. NACo particularly opposes the increased work participation rates and increased penalties, the changes in the hours of work required, and the new restrictions on the activities that may count toward the participation rates.

As the level of government closest to the people, local elected officials understand the importance of reforming the welfare system. While NACo is glad that the bill does contain language that requires some consultation with local officials we prefer the stronger language that is contained in the bipartisan welfare reform bill (H.R. 3266).

NACo also continues to oppose the Medicaid provisions. By capping the fiscal responsibility of the federal government and reducing the state match for the majority of the states, the bill could potentially shift billions of dollars to counties with responsibility for the uninsured. Allowing the states to determine the amount, duration and scope of services even for the remaining populations which would still be guaranteed coverage, will mean that counties will be ultimately responsible for services not covered adequately by the states. While we support the increased use of managed care and additional state and local flexibility in operating the Medicaid program, we do not support the repeal of Medicare as envisioned in the current legislation.

As it is currently written, the Medicaid and Welfare Reform bill could potentially shift costs and liabilities, create new unfunded mandates upon local governments, and penalize low income families. Such a bill, in combination with federal cuts and increased demands for services, will leave local governments with two options: cut other essential services, such as law enforcement, or raise revenues. NACo therefore urges you to vote against H.R. 3507/S. 1795.

Sincerely,

DOUGLAS R. BOVIN,
President.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority manager is recognized.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I take 1 minute from our side to indicate our objection to the amendment. In the bill on page 273, there is a section that reads: "Reasonable Cause for Exception.—" And it applies to the areas the Senator from Florida is referring to.

It says:

The Secretary may not impose a penalty on a State under subsection (a) with respect to a requirement if the Secretary determines that the State has reasonable cause for failing to comply with the requirement.

Then it has two exceptions to this, and neither of the two are matters covered by the concern of the Senator. So I believe there is flexibility, and for those State legislators and staff up here who looked at it, I suggest they read that provision.

In addition, there is a whole process following that provision for how a State would determine that they had reasonable cause.

Having said that, I am going to yield back any time I have on the amendment.

ELECTRONIC BENEFIT TRANSFER SYSTEMS AND WELFARE REFORM

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, a number of consumer groups have expressed concern about a provision in the pending welfare reform bill that exempts users of electronic benefit transfer systems [EBT's] users from the protections of the Electronic Benefit Transfer Act.

EBT's are a useful reform to modernize the distribution of welfare benefits. They are comparable to automated teller machines. They offer a convenient way for welfare recipients to use a card to withdraw their cash benefits from a bank machine or pay for food at a grocery store. Although a few States may now have in place such a program, it is likely to become much more common in the years ahead. Massachusetts is in the process of implementing such a system for its 80,000 welfare recipients.

If the final welfare reform bill includes the exemption from consumer protections, EBT users will not have the same basic safeguards against benefit losses caused by computer error, merchant fraud, or theft that other credit card holders now have. Clearly, it is unfair to deny reasonable safeguards to welfare beneficiaries.

I understand that a realistic compromise is being developed to protect EBT users from benefit losses while ensuring that States are not exposed to unmanageable costs. I am hopeful that any welfare reform bill enacted into law will contain such protections, and I urge all Senators to support them.

TEEN PREGNANCY AND STATUTORY RAPE

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I am pleased that the Senate has made progress in two areas critical to reforming welfare—teen pregnancy and statutory rape. Both sides of the aisle have worked together to bring about this progress, and I am left hopeful that we can infuse future negotiations on other welfare issues with this bipartisan spirit of cooperation.

Mindful of the American public's demand for legislative progress this year, I joined other colleagues in sponsoring initiatives that would not only benefit children, but also reduce welfare spending. Budget specialists and community leaders emphasized the necessity of dealing with two underlying welfare problems—teen pregnancy and statutory rape. In examining these problems, we answered two necessary questions: First, who is on welfare? and Second, how did they get there?

Teenage out-of-wedlock pregnancy is a primary cause of long-term welfare dependency. Currently, 53 percent of AFDC funds go to households begun by teenage births. Senator CONRAD and I proposed an amendment to last year's Senate bill which requires teen mothers to live at home or in adult-supervised settings, establishes national goals regarding education strategies and reduction of pregnancy rates, and rewards States who meet these goals with a cash bonus.

The Senate included these provisions in the bill in front of us and strengthened the Federal role in combating this problem. However, teen pregnancy prevention is a battle that must be fought at the local level, as troubled teens demand direct individual attention and investment. By accepting my amendment which compels States to devote 1 percent of their Social Security block grant—$23.8 million—to prevention services, the Senate has spurred them to assume this responsibility. We are succeeding in aiding President Clinton as he endeavors, in his own words, "to get all the leaders of all sectors of our society involved in this fight."

The Federal Government, too, recently assumed more responsibility in accepting my amendment which targets the crime of statutory rape, a direct and indirect cause of teen pregnancy. The great majority of babies born to teen mothers are fathered by adult men, and the partners of the youngest mothers under the age of 14 are on average 10 to 15 years older than them. This Senate is sending sexual predators an unequivocally stern message—that we choose abstinence for children, and that we will not tolerate those who take advantage of a child's inability to form and articulate a decision about her body. Previously, we concurred that it is the Sense of the Senate that States should aggressively enforce statutory rape laws. Now, we are taking additional steps. The amendment requires the Justice Department to pay strict attention to this crime. They are to research the link between statutory rape and teen pregnancy, as well as those predatory men who commit these crimes repeatedly. They will also educate State and local law enforcement officials to effectively prevent and prosecute statutory rape.

Again, we include the States in this fight. This amendment compels the States to create and expand criminal law enforcement, public education, and counseling initiatives and to restructure teen pregnancy prevention programs to include men. Finally, States must certify to the Federal Government that they are engaged in such activities to stop statutory rape.

By focusing on the problems of teen pregnancy and statutory rape through these amendments, we are economizing our future welfare expenditures and improving the lives of poor children. The reality of mothers sacrificing educational opportunities to give birth to fatherless babies and live in poverty is not a choice. It is partly a result of the greater problems these amendments address.

I appreciate, and the American public will appreciate our bipartisan unity in demanding responsibility from fathers. They must own up to their paternity, pay child support, and set a good example for their children by working in private sector or community service jobs. A certain group of men must refrain from sexually preying upon young girls and dispossessing them of their fundamental right to make sexual, educational, and career choices.

Problems remain in this bill. I appeal to my colleagues to work together so that we can present not just a few amendments, not just one improvement, but an entire bill to the American citizenry that truly reforms the current system.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I know Senator EXON needs some time.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I thank the chairman for his consideration. I will say, there are several matters that I must, as manager of the bill on this side, have very limited and short debate on, things I need to enter. I might be able to do that between now and 2 o'clock, but if not, in order to protect the interests of those I represent, I ask unanimous consent that the 2 o'clock hour be extended by 10 minutes, to 10 minutes past 2, if necessary, to accommodate the Senator from Nebraska to carry out the duties that I must address.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DOMENICI. Reserving the right to object, I do not know what it is you want to do. Do you want to offer amendments on behalf of Senators?

Mr. EXON. Yes, these are things I have to do as a manager of the bill on this side, including points of order requests.

Mr. DOMENICI. Let me make one further request. Are any of those amendments for Senators who did not come today to offer their amendments? How many are those?

Mr. EXON. There are three amendments that were on the list that the Senators have not come to formally offer today, and I intend to perform that duty for them.

Mr. DOMENICI. So long as we clearly understand, this does not flow to Senators who come in here at 5 minutes after, this applies to you.

Mr. EXON. I amend the request, if I might. I ask unanimous consent that, if necessary to discharge the duties assigned to the Democratic leader of the Budget Committee, that the additional 10 minutes be assigned to this Senator and this Senator only.

Mr. DOMENICI. I have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. EXON. I thank my friend for his usual good cooperation. There are two amendments I will offer. They have been cleared on both sides. I think we can dispose of them quickly.

(C) the spouse or unmarried dependent child of an individual described in subparagraph (A) or (B).

(3) EXCEPTION FOR CHILDREN.—An alien who has not attained the age of 18 years.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I am deeply concerned that for the first time in history, Congress will ban legal immigrants from most assistance programs. Banning legal immigrants from these programs will also deny their children the assistance they need to become healthy, productive members of society. The amendment I am offering will exempt children from these bans.

The Republican bill permanently bans legal immigrants from SSI and food stamps. It bans them for 5 years from Medicaid, AFDC and other programs. It also gives States the option of going even farther, and permanently banning them from Medicaid, AFDC, and social service block grants.

Several preliminary points are important to understand about this issue.

First, this bill is a ban. Banning is not the same as deeming. In deeming, we look to the sponsor for payment before the Government pays. Under banning, the sponsor is not involved. The ban covers legal immigrants, with or without sponsors.

Second, we are not talking about illegal immigrants. This bill bans legal immigrants from safety net programs. These are individuals and families who come here legally, play by the rules, and pay their taxes. They are future citizens trying to make it in this country. Yet this bill would repay them by banning them from assistance if they fall on hard times.

Third, the ban's application to children makes no sense. Many children will be affected and harmed, but many others will not. It depends entirely on where they were born. Children born in the United States are U.S. citizens and will be eligible for assistance, even if their parents are legal immigrants. But children born overseas will be caught by the ban. So children in the same family will be treated differently, depending on where they were born. This is unfair.

Fourth, the children involved often live in the families of U.S. citizens. A typical case involves a citizen who has married and brought his new spouse and the spouse's child to America. Surely, they deserve help.

AFDC, SSI, food stamps and Medicaid are programs which are especially critical to children's health and development. Banning legal immigrant children from these programs puts their well-being at stake, and it puts the public at risk, too.

Legal immigrants can get sick like everyone else. Their families can fall on hard times. They can become disabled. Banning them from basic assistance programs means that when their sponsors can't provide support, immigrants won't get the help they need. Their medical conditions will go untreated and their disabilities will worsen.

These children are future citizens. Like all other children in America, they need and deserve to be assured of good health and good nutrition. If the Federal Government abandons them, communities will suffer.

When immigrant children get sick, they infect other children. By banning them from Medicaid, we are also banning them from school-based care under the Early and Periodic Screening, Detection, and Treatment Program, which provides basic health care to school-age children. It is part of Medicaid in most states.

Under this bill, legal immigrant children will be banned from going to the school nurse when they feel sick in school. If they try to see the nurse, the nurse cannot treat them because they are immigrants. They have no private insurance and they are banned from Medicaid. If the illness gets worse, their parents may take them to the local emergency room—a very expensive alternative and not likely to be pursued unless the illness seems severe.

Suppose a child has tuberculosis. In the time it took for the illness to worsen enough to be covered by emergency Medicaid, many classmates have been exposed—all because no early help was available.

In addition to Medicaid, the Republican bill bans legal immigrant children from SSI, which provided assistance to the blind and disabled. Nine thousand legal immigrant children are blind or disabled. They have some of the most complex and life-threatening needs of all. As a practical matter, such cases often involve tragic accidents, where expensive long-term care is needed to deal with debilitating conditions. If SSI is not available, children literally will die.

The Republican bill also bans legal immigrant children from food stamps, which could sentence them to a lifetime of health problems due to poor nutrition. Parents will have to turn to soup kitchens and food pantries just to feed their children. Yet, soup kitchens are already stretched beyond their capacity. Almost all soup kitchens limit the number of times a person can come to the kitchen for food. Some kitchens allow one visit a month. Others allow only three to six visits a year. If we cut off food stamps, many legal immigrant children will have nowhere to turn for food.

Nutrition is vital to the development of a child. Immigrant children are no exception. Without access to food stamps, some immigrant children will suffer a lifetime of anemia, stunted growth, and even permanent brain damage.

Finally, it makes no sense to ban legal immigrants from AFDC payments. AFDC allows mothers to place their children in child care, so that the parent can work or go to school. Without AFDC, parents will have to stay home to take care of their children. This bill is not welfare reform for legal immigrants. It will push families further into poverty, with no chance of escape.

For all of these reasons, I urge the Senate to adopt this amendment, and reject this harsh and extreme attack on immigrant children.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I yield back time on the amendment.

Mr. DOMENICI. Pursuant to section 310(d)(2), I raise a point of order against the pending Kennedy amendment on behalf of the Finance Committee.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I move to waive the point of order and ask for the yeas and nays.

AMENDMENT NO. 4956

(Purpose: To allow a 2-year implementation period under the Medicaid program for implementation of the attribution of sponsor's income, the 5-year ban, and other provisions)

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Massachusetts, Senator KENNEDY, I send another amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. EXON], for Mr. KENNEDY, proposes an amendment numbered 4956.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the changes in Medicaid for legal immigrants in this legislation will have a major impact on health care institutions and on the public health.

Virtually all of the Nation's hospitals have called on Congress to delay implementation of these changes for at least 2 years because of their far-reaching consequences. Those who have urged such a transition include:

The American Association of Eye and Ear Hospitals,

The American Hospital Association,
The Association of American Medical Colleges,

The American Osteopathic Healthcare Association,

The Federation of American Health Systems, InterHealth,

The National Association of Children's Hospitals,

The National Association of Community Health Centers,

The National Association of Psychiatric Health Systems,

The National Association of Public Hospitals,

Premier, Inc.; and

The Catholic Health Association of the United States.

My amendment responds to their concern by postponing the implementation of the Medicaid changes on immigrants for 2 years, in order to enable State and local governments and hospitals and clinics to make the major adjustments required under this bill.

Even with this transition, these changes will hurt the health care system and harm the public health. It is bad public health policy to deny Medicaid to legal immigrants. Last April, the National Conference of State Legislatures, the National Association of Counties, and the National League of Cities wrote to Congress stating:

Without this program eligibility, many legal immigrants will not have access to health care. Legal immigrants will be forced to turn to State indigent health care programs, public hospitals, and emergency rooms for assistance or avoid treatment altogether. This will in turn endanger the public health and increase the cost of providing health care to everyone.

But if these changes are to take place, then we should at least give health providers the time they need to adjust.

Although the bill continues emergency Medicaid for legal immigrants, they would be banned from regular Medicaid for 5 years. After that, they can qualify for Medicaid only if their sponsor's income and resources are too low to assist them. But States can decide to ban legal immigrants permanently from Medicaid.

Hospitals fear that if Medicaid is restricted, the loss of funds will require them to reduce services for everyone—citizens and non-citizens alike. Especially vulnerable are the most costly services, such as trauma care, burn treatment, and neonatal intensive care.

This crisis in funding will particularly affect hospitals that serve communities with large numbers of immigrants. In the case of public hospitals, most patients have Medicaid coverage. Today, at Cambridge City Hospital in Massachusetts, 48 percent of the patients are immigrants. That means the hospital could lose half of its Medicaid funding under this bill.

For Los Angeles County Hospital, the figure is 60 percent. For Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, 40 percent. For San Francisco General Hospital, 30 percent. For Harris County Hospital in Houston, 30 percent.

The sudden loss of Medicaid income from the immigrant population is denied coverage may well jeopardize the quality of health care in the entire community those hospitals serve.

In addition, those without health coverage through insurance or Medicaid are less likely to receive preventive medical care and timely immunization. The result is unnecessarily higher risks of disease in the community as a whole. The care system will try to prevent this result, but it is a gamble that Congress should not impose.

At a minimum, the health care system needs time to adjust. Under this bill, the Medicaid changes go into effect immediately for future immigrants. States may choose to deny Medicaid starting on January 1, 1997. That's unfair and unrealistic. Hospitals and State and local governments need time to adjust. Community health centers need to find ways to expand, as Medicaid resources dry up for hospital care. State legislatures will need to adopt new laws and adjust spending to compensate for the loss of Medicaid.

These complicated changes cannot occur overnight, especially in California, Texas, Florida, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Illinois, and other States with large immigrant populations.

These changes should not go into effect at all. But if they do, I urge my colleagues at least to hear the pleas and heed the plight of the hospitals. They need more time and they deserve it.

I urge the adoption of this amendment.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I yield back time on the amendment.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, pursuant to appropriate sections of the Budget Act, I raise a point of order against the pending Kennedy amendment on behalf of the Finance Committee.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, at this point, I move to waive all points of order against the pending amendment. I ask for the yeas and nays.

AMENDMENT NO. 4957

(Purpose: To modify remittance requirement from 5 to 7 days for child support enforcement payments)

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, since the hour of 2 is arriving and we have agreed to extra time just for Senator EXON, I send an amendment to the desk in behalf of Senator NICKLES. It was on the list. It modifies the requirement for remittance, making it 7 days instead of 5 for child support payments. I send that amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI], for Mr. NICKLES, proposes an amendment numbered 4957.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 438, line 15, strike "5" and insert "7".

Mr. EXON. We have no objection to this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 4957) was agreed to.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. EXON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, in 1986, the Congress enacted the so-called "Byrd rule," named for our esteemed colleague, Senator BYRD, now incorporated into the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 as section 313. Although it may seem arcane to those not immediately involved in the budget process, the Byrd rule has become a very important tool to curb provisions in the reconciliation bill that are extraneous to the purpose of deficit reduction. It helped close Pandora's box of reconciliation abuse, of which Senator BYRD so eloquently warned more than 10 years ago.

The Byrd rule provides six definitions of what constitute extraneous matter, but the term generally applies to provisions unrelated to the reconciliation deficit reduction goals.

For example, a provision in reconciliation could be challenged by a Senator if it produces no changes in revenue or spending or if such changes are merely incidental. Sixty votes are necessary to waive a point of order raised under the Byrd rule. Last year's reconciliation bill contained numerous Byrd rule violations. This year's bill is also brimming with violations. I will shortly present a full list to the Chair and raise a point of order, but I want to highlight two of them.

First, there is a provision that deletes a requirement that the Secretary of Agriculture promulgate rules so that school lunch contracts comply with the applicable meat inspection laws.

Second, there is a provision that strikes the requirement that positive efforts shall be made by service institutions to use small business and minority-owned businesses as sources of supplies and services for these school lunch programs.

Mr. President, once again, these are simply other add-ons that we should look to. Once again, this is not an all-inclusive list, but it gives the Senate a flavor of the violations that I will shortly raise.

With that, Mr. President, I send a list of provisions to the desk that I have referenced, and pursuant to section 313(d) of the Congressional Budget Act, I raise a point of order that these provisions violate section 313(b)(1) of that act.

The list follows:

Mr. DOMENICI addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENNETT). The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, might I inquire of the distinguished Senator, before I lodge my waiver with this, have we finished the work that you had alluded to that you had to do?

Mr. EXON. We have one other matter. It is simply something to offer into the RECORD, a letter from the President on the matter that I think you will have no objection to. Other than that, I have nothing further, after the motion that I have just made.

Mr. DOMENICI. I assume when we dispose of that, and you get your insertion, we are finished and have complied with the order about completing the work on this bill?

Mr. EXON. The Senator is correct.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, since I have not had time nor has our staff had time to review the list of subject matters for Byrd rule points of order—and I want to state in a very specific way that I totally agree with the statements of the Senator from Nebraska as to why we have a Byrd rule. It is not totally perfect, but it is much better than having this law and this reconciliation without that kind of limitation. Nonetheless, we have not had a chance to review them. So what I would like to do—and I am going to do this now; I want to explain it to Senator EXON—I am going to move to waive each one and then we will reserve until tomorrow and consult with all of you on which ones we may indeed seek a vote, if any.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, the request from the Senator is entirely in order. I had anticipated that they would have some time to look at the list because we have just completed it ourselves and sent it to the desk. Therefore, I have no objection to the request just made and would agree to it.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I move to waive the Budget Act with respect to each individual point of order that has just been sent to the desk and lodged by the minority.

I might inform the Senate that, without votes on the points of order if we elect to seek waiver, there are 22 stacked votes now in the event we vote on everything that we have heretofore cleared. The starting time, according to the previous order, unless changed, will be 9:30 a.m. tomorrow morning.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. EXON addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. EXON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter stating the administration's position on the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT, OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET,

Washington, DC, July 18, 1996.

Hon. J. JAMES EXON,
Committee on the Budget, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR EXON: I am writing to transmit the Administration's views on S. 1956, the "Personal Responsibility, Work Opportunity, and Medicaid Restructuring Act of 1996."

We understand that the Senate Republican leadership plans to move to strike the Medicaid provisions of this reconciliation legislation—leaving a welfare-only bill for Senate floor consideration.

We are pleased with this decision to separate welfare reform from provisions to repeal Medicaid's guarantee of health care for the elderly, the poor, pregnant women, and people with disabilities. We hope that removing this "poison pill" from welfare reform is a breakthrough that shows that the Republican leadership seriously wants to pass bipartisan welfare reform this year.

Enacting bipartisan welfare reform reflecting the principles of work, family, and responsibility is among the Administration's highest priorities. For the past three-and-a-half years, the President has demonstrated his commitment to enacting real welfare reform by working with Congress to enact legislation that moves people from welfare to work, encourages responsibility, and protects children. The Administration sent Congress a stand-alone welfare bill that requires welfare recipients to work, imposes strict time limits on welfare, toughens child support enforcement, is fair to children, and is consistent with the President's commitment to balance the budget.

The Administration is pleased that the bill makes many of the important improvements to H.R. 4 that we recommended—improvements also included in the bipartisan National Governors' Association (NGA) and Breaux-Chafee proposals. The Senate bill improves upon the bill that the House is now considering. We urge the Senate to build on these improvements, and to continue the bipartisan spirit displayed in last year's debate on welfare reform. At the same time, however, the Administration is deeply concerned about certain provisions of S. 1956 that would adversely affect benefits for Food Stamp households and legal immigrants, as well as the need for strong State accountability and flexibility. And, the bill would still raise taxes on millions of workers by cutting the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC).

IMPROVEMENTS CONTAINED IN S. 1956

We appreciate the Finance and Agriculture Committees' efforts to strengthen provisions central to work-based reform, such as child care, and to provide additional protections for children and families. In rejecting H.R. 4, the President singled out a number of provisions that were tough on children and did too little to move people from welfare to work. S. 1956 includes important changes to these provisions that move the legislation closer to the President's vision of true welfare reform. We are particularly pleased with the following improvements:

Child Care. As the President has insisted throughout the welfare reform debate, child care is essential to move people from welfare to work. The bill reflects a better understanding of the child care resources that States will need to implement welfare reform, adding $4 billion for child care above the level in H.R. 4. The bill also recognizes that parents of school-age children need child care in order to work.

Food Stamps. The bill removes the annual spending cap on Food Stamps, preserving the program's ability to expand during periods of economic recession and help families when they are most in need. We are concerned, however, with other Food Stamp proposals, as discussed below.

Maintenance of Effort. The Administration strongly supports the Finance Committee's changes to State maintenance of effort (MOE) and transfer provisions and believes these are critical elements of bipartisan welfare reform. The Committee removed the objectionable transfer authority to the Title XX Social Services Block Grant and other programs and would allow transfers to child care only. In addition, the Committee restored the 80 percent MOE level in last year's Senate bill and tightened the definition of what counts toward this requirement.

Work Performance Bonus. We commend the Committee for giving States an incentive to move people from welfare to work by providing $1 billion in work program performance bonuses by 2003. This provision was an important element of last year's Senate bill and the Administration's bill, and will help change the culture of the welfare office.

Contingency Fund. The bill adopts the NGA recommendation to double the Contingency Fund to $2 billion, and add a more responsive trigger based on the Food Stamp caseload. Below, the Administration recommends further steps that Congress should take to strengthen this provision.

Equal Protection. The Committee includes provisions that would require States to establish objective criteria for delivery of benefits and to ensure equitable treatment. We are pleased that the Committee also incorporates appropriate State accountability measures.

Hardship Exemption. We commend the Finance Committee for following the NGA recommendation and restoring last year's Senate provisions allowing States to exempt up to 20 percent of hardship cases that reach the five-year limit.

Transitional Medicaid. We are pleased that the Finance Committee has taken steps to ensure the continuation of Medicaid coverage for some of those who are transitioning from welfare to work. We are concerned, however, that States could deny this transitional Medicaid to many who would lose cash benefits for various reasons. In addition, we still have concerns with Medicaid coverage for those on cash assistance, as noted below.

Worker Displacement. We are pleased that the bill incorporates provisions against worker displacement, including protections from partial displacement as well as avenues for displaced employees to seek redress.

Child Nutrition. The bill now includes many provisions proposed by the Administration, and no longer includes H.R. 4's provisions for a child nutrition block-grant demonstration. In addition, the bill exempts the child nutrition program from burdensome administrative provisions related to its alien provisions. We believe that the Senate could further improve the bill by including the Administration's proposed 8 percent commodity floor.

Child Protection. We commend the Finance Committee for preserving the Title IV-E foster care and adoption assistance programs (including related Medicaid coverage), and other family support and child abuse prevention efforts.

Supplemental Security Income (SSI). The bill removes the proposed two-tiered benefit system for disabled children receiving SSI, and retains full cash benefits for all eligible children.

We remain pleased that Congress has decided to include central elements of the President's approach—time limits, work requirements, the toughest possible child support enforcement, and the requirement that minor mothers live at home as a condition of assistance—in this legislation.

KEY CONCERNS WITH S. 1956

The Administration, however, remains deeply concerned that S. 1956 still lacks other important provisions that have earned bipartisan endorsement.

Size of the cuts. The welfare provisions incorporate most of the cuts in the vetoed bill—about $60 billion over six years (including the EITC and related savings in Medicaid). These cuts far exceed those proposed by the NGA or the Administration. Cuts in Food Stamps and benefits to legal immigrants are particularly deep. The President's Budget demonstrates that cuts of this size are not necessary to achieve real welfare reform, nor are they needed to balance the budget.

Food Stamps. The Administration strongly opposed the inclusion of a Food Stamp grant option, which could seriously undermine the Federal nature of the program, jeopardizing the nutrition and health of millions of children, working families, and the elderly, and eliminating the program's ability to respond to economic changes. The Administration also is concerned that the bill makes deep cuts in the Food Stamp program, including a cut in benefits to households with high shelter costs that disproportionately affects families with children, and a four-month time limit on childless adults who are willing to work but are not offered a work slot.

Legal Immigrants. The bill retains the excessively harsh and uncompromising immigration provisions of last year's vetoed bill. While we support the strengthening of requirements on the sponsors of legal immigrants applying for SSI, Food Stamps, and Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC), the bill bans SSI and Food Stamps for virtually all legal immigrants, and imposes a five-year ban on most other Federal programs, including non-emergency Medicaid, for new legal immigrants. These bans would even cover legal immigrants who become disabled after entering the country, families with children, and current recipients. The bill would deny benefits to 300,000 immigrant children and would affect many more children whose parents are denied assistance. The proposal unfairly shifts costs to States with high numbers of legal immigrants. In addition, the bill requires most Federal, State, and local benefits programs to verify recipients' citizenship or alien status. These mandates would create extremely difficult and costly administrative burdens for State, local, and non-profit service providers, as well as barriers to participation for citizens. Also, the Administration urges that Senate not go in the harsh direction that the House Rules Committee did yesterday in reporting a provision that would broaden the ban on current immigrants from receiving Medicaid coverage.

Medical Assistance Guarantee. The Administration opposes provisions that do not guarantee continued Medicaid eligibility when States change AFDC rules. We are concerned that families who lose cash assistance for various reasons, such as reaching the five-year limit or having additional children while they are receiving assistance, could lose their Medicaid eligibility and be unable to receive the health care services that they need. In addition, State flexibility to change these AFDC rules could adversely affect Medicaid eligibility determinations, including eligibility for poverty-related pregnant women and children.

Protection in Economic Downturn. Although the Contingency Fund is twice what it was in the vetoed bill, it still does not allow for further expansions during poor economic conditions and periods of increased need. We are also concerned about provisions that reduce the match rate on contingency funds for States that access the fund for periods of under a year.

Resources for Work. S. 1956 would not provide the resources States need to move recipients into work. The bill increases the work mandates on States above the levels in H.R. 4 while providing no additional resources for States to meet these more stringent rates. Based on CBO estimates, the Senate bill would provide $12 billion less over six years than is required to meet the bill's work requirements and maintain the current level of cash assistance to poor families. CBO notes that "most States would be unlikely to satisfy this requirement." Moreover, the Senate bill would lead to a $2.4 billion shortfall in child care resources (assuming States maintain their current level of cash assistance benefits, continue current law Transitional and At-Risk child care levels, and do not transfer amounts from the cash block grant to child care).

Vouchers. The bill actually reduces State flexibility by prohibiting States from using block grant funds to provide vouchers to children whose parents reach the time limit. H.R. 4 contained no such prohibition, and the NGA opposes it. We strongly urge the adoption of voucher language, similar to that in the Administration's bill and Breaux-Chafee, that protects children.

Child Care Health and Safety Protections. The bill repeals current child care health and safety protections and cuts set-aside funds to the States to improve the safety and quality care. We strongly urge the Senate to restore these basic health and safety protections, which were enacted with strong bipartisan support in 1990 and maintained in last year's Senate bill and are essential to the safety and well-being of millions of young children.

Family Caps. The Senate bill reverts back to the opt-out provision on family caps which would restrict State flexibility in this area. The Administration, as well as the NGA, seeks complete State flexibility to set family cap policy.

EITC. The Administration opposes the provision in S. 1956 that raises taxes on over four million low-income adult workers by ending inflation adjustments for working households without dependent children, and thereby substantially cutting the real value of their tax credit over time. Raising taxes on these workers is wrong. In addition, the budget resolution instructs the revenue committees to cut up to $18.5 billion more from the EITC. Thus, EITC cuts could total over $20 billion. Such large tax increases on working families are particularly ill-conceived when considered in the context of real welfare reform—that is, encouraging work and making work pay.

We strongly support the bipartisan welfare reform initiatives of moderate Republicans and Democrats in both the House and Senate. The Breaux-Chafee proposal addresses many of our concerns, and it would strengthen State accountability efforts, welfare to work measures, and protections for children. It provides a foundation on which the Senate should build in order to provide more State flexibility; incentives for AFDC recipients to move from welfare to work; more parental responsibility; and protections for children. It is a good, strong proposal that would end welfare as we know it. Breaux-Chafee provides the much needed opportunity for a real bipartisan compromise, and it should be the basis for a quick agreement between the parties.

The President stands ready to work with Congress to address the outstanding concerns so we can enact a strong, bipartisan welfare reform bill to replace the current system with one that demands responsibility, strengthens families, protects children, and gives States broad flexibility and the needed resources to get the job done.

Sincerely,

JACOB J. LEW,
Acting Director.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I am pleased to present to the Senate today the bill making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture and related agencies for the fiscal year 1997. This bill provides funding for all of the activities under the jurisdiction of the Department of Agriculture, except for the U.S. Forest Service. It also funds the activities of the Food and Drug Administration, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, and pays for expenses and payments of the Farm Credit System.

This bill recommends total new budget authority of $54.3 billion. This is $9 billion less than the 1996 enacted level for these programs and these activities. It is $4 billion less than the President's fiscal year 1997 budget request. It is $1.2 billion more than the level recommended by the House.

Over 76 percent of the total to be spent under this bill will go for funding of the Nation's domestic food assistance programs. That represents $40.5 billion of this $54.3 billion bill. This is up from 63 percent of the total funding in the bill in 1996. These programs include food stamps, the national school lunch and elderly feeding programs, and the supplemental feeding program for women, infants and children.

The bill recommends total discretionary spending of $13.118 billion in budget authority and $13.409 billion in outlays for fiscal year 1997. These amounts are consistent with the allocation the subcommittee has received under the Budget Act.

Senators should also be aware these allocations are approximately $510 million in budget authority and $440 million in outlays less than what would be required under a freeze. The suggestion this year, for those who are following the budget debate, was that spending under the discretionary programs of the Federal Government ought to be held level with last year's spending. That was the goal, that was the objective. This bill meets that target and then some. There is actually a reduction in spending from the freeze level in this bill as compared with last year's or the current fiscal year's budget and appropriations levels.

We do have some parts of this bill where spending is increased. Among the discretionary spending increases recommended are an additional $12.8 million to continue the efforts of the Food Safety and Inspection Service to ensure the safety of our Nation's food supply. The level recommended for the Food Safety and Inspection Service is adequate to maintain the current inspection system and to provide the needed investments required to implement the new hazard analysis and critical control point meat and poultry inspection system. We are hopeful that by bringing this new system online we can take advantage of new technologies, new scientific advances, in the detection of those contaminants in the food supply that we would not be able to detect otherwise, and we will help ensure that we are doing everything that possibly can be done to safeguard the food supply and the consumers of food in America from harm and ill health.

In order to implement the system, the bill provides funding to fill all inspector vacancies, funding to train inspectors in the new inspection system, and funding for the annualization of fiscal year 1996 pay raises and anticipated 1997 pay raises. This demonstrates the high priority this committee places on the safety of our Nation's meat and poultry and our commitment to ensure that American consumers continue to have the safest food in the world.

Another area of emphasis in this bill is agriculture research. The bill provides $1.1 billion for funding of agriculture research. This is approximately $7.3 million below the level requested by the administration, but it is $25 million above the House-recommended level. Included in this amount is $52 million for food safety research. The committee has provided the full increase of $7.5 million requested for food safety research.

For extension activities, the bill recommends $431 million, which is $3.3 million above the fiscal year 1996 level. The Smith-Lever and Hatch Act formula funding are continued at 1996 levels. The increase recommended for extension activities will provide first-time funding for institutional capacity grants and extension work at the 29 tribally controlled colleges, or 1994 Institutions.

Farm credit programs are funded by the bill, which provides $3.1 billion in loan levels for the coming fiscal year. This is an increase of $65 million over the House-recommended level.

The bill also recognizes that efficiencies can be gained through the consolidation of programs to improve their efficiency in terms of administrative costs and paperwork and the like. So the bill consolidates funding for 14 rural development grant and loan programs into a rural community investment program. It is divided into three subprograms: housing, business cooperative assistance, and rural utilities assistance. The 1996 appropriations act created the first of these consolidations for rural utilities. The funding levels provided for all three of the programs were equal to the comparable levels requested in the budget.

On an aggregate basis, the funding levels in the bill represent an increase of $231 million more than the House-passed bill. The bill funds, as I mentioned before, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and the Food and Drug Administration. We are trying to provide levels of funding that will enable these two agencies to do the job they are required to do by law and that will enable them to discharge their responsibilities under the law.

The bill also carries a provision to ensure the continuation of WIC Program funding and Food Stamp Act funding, as well. The bill includes a provision to amend the Food Stamp Act, to exclude electronic benefit transfer systems for the delivery of food stamp benefits from the Federal Reserve Board's "Regulation E."

There are other provisions of the bill that seek to deal with challenges in the food service area, and we hope Senators will find that we have demonstrated a sensitivity to the needs of those who cannot adequately provide for their own nutrition needs and need Government help to do it. But we also reflect in this bill changes and reforms that have been made by law to try to ensure that there is a sense of personal responsibility for one to take care of himself and his family, and that also is reflected in this legislation.

Senators may remember that, last year, when this bill was on the floor, there was a big debate over a regulation being proposed by the administration—the Food Safety and Inspection Service, specifically—dealing with when poultry products could be labeled as "fresh" or "frozen." Well, I am happy to report to the Senate that a compromise has been reached among those who were directly interested in the debate last year, so that the definition of the term "fresh," as used in labeling of raw poultry products, is reflected and included in this legislation. We hope that resolves the issue. Of course, the administration still has differences of opinion about it, and those

We think this is a responsible way of resolving that issue. There are other provisions related to legislative changes the House recommended that we deleted. The House rewrote some provisions that were included in the farm bill, and we did not go along with those House provisions. So Senators will notice that we do not provide a cap on the price of raw sugarcane, for example. We do not approve a provision relating to planting requirements under the farm bill that would be required to meet eligibility standards for a market transition payment. We revised that to make it consistent with the language of the law, the farm bill that was passed by both Houses and signed by the President. So we do not try to go in and rewrite the farm bill in this bill. We urge Senators not to try to do that with amendments.

Only 24 percent of the total funding recommended by this bill is discretionary. These have been difficult challenges for the committee to resolve, trying to determine how to allocate scarce funds that are made available to this subcommittee under the budget resolution. We hope Senators will agree that we have undertaken this and presented a bill that is done in a fair way, so that those essential activities in the Department of Agriculture that are authorized and required by law are funded. But we have tried to be responsible, and we hope Senators agree that we have. These are recommendations that we make to the Senate, which we hope will be approved.

Let me say that this bill could not have been written without the excellent cooperation and dedicated and intelligent assistance of the distinguished Senator from Arkansas, the ranking Democrat on the subcommittee. He has served as chairman of this subcommittee in the past, and it has been a pleasure to work with him and the members of his staff in the development of this bill.

We had hearings all through the earlier parts of this year. We heard from all of the agencies and departments, whose budgets were reviewed by our subcommittee very carefully. We have considered the suggestions of others outside of the Congress, who have opinions to be expressed on these subjects. So we have tried to consider all of the relevant evidence and facts that ought to be considered before presenting this bill to the Senate. We hope the Senate will approve it, and we recommend that it be adopted.

We know that Senators may have amendments. If they do have amendments, we will be glad to debate them. Let me repeat the suggestion of the majority leader when he was asking consent to go to this bill today. We hope to complete action on this bill today. That means that all amendments that are going to be offered should be offered today and debated today. We will reserve any votes on those amendments, and any vote on final passage, until tomorrow. We appreciate the cooperation of Senators that will enable us to accomplish that goal.

Mr. BUMPERS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry. Has there been a unanimous-consent agreement entered that we would start back-to-back votes on welfare bill amendments in the morning?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. At 9 o'clock, yes, that is correct.

Mr. BUMPERS. Does the consent agreement continue on what we will do after those votes and final passage on the welfare bill?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is reminded that it is at 9:30 that we vote and 9 o'clock that we meet. After getting rid of the list of votes, we will resume consideration of the agriculture bill.

Mr. BUMPERS. That is the reason I was asking. I hope we do not have to resume. I hope we can finish the bill this afternoon and this evening.

I am pleased to join my very able colleague, Senator COCHRAN, in bringing to the Senate floor the fiscal year 1997 appropriations bill for Agriculture, rural development, the Food and Drug Administration, and related agencies. This bill, reported by the Senate Committee on Appropriations, provides $54.276 billion in total obligational authority for the coming year. That is $1.224 billion more than the House provided and $4 billion below the President's request. It is within the subcommittee's 602(b) allocation. This bill is nearly $10 billion below the amount under which we are operating this year, 1996. That will be $10 billion less than in 1997. The subcommittee's discretionary allocation has again been reduced this year from $13.31 billion in budget authority for 1996 to $12.102 billion for 1997. That is a reduction in discretionary spending of $529 million dollars. Unfortunately, we have received an increase of $300 million-plus in our allocation, which gets us a little closer to last year's level, but still the bottom line is that we have less to spend again this year.

Mr. President, in all of my years on this subcommittee, the Agriculture Subcommittee, this year has been the most difficult. That causes me to, again, congratulate Senator COCHRAN for his leadership in working through these very difficult problems and crafting a bill to meet the expectations of most Senators. It meets the hard-pressed needs of rural America and, also, America's dependence on a safe supply of food and drugs.

There are still plenty of unmet needs in rural America, but, given the constraints under which we are operating, this is an excellent bill.

One item in the bill is very important to all of us, and it is greatly improved over last year's funding level.

The Water and Sewer Program in the U.S. Department of Agriculture, in my opinion, is just about the very best investment we make. It improves the quality of life for all people when they have pure water and sewer systems that are safe. Last year, these programs were severely underfunded. But this year, Senator COCHRAN has been able to provide an increase that almost brings us to our budget request. That is an admirable achievement.

Let me digress to point out that people who travel around the world find that there are very few countries that you can visit where you can turn on the tap water and feel relatively safe in drinking it. As a matter of fact, I can only think of one or two right now where you can do that. The people who live in and near Washington, DC, have just recently found that not only happens in other countries but it happens right here in the United States in some of the major metropolitan areas.

In other areas, this bill provides level funding for the WIC Program—women, infants and children. Historically, this program has witnessed annual increases in funding that have actually exceeded the caseload. So we have been carrying over money in the WIC Program. This program has accumulated, and it has reduced the pressure on us to continue increasing the amount of money every year. Even considering the general budget constraints, we are within reach of full funding for WIC, a goal which I believe is shared by every Member of the U.S. Senate.

As WIC administrators work this coming year to provide nutritional assistance to women, infants, and children, I hope that next year we will finally reach the goal of full funding and the more important goal of full participation.

Last year, Congress passed and sent to the President a new farm bill. This year, when the bill was considered by the House, a number of provisions were included to change some of the underlying philosophy of the farm bill. I did not vote for the farm bill. I did not like it, and I still do not like it. But that is beside the point at this stage of the game.

Contracts that farmers all across America thought would guarantee them payments for 7 years were being reduced by the House Appropriations Committee even before the farmers got their first payment. Regardless of my views of the so-called freedom to farm payments, we need to remember that farmers are now in the middle of their growing season. Their investments are on the line, and they deserve to know what to expect and that the rules are not going to be changed in the middle of the game. The chairman has already alluded to the fact that he hopes Senators will not try to redebate that bill. In the bill before us, we have taken great pains not to amend the basic rationale for last year's farm bill.

There is one major concern I have that deserves mention. When the President's budget was presented to this subcommittee, loan authority assumptions were much too high to be met considering the small subsidy provided. Mr. President, let me just explain that.

Every loan program is scored by OMB and the Congressional Budget Office as to how much money you have to assume you are going to lose. If you are going to loan $1 million, you have to put some amount in there for what the banks would call reserve for loan losses. That is called the subsidy rate. The subsidy rate in this bill as provided by the administration, in my opinion, is much too small to fund the authority of loans set out in all of these different Federal programs. In my opinion, we are not going to be able to loan as much unless we have a supplemental appropriation sometime next spring to raise that subsidy level.

We are including in the managers' package an amendment that will allow the Secretary to transfer excess WIC funds to meet the needs of loan programs such as those tied to water and sewer programs in rural housing.

Mr. President, before anybody thinks that is cruel and taking money from women, infants and children to fund a subsidy rate for water and sewer programs, bear in mind that this is money not used by WIC. This is similar to an amendment I offered last year that provided an additional $36 million in the Water and Sewer Program with no detrimental effect to the WIC participation. This amendment will help, but it probably will not provide enough additional budget authority to achieve full program levels. That is the reason I mention additions to the subsidy in some supplemental appropriations next spring.

I hope in future budget submissions, the administration will take greater care to make sure that rising interest rates or other economic conditions do not provide falsely optimistic assumptions of what may be the reality on the first day of the following fiscal year.

I also want to mention an issue which I raised during subcommittee consideration of this bill related to an FDA proposal to require certain labeling requirements for prescription drugs—the so-called med-guide rule.

Let me digress just a moment to say that—this is a little personal—I recently had an illness. I went to the drugstore to get four different medications. I have studiously avoided taking aspirin all of my life. I hate medicine. I do not like to take it. But in this case it was required. For the first time in my life, the pharmacist with each of the four prescriptions handed me a rather detailed description of the medicine—what it was designed to do, contraindications to look for, any reactions that you might have. I read it very carefully. It is the first time I had ever gotten anything like that.

As it turned out, I was allergic to one of the drugs, which caused me to have a fever, a rash, and I had to quit taking it. But the informational sheet that the pharmacist gave me had pointed out that that very thing might happen.

That is good information. It is the information that the pharmaceutical-buying public is entitled to. I understand—and I agree with the concerns of the Food and Drug Administration—that consumers need to be provided with this information.

As I pointed out, some pharmacies are already doing it on a voluntary basis. Of course, they are getting their information from the pharmaceutical manufacturers of those drugs. But all pharmacies are not doing this now. In some cases, the information is not totally accurate or complete.

So in the full committee, I offered report language that will help relieve some of the concerns that Commissioner Kessler expressed to me about the statutory language contained in this bill. I understand the House has similar language but of a nature more to the liking of the commission. In my report, language is designed to give FDA assurances that the information to be provided to consumers will be appropriately crafted and higher rates of participation by pharmacies will be obtained.

Mr. President, that concludes my remarks. Again, I want to congratulate my good friend and colleague, Senator COCHRAN and his able staff in drafting the bill now before us.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. COCHRAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Arkansas for his kind remarks and again repeat my expression of appreciation for his hard work and his good assistance in the preparation of this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the committee amendments which are at the desk to H.R. 3603 be considered and agreed to en bloc; that no points of order be waived thereon; that the measure, as amended, be considered as original text for the purpose of further amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

The committee amendments were agreed to.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I know that some Senators are considering amendments. One Senator has just come to the floor—Senator GREGG of New Hampshire—who wanted to give the Senate notice that he intended to offer an amendment on a subject. Maybe, if he can tell us when he wants to do that, we can reach some agreement as to the time. I know there are a couple of other Senators who have asked that they be permitted to offer amendments early in the consideration of the bill. Senator MCCAIN is one, and there may be others.

So we are ready to accept the suggestions of Senators for changes in the bill. I would be happy to yield to my friend from New Hampshire if he would like to respond to my inquiry.

Mr. GREGG. I am happy to respond to the inquiry of the Senator from Mississippi. I would like to offer my amendment when it is convenient to the Senator from Mississippi.

I ask if he would ask unanimous consent that no second-degree amendments be offered to my amendment.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I can say that we have gotten notice—and maybe the Senator from Arkansas has heard of this—from one Senator on this side of the aisle who asked that no unanimous-consent agreement be made on any amendment relating to the issue of sugar.

Having heard that—I do not know whether the Senator has heard that or not—I do not know of any objection to any agreements on this side of the aisle on that subject. We have not heard of any. My thought would be if the Senator has an amendment to simply go ahead and offer it and let us see what happens. If Senators want to debate it, they can come and debate it.

Mr. GREGG. In a prior discussion with the Senator from Mississippi, it was my understanding this was going to be subject to a time limitation of 40 minutes.

Mr. COCHRAN. I have no objection to that. I have heard there may be an objection on the other side of the aisle. There is no objection on this side.

Mr. BUMPERS. There will be an objection, I say to the Senator from Mississippi, on this side.

Mr. GREGG. I guess if I had known that I would not have foreclosed my rights on other parts of this bill.

Mr. COCHRAN. The Senator has all of his rights. There are no rights of his whatsoever that have been extinguished in any way or diminished in any way.

Mr. GREGG. There are a few that have been extinguished and diminished, I point out to the Senator, in allowing—

Mr. COCHRAN. The committee amendments to be adopted.

Mr. GREGG. The committee amendments to go forward. It was my understanding that committee amendments would go forward because I was going to be given a specific time and time limit. That does not appear to be the case. I find that to be inconsistent with the understanding I had. And I guess I just have to accept the fact things happen that way around here.

Mr. BUMPERS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BUMPERS. If I may just in a general colloquy with the distinguished chairman of the committee say that normally when we have a series of amendments to be offered on a bill like this, we sort of go back and forth between the Democratic side and the Republican side. I would suggest that that is fine if you have the Republicans and Democrats waiting to offer amendments, but that very seldom happens on this bill. And if there are three Republicans and no Democrats in the Chamber waiting to offer amendments, then I suggest we take them and not sit around waiting for somebody on the other side to come and offer amendments in order to accommodate a protocol we have used in the past.

Would the Senator agree with that?

Mr. COCHRAN. I certainly agree with the Senator. We want to complete action on all the amendments. The majority leader wanted to have votes on whatever amendments have to be voted on tomorrow and final passage tomorrow. To do that we are going to have to move along because I have seen a list of amendments that we have heard may be offered, and there are some 20 on that list. So in order to expedite the handling of those amendments, I agree with the Senator that we should move along. We would like for Senators to come now to the floor and start offering these amendments so we could dispose of them.

Mr. BUMPERS. I noticed that the Senator and I each have an amendment which I think have been agreed to. The Senator has one to provide for electronic warehouse receipts, is that correct? Could we dispose of that one now?

Mr. COCHRAN. Senator PRESSLER was going to offer that. We could offer it for him, but if he wants to be here and offer that amendment, we will give him an opportunity to do so.

Mr. BUMPERS. All right.

Mr. COCHRAN. Maybe we will let him know he should come and offer that amendment if it is convenient at this time for him. We are actually waiting on some language before we could offer that. The Senator could go ahead and proceed to offer his amendment, if he would like.

Mr. BUMPERS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, we are scratching through here trying to find this amendment. Until we can find it, let me suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislate bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4958

(Purpose: To transfer $50,000 from CSREES research and education to extension activities)

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and I ask that it be reported.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. COCHRAN] proposes an amendment numbered 4958.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 12, line 25, strike "$46,068,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$46,018,000".

On page 14, line 10, strike "$418,358,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$418,308,000".

On page 17, line 8, strike "$11,331,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$11,381,000".

On page 17, line 8, strike "$431,072,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$431,122,000".

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, this amendment would reduce the total recommended for special research grants under research and education activities of the Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service by $50,000 and increase the amount recommended for Federal administration under extension activities of the service by the same amount.

The amendment would affect only funds recommended for research and extension work in Mississippi. It would create a new grant under Federal administration for an extension specialist in Mississippi of $50,000 to cover an unfunded requirement which was just brought to my attention. To offset this additional funding, the amount recommended for aquaculture research in Mississippi would be reduced from the $642,000 to $592,000, eliminating the additional funds recommended to enable the National Center for Physical Acoustics to provide additional support to the National Warmwater Aquaculture Center.

Mr. President, we have shown this amendment to the other side, and we understand there is no objection.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, that amendment is acceptable to this side. Has it been agreed to?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It has not been agreed to.

Is there further debate? If not, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4958) was agreed to.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. BUMPERS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, since it is 3 o'clock, this being the time I was advised to bring this amendment to the floor and at that time there was to be a time agreement, which appears now will not occur, I thought I would discuss my amendment and point out some of the problems with the sugar program and then make a decision later on as to whether or not I will offer it in this context or not. But essentially what this amendment deals with is the sugar program.

For those who may be following this debate in some other venue other than this floor, because I know everybody who is a Member of the Senate understands the sugar program, the sugar program is the last vestige of gross corporate welfare in the farm community.

In the farm bill that was just recently passed, there was a major initiative undertaken to try to put the farm community generally on a more market-oriented approach, although some arguments might claim it is even less market oriented. At least it was an attempt to have some forces brought to bear on what farmers would plant, how much they would plant of a certain commodity which would be something other than a decision made by a Government leader. It would be the marketplace.

However, there still exists this sugar program which has just the opposite approach toward financing and growing and creating of sugar in this country. The sugar program, as it is basically structured today, is a classic, what can best be defined as a Marxist system of economics. Essentially, the Government sets a price for a commodity which far exceeds what the marketplace would set for that commodity were the marketplace allowed to work in its ordinary fashion, and then it requires the consumer to pay that price no matter what the consumer's interest may be. As a result, the growers of that product grow it, make a great deal of money and have no relationship between what they grow and what the market wants or what they grow and what the market wishes to pay. It is a classic definition of Marxism.

In fact, this program is so outrageous that it costs the American consumer approximately $1.4 billion a year of subsidies to a very small cadre of very influential sugar growers. In fact, I think the number I saw was something like less than 70 sugar growers obtaining a huge percentage of the income from this program.

This subsidy is a function of the fact that it costs about 23 cents a pound for sugar in the United States, whereas on the world market, it costs about 13 cents a pound for sugar. Think about that for a minute. It is hard to believe that an American product would cost American consumers twice what the world market is. You might expect that in the old Soviet Union. You might even expect it in Cuba today. But in the United States, for somebody to be paying twice the cost of a product that is paid by people in other countries for that same product when that product is fully fungible around the world is incomprehensible. It just runs against the whole concept of a market economy, of an American system, what the United States theoretically stands for in the international community, what we stood for years against the Soviet system and what has theoretically, at least, won the debate of international economics—something called market forces.

If a commodity costs 10 cents or 13 cents in Brazil, or let's take a more industrialized state—although Brazil is a very industrialized state—say, Spain, Japan, or France, and that commodity, that item you want to buy costs 13 cents, in this case that is called a pound of sugar—if you wanted to make some chocolate chip cookies maybe or a cake—and in the United States, it costs 23 cents, you would say, "Well, that can't be, that can't be. Why would that be?"

Why, in a country that professes a free-market approach to economics, an international world free market, would one commodity that we grow in the United States that is grown around the world and moves from country to country with fair ease, why would that commodity cost 10 cents more in the United States per pound than it does in some other reasonably industrialized nation?

The reason is because the influence of the people who make all the money on this product is so great that they are able to set up a system which benefits a few at the cost of many. It is pretty much the last surviving system of this type of productivity in our country in the farm program area. There is still some of this, obviously, in the peanut area, and to a slighter degree, you can argue in the dairy area, but a much slighter degree. But clearly, sugar is unique in having this level of perversion of the marketplace for the benefit of a few at the expense of the many, at the rather significant expense, $1.4 billion of expense.

You might think that people who would be getting a $1.4 billion extra price for their product beyond what the market usually bears or would reasonably bear, would think that they were satisfied, but that is not the case here. I suppose greed feeds on greed, and it is inevitable, if you have proven that you can be really greedy and successful, you can get even greedier.

So this group of great troughers—by troughers, I mean porker, corporate pork—this group of magnificent troughers—these folks would win just about any contest at any country fair in the pork-producing category—decided that not only do they have to have a price that is almost twice the world price for the product, which the American consumer has to pay, they do not even want to have to pay off—when they borrow from the Federal Government to produce that product, should they by some unbelievable process lose money, they do not even want to pay it off.

Not only do they want a product that is priced at twice what it is worth, but should they actually lose money producing a product that is priced twice what it is worth—it is hard to believe they might lose money—but should they lose money, they do not even want to have to pay it off. They have something called the Nonrecourse Loan Program. This is almost beyond belief. It is so egregious in its attack on all sensibility relative to the marketplace—a nonrecourse loan.

If you are a student in the United States and you find yourself going to a school that costs you more than you can afford to pay from the summer job you have been working for the last 5 or 6 years, and it costs more than your parents can afford to pay because they cannot simply scrape together enough, because a college education has become so expensive, if you are a student and you borrow $1,500, $2,000 from the Federal Government, and you cannot pay it back, does the Federal Government say, "That's OK, forget it, you don't have to worry about it"? No. The Federal Government requires you to pay it back. We do not do a very good job of collecting it. I admit that. We have to change our collection system. But to those people who are honest and sincere—that is the majority of our American students—they have to pay their loans back.

But not the sugar industry. No. The sugar industry, after ripping the American public off, after the $1.4 billion a year, after being the biggest porkers in America, they do not even want to pay back their loans.

If you are a veteran, and you get a VA loan, have served this country—maybe you have even given blood for this country, maybe you are even a wounded veteran—and you get a VA loan, and you find that you cannot pay that loan back, does the American Government say, "OK. OK. Forget it. We won't collect that debt"? No. It does not. It duns your VA benefits, probably garnishes them, takes them as payment even though you may not be able to afford it because you may have other expenses at that time.

But do we say that to the sugar producers in this country? No. We do not. To the sugar producers, we say, because they have the power to demand it, "If you don't want to pay your loans back, tens of millions of dollars of loans back, it's OK. Forget it. That's all right. The American taxpayers are already paying $1.4 billion to your industry. Why not pay a little bit more through a nonrecourse-loan process?"

If you happen to be a homeowner who borrows money through the HUD program, and you have your first home, and something goes wrong with your family finances, and the Government comes in and takes your home—which might be similar to a recourse loan—does the Government stop there, to the nonrecourse loan? No. It does not. No. It does not. If there is a debt above the obligation that is available through the repossession of your home, the Government has the right—may not exercise it—but it has the right to collect that extra debt from your wages.

So if you own a home, and through some real tragedy or some unfortunate situation your home is taken from you as a result of your not being able to pay back that debt—and it is a Government loan—the Government has the right to sell the home, and to the extent that the price of that home, as sold, does not cover the cost of your loan, and you personally are liable, you personally, you, John or Mary Jones, working down at the pizza store or working on an assembly line in Detroit or working at a computer shop in New Hampshire, you are personally liable for that loan.

Is the sugar producer—even though his or her company may have borrowed millions of dollars—are they liable for that loan? No. They are not. No. They are not. It really is hard to believe that that would be the case in this economy, in this structure we would have that sort of situation. But that is the way it is. That is the way it is structured, as unbelievable as it may seem.

I guess it survives because of the fact that it has what is known as logrolling. "You scratch my back; I'll scratch your back." There are enough people producing this product in the country, although many of them are not very large compared to the big guys, that they all feel they have to protect the program and, therefore, everybody helps everybody else out. But it is pretty hard to defend this program under any sort of—you do not have to look through a magnifying glass to defend this, to look at this program, and see it is an outrage. You can take this glass of water, and put this on top of the program, and you would see that this program is just an unbelievable outrage on the body politic of the American consumer, and $1.4 billion a year in the process.

Nonrecourse loans. Just imagine it. If you are a student you have to pay your loan back. If you are a homeowner, you have to pay your loan back. If you are a veteran who served this country, you have to pay your loan back. Even if it is only $1,000, you have to pay it back.

If you are a sugar grower, processor, you do not have to pay it back. You do not have to pay it back. That is after you made the price of the product twice what it is worth. Pretty outrageous. "Sweetheart deal" I think is the term that most appropriately comes to mind. Corporate pork would be an understatement.

There is some logic, I suppose, to say that small farmers need to be protected. Maybe you will hear small farmer stories. Well, maybe small farmers do need to be protected. And to the extent we have good stories about small farmers, I suspect there will be some nice sad stories told. But the fact is that the amendment I am going to offer is not going to affect any small farmers. It is going to affect farmers of over $10 million in sales. And that is not a small farm. This is not a small farm in New England, not small anywhere. And $10 million is a good many sales. So small farm stories are not applicable to this issue at this time, although certainly they will be raised.

This issue, the issue of the sugar program, has been brought up on a number of occasions in this body. It has always been defeated. Any attempt to address the sugar program has been defeated. It was defeated last year even in the midst of major rewriting of the farm programs generally, as I mentioned earlier. Defeated a couple of years ago. It has always lost, but usually the amendments have been directed at substantive reform of the pricing mechanism. You know, this fact that you, the consumers, are paying 23 cents for a pound of sugar when your neighbors, maybe relatives in Canada, are paying 13 cents.

So that has been the usual target of the amendments. That has been soundly defeated because the influences I mentioned of so many different groups growing this product around the country is so pervasive. So my amendment—which the recourse issue does not take on that core issue of pricing policy, although pricing policy certainly should be addressed. And I would be happy to do it if I thought I had a chance of being successful. But I know I do not. My amendment takes on the issue of recourse.

As a practical matter nobody in this body should object to this, because, as I mentioned, the price of the product has been made so high that how can you object to the concept of having to pay back your loans when you are already getting such a huge subsidized price? Then if you compare the fact that you are requiring people to pay back their loans who are fairly large businesses—$10 million in sales—well, that is not too outrageous, not too outrageous, to require them to pay back their loans.

So I am talking about really a peripheral amendment here. I have to admit to that. I wish it was more at the heart of the sugar program. I wish it went to the pricing mechanism. But you know, I accept reality. I cannot win that one. I got 35 votes last year, probably about the same this year. So what this amendment does—I hope my fellow Members of the Senate will take a look at it who voted against affecting the pricing mechanism. It does not address that. So all the sugar beet growers and all the sugarcane growers are still going to get their 23 cents a pound out of the American consumer. They are going to get their pound of sugar out of the American consumer.

What they should not get, however, is this nonrecourse treatment that we do not give to students, we do not give to homeowners, we do not give to veterans. I mean, let us have some decency around here. Let us admit that we will let them go to the trough and maybe eat everything in it, but let us not let them eat the trough, too. It is getting a little outrageous.

So that is the purpose of this amendment. And I regret that the context of offering this amendment puts me in a difficult position, because I understand that I am not going to be protected on second-degrees, and I understand I am not going to be protected on time. I will say this, however, that I do think this is an important issue to vote on, that we will vote on this issue, I hope, before we complete this bill. I have no desire to delay this bill.

I know the Senator from Mississippi and the Senator from Arkansas have worked hard to move this bill quickly, and they have done a superb job of getting it out of committee. On the general farm programs, they have done an extraordinary job of funding those in, I think, a responsible way. This program, really, is independent of that effort. They have done an excellent job on this bill. I do not want to delay it. I want the bill to get through as soon as it can.

I do think this has to be voted on. I hope when I send this amendment to the desk, it will not be subject to a second-degree amendment. It can be couched in a variety of terms, so obviously we can return to this issue if it is, ad nauseam.

AMENDMENT NO. 4959

(Purpose: To prohibit the use of funds to make loans to large processors of sugarcane and sugar beets unless the loans require the processors to repay the full amount of the loans, plus interest)

Mr. GREGG. I send the amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GREGG] proposes an amendment numbered 4959.

At the end of the bill, add the following:

SEC. . REPAYMENT OF CERTAIN SUGAR LOANS.

None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be used to make a loan to a processor of sugarcane or sugar beets, or both, who has an annual revenue that exceeds $10 million, unless the terms of the loan require the processor to repay the full amount of the loan, plus interest.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the clerk for reading the amendment. I did want the whole amendment read so it would be understood. It is an amendment which on its face says, as I stated, if somebody is going to borrow from the Federal Government, even when they are getting twice the price for their product they should be getting, if somebody is going to borrow from the Federal Government, they ought to pay the Federal Government back.

Now, some will claim they can take the sugar and then the Federal Government can sell the sugar. That is true, but if there is a difference, the Federal Government eats the difference. There is no reason the Federal Government should be put at that risk. They are not put at risk for students, veterans or homeowners, so we should not be put at that risk for sugar growers simply because they have the capacity to protect themselves in the legislative arena better than students, homeowners or veterans.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is now a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I was listening attentively to the Senator describe his amendment dealing with the issue of sugar. He finished by talking about sugar growers. Of course, the Senator understands that no one grows sugar; they grow sugar beets, to be sure, and the beets are processed into sugar.

The issue as presented by my colleague is an interesting issue and an important issue. This morning in North Dakota and elsewhere in the country, some folks got up and ate breakfast early. These were families with a full day's work to do. They need to keep their machinery in order, tend to their land, look over their sugar beet crops. Farmers work pretty hard. They invest a fair amount of money into a farmstead and try to make a living.

One of the circumstances we find in the farm programs is that there are difficult times for people who are out there living. There are difficult times for those trying to make a living because there is so much uncertainty. You can plant, and in no time at all through a whole series of things over which you have no control, you see everything gone. Acts of nature, a whole range of circumstances can conspire to wipe you out completely and quickly.

For that reason, the Federal Government has had a farm program. The Federal Government has said we believe there ought to be a network of family farmers in this country who have an opportunity to make it. So for a whole series of farmers raising crops, we have tried to create a safety net.

Now, within that farm program is a sugar program. The sugar program tries to provide a safety net for those folks, particularly in my part of the country, who raise sugar beets. As I listen to this debate, it is interesting how this issue is described because the description is so at odds with what the reality is.

I hear people stand on the floor of the Senate and talk about 10 cents being the world price for sugar. Well, that is not a legitimate free-market price for sugar. That is the dump price for sugar. People who study this issue understand that most sugar is traded country to country through long-term contracts. Only the residual sugar produced over that is dumped on the open market, at dump prices, dirt-cheap prices, and then some people say that is the true market price. Nonsense. That is not the true market price. It has nothing to do with a true free market price. It is a dump price for residual sugar supplies above that which is needed and above that which is traded country to country.

In this country, we have developed a program that provides loans. Those loans, through the Commodity Credit Corporation, cannot be made directly to sugar cane and sugar beet growers because sugarcane and sugar beets are not storable commodities. So the loans are made to the raw cane farmers and the beet sugar processors. I must point out, in North Dakota, those processors are by and large cooperatives. Those cooperatives are owned by the growers. The growers are the farmers.

The fact is I am proud of what has happened under this sugar program. I am proud because we have a circumstance where one part of this farm program, at least, works well and works to provide some stability in price to the beet growers—yes, in North Dakota and other parts of the country.

Now, that stability has given them an opportunity to make a living out there on the land. This is not, as some would suggest, some giant giveaway program. It is not a program that will require people at the grocery store to pay an extraordinarily high price for sugar. That is not what the program is about.

This program happens to be one of the programs that I think is good for both the producer and the consumer. It is especially good for those consumers who care about whether producers are able to live on a family farm, who understand that this matters to our country. I think it does matter to our country. It is good not only for those objectives, but it is also good for the general consumer.

You go back some years and evaluate what happened in this country when we had a shortage of sugar, and sugar prices jumped up, skyrocketed at the grocery store counter. Then there was a lot of concern about what this meant to the consumer. Well, the consumer, then, had to pay more for sugar because we had uncertain supplies, unstable supplies.

What the sugar program has done is merge two different approaches. One side of the approach says that we will try to provide something that gives some price stability to those who raise beets. The other side of the approach says that we are going to provide an advantage to the consumer who will have price stability on the grocery store shelf.

Is that price stability higher than it might be if, during years of world surpluses, we could have accessed the cheapest possible dump price for sugar? Sure. But is that price lower than it would be in times of shortage because we have a more stable capability in this country of providing for those needs? Yes. My point is this kind of program advantages both the producer, the family farmer being the producer, and also the consumer.

We have fought this battle before. We have had those persons who feel strongly about it come to the floor and say this is a program completely without merit. They say that it is a program that ought to be abolished, and they have tried to abolish it in a dozen different ways.

I must admit this amendment is a crafty technique, I say to my colleague, to try to essentially obliterate the sugar program. However, Congress has reviewed this and Congress has said this program makes sense. This program is not costing the taxpayers money. It is a program that has worked well. It is a program that has achieved its objectives of trying to provide some stability and some help for the family farmers out there, who in my part of the country raise sugar beets. It is a program also that has the ancillary benefits of helping the consumers in this country with some price stability.

Let me mention one other thing. As all of us know, in this debate there are competing forces. There is a force out there in our country—maybe I should not name it—that uses a great deal of sugar. The companies that make candy bars and other things use a great amount of sugar, and they very much want to see the dump price of sugar prevail for a while in this country as the U.S. price. I understand that. I suppose if that were my business, I would be arguing for the same thing. But that happens to be, in my judgment, a selfish position, looking after only their own interests.

But there are other considerations. The Senate and the House have gone through this and debated to try to determine where the reconciliation is here. We have tried to discover how we do this the right way, and is there a need to provide some stability in the price of these commodities. Is there a reason to give a hard working family farmer an opportunity to take advantage of that stability? The answer has been yes. Do we want that level of stability to be something that is so artificially high that it injures others that are involved in other businesses? The answer to that is no. That is what the compromise has been.

This compromise has been worked and reworked. I must say that I compliment the Senator from Mississippi, Senator COCHRAN, and so many others. Let me compliment someone who is leaving this Congress—Congressman KIKA DE LA GARZA. This is his last year in Congress. But those who understand the sugar program, especially in modern days, and its genesis, understand that KIKA DE LA GARZA has played a large role in shaping it. Republicans and Democrats have thought this through to determine what is the best public policy here. They have, I think, come to a reasonable position of supporting the provisions that are now in law, provisions that I think make sense for this country.

On a broader question, one can always, it seems to me, on almost every issue, come to the floor of the Senate and argue some kind of global construct that persuades us that there is a cheaper price somewhere. You can always find a price or position, in some nook or cranny of the economy, that you can access and that somehow would be beneficial for the country. I do not think that is what we are searching for. I think what we are searching for is public policy, especially in the area of commodities, that represents this country's interests.

Part of this country's interests lie in trying to maintain a network of family farms in our country. I am proud to tell you that at least North Dakota, one of the most agricultural States, has a network of family farms. The Red River Valley contains a network of those family farms that are trying to raise sugar beets. They have come together in cooperatives that process the sugar beets and have been quite successful. I commend them for it. I only wish that our farm programs for other commodities were as successful as this program is.

It seems to me that it ill-behoves this Congress to take a look at what works and take that apart and stop it, as opposed to evaluating what does not work and seeing if we cannot fix it. It really does not serve our interests to start deciding that those things that do function well are things that we ought to try to mess up in one way or the other.

So I very much admire the Senator who is the author of this amendment. We have worked together on many things, and will again, but he is dead wrong, in my judgment, on the sugar program. It is not new to him. He has been dead wrong on it for some long while. I know he feels strongly about it. We have a fundamental disagreement. I do hope that the Senate recognizes the balance that has been struck. I think it is good for producers and good for consumers.

It is a balance that augurs for this kind of a program to try to help family farmers in our country. I hope the Senate will, at the appropriate time, reject the amendment offered by Senator GREGG.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. CRAIG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I come to the floor this afternoon, once again, to find myself in opposition to my colleague from New Hampshire on an issue that we both feel very strongly about. So for the next few moments let me say to my colleague from New Hampshire that while I disagree with him on this issue—and we very clearly disagree—we remain good friends and working partners on a lot of other issues. I must look at his amendment and what he has said about his amendment in relation to the sugar program in the new farm bill and take issue with it on an item-by-item basis, as I think is necessary. It is important for the record, so that the facts of this issue come forward.

Mr. President, when I first came to Congress in 1980, I came from a farming and ranching background, and for the 1980's, I remained actively involved with my family in farming and ranching. But I must say that my family never was involved in raising program crops. So I, frankly, did not know a lot about farm programs. I did not know a great deal about farm programs and program crops. It was not until I became a Congressman, representing the First Congressional District of Idaho, that I found it necessary to look at these programs on a program-by-program basis, Mr. President, and try to understand what they were all about.

My colleague from New Hampshire and I are pretty much alike. We are fiscal conservatives. We tend to be free marketers. And so when I began to look at the sugar program, I saw something that I had heretofore not understood. One of the first things I found out about it was that no check went to the farmer. The farmer, whether he be a cane grower or a sugar beet raiser, never received a check from the Federal Government. They received their payment from the sugar processor, who they were contracted with to raise the beets, or to raise the cane. So there was no, if you will, direct subsidy to the farmer, direct check to the farmer, as is true in other program crops.

One of the reasons this program had been developed, in a way, in that nature was because both the plant itself, the sugar beet, and the beet itself, in storage, are quite perishable. Because it was a nonrecourse loan program, it would not have been wise for the Federal Government, in this instance, to produce a loan when there was no collateral. And so as a method of even marketing into the system, it became the sugar processor who was the individual who took loans out from the Government inside a Government program, a sugar program, and they used, as collateral, refined sugar. So there was no direct payment to the farmer.

So the Senator from New Hampshire is wrong today. We will not hear a story about the plight of the small farmer. The small farmer, in this case the sugar beet raiser, whether it is in North Dakota or whether it is in Idaho, does not receive a check from the Federal Government. They receive a stable price for their product from a refiner that is engaged in a nonrecourse loan program with the Federal Government, which allows that refiner to market sugar into the market in a stable way.

So I am sorry that I will disappoint my colleague from New Hampshire. No story about the plight of the small farmer. Although I am very much concerned about the small farmer, I will tell my colleague from New Hampshire, with the hundreds of thousands of acres of sugar beets in Idaho, it is a good and profitable crop. One of the reasons it is is not because they get a check from the Government, but because the industry, through the program, is allowed to develop a loan relationship with the Federal Government, which creates stability in the marketplace. Therefore, it affords a stable price for the crop, and that creates stability at the farm itself. That is a point that I think is very important to remember.

So, in essence, the amendment that my colleague from New Hampshire is offering today, which is a cap, if you will—or it says loans are limited to those under $10 million—there is not a refiner in the market that grosses less than $10 million. So the amendment, for all intents and purposes, destroys the sugar program as we know it.

The second point, this is not just a refinement of the existing program. This is a killer amendment of a program that we spent over 12 months negotiating about with the industry and the growers associations. The reason we did that is because I, along with my colleague from New Hampshire, said it was time to reform the farm bill and get Government out of agriculture as much as we could. As a result of that, we put major reforms into the sugar program.

Mr. DORGAN. Will the Senator yield for a moment on that point?

Mr. CRAIG. Yes.

Mr. DORGAN. The Senator talked about family farmers. I want to try to understand the point he made.

The point, as I understand it, is not that this does not help family farmers. This ultimately does help family farmers. But it helps family farmers through price stability—not a Government check. I think that is the point the Senator from Idaho was making.

The reason I asked the question is that I was making the point that this matters to a lot of family farmers. It matters because if you destroy this program you destroy their price stability; and, frankly, a lot of them will not be farming anymore. But this is not a Government check to those farmers. As the Senator from Idaho properly said, it helps the processors to provide price stability for farmers, which is exactly what makes this a successful program and one that does not cost the taxpayers' money.

I appreciate very much the Senator yielding.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, so the point I think that my colleague and I are trying to make here is that, if there is a role for Government in agriculture—I think there is one, and I think it ought to be a very limited one—I see it in one of two or three areas. That is not to directly prop up or to subsidize a producer who has to produce to a market but allowing Government to help facilitate at no cost to the taxpayers anomalies within a market environment that only the Government can maybe help in because of their scope and their size, or in an instance where there is direct competition from foreign markets in which cheap product is produced either because of "near slave labor" or because of subsidized Government programs in other producing areas of the world than the necessity of a relationship there where our Government can facilitate without it being a cost to the taxpayer.

In all of those instances the sugar program meets those tests. In the area of trade, where you have real political consideration and political powers vying against each other that distort the marketplace, I believe our Government can be a facilitator to production agriculture, and it works in this instance. And it works so to create stability in the marketplace. When you create stability in the marketplace you benefit the small farmer producer, and you do in real terms because you do not have the kind of gyrations in the market where one year wheat is worth a great deal of money and the next year you ought to plow it under because it is worth no money. That is the kind of instability we saw in the sugar program in the late 1970's and the early 1980's.

Those are some of the issues and items that I learned, Mr. President, when I got here as a freshman Congressman and I knew very little about sugar. I also learned something else: That when we began to make reforms in the program starting back in 1980 when we found out that we could not operate under the kind of program we were living under, and because of the boom and bust in the marketplace, with the tremendous influence of dumping raw cheap foreign sugar on our market we came back to a Government program, or at least a program where the Government became a participant to facilitate.

When we did that we said something very important. We said that this ought not be a subsidy—that it ought to be no net cost to the taxpayer.

Since 1980 my colleague from New Hampshire knows as well as I do that this has been a no net cost to the taxpayer because that is what the law says. And in that context, while I was listening to my colleague a few moments ago, I became frustrated when he began to insinuate that this was costing the taxpayer money—or that in fact it was costing the Government money—that is a nonrecourse loan if defaulted upon costs the taxpayer money.

Two years ago, when we did have some default because the loans were collateralized on refined sugar, the Government took the sugar, sold it, and made money—no net cost. Technically inside the law my colleague from New Hampshire, the Senator from New Hampshire, is right. From a technical point of view he is absolutely right—that, if the price of refined sugar had dropped dramatically, there might be a loss. But the law says no net cost to taxpayers.

As a result of that we have put the loan rate at a rate to cover those margins, and it has no cost. He used an example of the veterans; the homeowner. I must tell my colleague from New Hampshire, my Senator friend, that he knows this—that when the Government loans money on a house they have the house as collateral. And if the person who borrows walks away from the house—and that happens—the Government has the house and they sell the house. They have the sugar and they sell the sugar.

He used student loans. Student loans are the only area where Government loans do not have collateral. Many students have walked away from their loans and the taxpayers had to eat them. That was increasingly so until the Senator from New Hampshire and I came in the early 1980's and said, "No. You can't do that kind of thing anymore. If we are going to loan money to students they have to pay it back." That became an increasing prerequisite of student loans throughout the 1980's and into the 1990's as we increasingly provided more money in the student loan program.

So if you loan money to a GI, in many instances on education, that is an outright gift. If you loan money to a student, you hope they pay it back. They are obligated to pay it back. If they declare bankruptcy and walk away from it, even though we put a no-bankruptcy clause in, some of them do not. Most of them do, thank goodness. But if the Federal Government borrows money on a house and the person walks away from the house, they can follow the person legally through the channels; and, if the person does not have any money, the Government has the house. That is the reality. We know those things.

In a nonrecourse loan to the refiner the Government has the sugar. The example of default cannot be painted to be dramatic because it hardly exists. It rarely exists. Over the last 2 years it has existed, and, when it did, the Government took the refined sugar, sold it, and made a little money above and beyond their expenses.

Mr. President, if the Government can operate a program like that that creates stability in the marketplace, that keeps thousands of farmers producing, that disallows the dumping of cheap sugar in our market and does so in a way that is of no net cost to the taxpayer, I would say that is probably a pretty good program. Maybe that is the way Government ought to work in this instance. It creates the kind of stability we want.

The amendment that the Senator from New Hampshire offers imposes an eligibility test for participation in what is now a new sugar program. For over 12 months we worked at defining a new program, and we put it in a 7-year farm bill. Growers began to plant to that farm bill this spring.

I would have hoped that my colleague would have accepted those reforms. But I understand that he does not. He wants the program eliminated. That is his choice to offer on the floor his amendment, and clearly he does that because nobody in my opinion can largely agree with his $10 million revenue threshold to establish it. If a refined cane miller or a sugar beet processor has annual revenue which exceeds $10 million they are not eligible for the program as written in the farm bill. Currently all U.S. raw cane millers and sugar beet processors have annual revenues above $10 million. Thus, no domestic produced sugar would be eligible for current loan programs if this amendment were enacted. This amendment will invalidate and render useless the hard-fought reform that I have just mentioned that won on this floor of the Senate by 61 to 35 vote.

In the loan program, while I think I have discussed that in a reasonably thorough way, Mr. President, USDA cannot make loans directly to the sugarcane or the sugar beet grower, as I have mentioned.

The reason is that raw sugarcane and beets are perishable, and although my colleague did not specifically speak to the collateralization of the loan, the loans are collateralized by refined sugar, and that is why the Government has not lost any money on this, not only by actual practice but by the law itself.

The loan rate for raw cane sugar is 18 cents under the new program and has been frozen at that level since 1985. The farm bill makes that freeze level a permanent one. The current loan rate is well below the domestic market price of 22 cents. So you have that cushion of protection between the 18 cents and the 22 cents.

USDA loans on sugar have consistently been repaid, as I have mentioned, with interest. It sounds as if our Government, in this instance, was a pretty good banker. The sugar program has been operated at no net cost. Meanwhile, U.S. consumers continue to buy sugar at a price some 28 percent below the average price in the rest of the world's developed countries.

For just a moment, Mr. President, let me speak briefly again about the non-recourse versus recourse loans that go to the heart of the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire. Currently, all sugar loans, along with wheat, cotton, rice, and corn, are non-recourse loans. This means that the only way to collect repayment of the loan is to assume the collateral. Rather than collect massive stocks, USDA operates the program so that there are no loan forfeitures or cost to the Government.

What the opponents suggest is that this system be changed to basically a recourse loan program and the $10 million threshold. Under this system, the Government could use any means necessary to collect the value of a loan. No other commodity has a recourse loan.

Those are some facts that I think are extremely important as we deal with this issue.

Mr. President, because we are now just at the beginning of a new farm bill, and while all of us spent nearly 2 years crafting this document—and the Senator from New Hampshire was directly involved in trying to change it with amendments in this Chamber, which was certainly his right and his prerogative, so he and I and everyone else have had a substantial part in shaping the new farm policy, but we did it. We put it in effect for 7 years. As a result of that, scores of farm organizations around the country have said now it is time to leave it alone and let it work for a while under the promises that the Government collectively made would be a part of the program.

The American Farm Bureau Federation, the American Sheep Industry, the Society of Farm Managers and Rural Appraisers, the Soybean Association, National Association of Wheat Growers and Barley Growers, the National Corn Association, the National Cotton Council, the National Council of Farm Cooperatives, the National Sorghum Producers, the National Milk Producers Federation, the National Peanut Growers Association, the National Pork Producers Association, and the National Sugar Farmers and Processors, all of them have basically said now that you have crafted a farm bill, we urge you to stay with it because this is something you just do not change overnight. Certainly in my State of Idaho, the millions and millions of dollars of investment it takes to farm and to produce means that you do not quickly change the program if you change it overnight. Of course, the Congress has the right to do that. But we understand the importance of making sure that the program is stable.

I hope I have portrayed my opinion of the effects of this amendment by the Senator from New Hampshire. If not, I am sure he will correct me, and I will stand corrected if I am wrong. But I think it is important to remember that this is a program that since the early 1980's we have refined and shaped and reshaped so that we create stability in the market; that we offer a supply of sugar which is substantially less expensive than sugar and sweetener around the world; that we are in compliance with GATT, and as we move toward that, one of the things which is clearly understandable is that our level of participation in the program reduces as other governments around the world subsidize, sugar levels reduce because of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. All of that is part of how our Government has worked, and I believe properly so, under the direction of the Congress and under the new farm bill that we have before us.

So I hope that my colleagues in reviewing this amendment will reject it. I certainly do not plan to second degree it, and I do not know of anyone else who does. It is not my intention to want to put cute words around it, to try to hide the impact. I believe this program is strong enough to stand on its own, as it has in the past, as it did by a 61 to 35 vote several months ago on the floor of the Senate. And I hope that Senators, in reviewing this, could reject it out of hand and allow the program, which we have effectively refined and developed, to operate for a period of time to see if we get the savings. Let me also conclude by saying that one of the things which is very important to remember—and I am not sure whether the Senator's amendment would therefore forfeit this figure—one of the results of the program and the no net cost to the taxpayer is the assessments that are generated through the new program that will produce about $300 million in deficit reduction.

Now, if the Senator is still going to say let us keep the assessments but let us kill the program, then, in essence, he has created a new tax on producers, because we not only eliminated marketing allotments, we implemented a 1-cent penalty effectively lowering loan rates and we have an assessment that will generate about $300 million in deficit reduction to the Treasury over the life of the program of 7 years. As a result of that, we think we have put together a positive reform package not only for the American taxpayer, but, in this instance, for the producer-processor to create a stable market for the commodity that they produce.

I yield back the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I certainly appreciate the eloquence and the aggressiveness and obviously the effectiveness of the Senator from North Dakota and the Senator from Idaho in defending the sugar program as it impacts their sugar beet growers who, in most instances, I suspect—I suspect in all instances—are very hard working, farm community votes. However, the sugar program itself is structured in a way that it benefits a lot of major corporate farm activity, and that farm activity, as I mentioned before, is extraordinarily expensive to the American consumer in an unfair and unjust and unmarket-oriented way.

The argument on the other side appears to have fallen into a few categories. Let me try to respond to them in some sort of argument.

The first argument is that this amendment would eliminate the program because any processor doing more than $10 million in business would be out of the program. No, that is not true. I think that is simply not true. It would say that any processor who generates more than $10 million in annual sales would have to pay their loans back—just like a student, just like a veteran, just like a homeowner.

Now, there was some representation that we do not collect veterans' loans and maybe they are an outright gift. I do not think so. I think most veterans pay back their loans, but if they are not paid back, the Federal Government has the right to go after them individually. The same thing of a student. If a student does not pay back his or her loan—it happens a lot, unfortunately—the Federal Government has the right to collect that. Of course, in the homeowner's situation, that is a collateralized event. The Federal Government takes the home, sells the home, but if there is a deficiency, in other words, if there is a difference between what that home is sold for under foreclosure and what the note is paid out for and the note exceeded the foreclosure price of the loan, the individual remains personally responsible for that amount.

What we are suggesting is that a $10 million processor as a consortium, as a co-op or as a manufacturing cooperation, the $10 million processor should have to be liable also just like the student is, just like the veteran is, just like the homeowner is for that loan. So the program is still very much available. It is available under approximately the same terms and conditions relative to default and recovery that a loan to a student is, that a loan to a veteran is, and that a loan to a HUD recipient of a home ownership loan is. You have to pay the loan. You have to pay back the Government. That is all we are asking.

So the program is very much vibrant and alive. To reflect the fact that there is a sort of inherent contradiction in this debate that I hear from the other side, the position of the other side, on the one hand, they are saying this proposal, which is to allow people to borrow the money but to have to pay it back, versus borrow the money and then if they decide they do not want to pay it back they can just turn over their sugar to the Government—that this proposal is going to have a disastrous, debilitating, totally scorched earth effect on the farm program; and then I heard that nobody has ever defaulted, or if there has been a default they sold the collateral for more than the loan was worth.

So why is this such a terrible event? Why is it such a terrible event to make it a matter of public policy that people who borrow money from the Federal Government should pay it back? I guess it is a terrible event because it happens to be perceived, I think, as a threat to the sugar growers and the sugar processors. They maybe see it as a camel's-nose-under-the-tent approach to the issue of their $1.4 billion subsidy which they are taking the American consumer to the cleaners with.

But, as a practical matter, the debate on the other side of this issue has defended the position I have proposed in this amendment, because they have stated accurately that there have been no defaults that would have created recourse beyond the collateral, and, therefore, why should it matter to the industry if they find themselves subject to recourse loans? Especially when you have an Agriculture Department that is controlling the importation of sugar so it keeps the price of sugar 4 to 5 cents above what the loan price is? I mean, really. It is like going into a blackjack game and saying, "You have to deal me both an ace and a jack. If you do not deal me the ace and the jack, I am not going to play."

In this case we are going to give them the ace and the jack, I guess. But it makes no sense, that if they should, by some strange coincidence end up losing, they should not at least expect the Federal Government should be paid back. It is hard to believe there is a scenario where under the present scenario they would lose. As long as the Department of Agriculture is going to keep the price 4 cents or 5 cents above the loan price, how do you ever end up with the collateral being less than the loan? It is pretty hard to see that fact pattern occurring.

But I am told this amendment devastates the program. How does it devastate a program when the defense of the opposition has been that there has never been a default, and when the numbers, on their face, speak for themselves that if there were a default, there would not be any recourse?

No, I do not think it devastates the program. It does not affect the program at all. That was my point when I first started this. I said, "Gee, I would really like to do something about this program but I know I cannot win. But let us at least get ourselves on some sort of even keel relative to the American taxpayer and relative to fairness. If we are going to say to the homeowner and the student and the veteran you have to pay your loans back, let us say to the processor you have to pay your loan back, too. That is the purpose of this."

So I do not think there is any substance to that argument. I think the substance of it was undermined by the presentation of the defense. To the effect there was a substantive point made in the opposition, it went to the issue of this price stability, which was specifically stated by the Senator from North Dakota and clearly implied and alluded to by the Senator from Idaho.

Essentially, the theme of that position was that if you do not have price stability in sugar, then you are going to have up-and-down years, you are going to have years when the price will go down, when there is dumping, and years when the price will go up. So the idea is to have 23 cents or 22 cents all the time for sugar, even though the world market price is 13 cents. Granted that may be a dump price, for all I know. It may not be, but it could be a dumped price. But there is clearly a heck of a lot of difference, there is a big difference between 22 cents, 23 cents, and 13 cents. So somewhere in there is the real price of sugar one presumes, between those two numbers. It is pretty obvious the American consumer is paying a lot more than the real price, if the world dump market is 13 cents.

So, if that is the case, if the purpose here is to maintain a stable price for sugar, if that is the real gravamen of the argument, and that price always has to be 23 cents or 22 cents—and why is that number picked? That number is picked because the loan price is 18 cents and they do not want anybody defaulting on their loan. If we apply that logic to all the commodities made in this country: All right, let us see, now. A couple of weeks ago my son bought a MacIntosh computer. I bought it for him for his birthday. The price of that computer, as I recall, was somewhere in the $1,500 range. It was a pretty expensive item, but it was for schooling. It seemed like a good investment. His sisters can use it.

All prices of all computers should be $1,500—right? The theory of the sugar program is the price for a commodity should be the same price at all times, because the prices might go up and the prices might go down; if you want to maintain stability—we have a lot more people working in the old computer industry in this world, in the Apple computer industry, I suspect, than make sugar. I bet there are probably more people that work for Apple Computer than produce sugar.

What has happened to Apple computers because they have not had a Department of Agriculture fixing the price of that product? The prices went down. I found out a few days ago I could have bought the same computer I bought a few months ago for $400 less, because there is something called a price war going on in the computer industry. And, worse than that, for the folks at Apple, they are in serious trouble. They have had to lay off thousands of people, because their product was not able to maintain the employment. And the prices of computers and other computers that have been brought on the market that have made that Apple computer, which is a heck of a good computer, I think—especially the software in it—be not as competitive with whatever the appropriate other computer that is competing: Dell, AST, Gateway, Digital. Digital is a great computer, by the way—made in New Hampshire.

The point here, of course, is: It is called a marketplace. It is called America. It is called a market system. It is called capitalism. It is called "what made this country great." It is called competition, worldwide, sometimes.

Take another little commodity called cars. Shall we fix all Chevrolets at the price of Chevrolets sold in the year 1979 or 1985? We could, I suppose. Then we would not allow the Japanese to import to compete.

I think we went through that, did we not? That is why the Big Three had such a tough time, because their quality went down because they did not have the competition. Prices stayed up. Then, when they did get the competition, it took them a while to turn around. Of course, with American know-how they did it pretty quickly, didn't they?

Now you have the most viable and energized car producers in the world, and they are American again. For a while, of course, we had a huge Japanese threat to our industry, but we responded.

Are we to say that the sugar growers in this country would not be able to compete? I do not know, I guess that is exactly what we are saying in this plan. But, essentially, this concept of stable prices, which has been alluded to specifically by the Senator from North Dakota and clearly highlighted or addressed by the Senator from Idaho, is another term for non-market-place economy. It is another term for price fixing. Price fixing does not benefit the consumer. It does not benefit the marketplace. It benefits that small group of people who are able to benefit from the fixed price which, in this case, happens to be a very small group of sugar growers, and it is extremely expensive to the American economy.

There was a statement that there are no tax dollars at risk; the taxpayers pay nothing. Well, if you say that the dollar that a taxpayer pays in taxes and a dollar a taxpayer takes out of his wallet to pay for sugar does not come out of the same wallet, then I guess taxpayers are not impacted. If the taxpayers are some mythical beings out there who don't go to the marketplace and buy food then, yes, there is no impact on the taxpayers.

But if the taxpayers happen to be real, live Americans who go down to the grocery store and buy food with those dollars that are left over after the Government takes their money for taxes, well, then it does impact them quite a bit, because they are paying somewhere around twice the going rate for the price of sugar. They are paying $1.4 billion a year more to buy that sugar than they should have to. But this amendment does not address that issue, that outrageous issue which I would love to address. Unfortunately, I cannot get the votes to address it. But this amendment does not address that issue. This amendment addresses the fact that these are loans that do not get paid back if they go bad.

Granted, it may never happen. It may never happen that the Agriculture Department is able to manipulate, through controlling imports, something that comes close enough to the loan price so that there never is a loan that goes bad. But there ought to be a statement of policy, at least, that this Congress expects the $10 million processor to at least be as liable for his or her loans or its loans from the Federal Government as we expect the struggling student, the veteran and the homeowner.

There were a couple of ancillary issues that were raised that I think need to be addressed. Maybe I already addressed them. I was even more thorough than I thought in my statement, so I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. COCHRAN addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, let me compliment those who participated in this debate for the efforts they made to fully acquaint the Senate with the issue that is before us with the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire.

My reaction to it at this point is that this is an issue that has been before the Senate, was before the Senate, was fully debated when we were undertaking to write the new farm bill, which contained a lot of market transition reforms, included reforms in the Sugar Program and many others, and this issue has been resolved, or at least a bill was passed by the House and Senate, a conference occurred, a conference report was written.

This is the conference report that was compiled by conferees on the part of the House and the Senate, almost 500 pages in length, devoted to farm programs and the role of the Federal Government and the private sector in trying to make available to Americans abundant supplies of reasonably priced foods and commodities.

The President signed the bill, and this is the law. The bill before the Senate today simply funds the activities of the Department of Agriculture and related agencies. It doesn't seek to address suggested changes in agriculture or farm policy, as such, but simply to undertake to allocate to this Department the funds it needs to carry out its responsibilities as defined by the law.

So this is a proposal by the Senator from New Hampshire to change the law and, therefore, it seems to me ought not to be adopted by the Senate. It is very technical, obviously. I was reading section 156 in the conference report that deals with the Sugar Program, and it talks about the nonrecourse and the recourse loans that are a part of that program, and it is very, very technical.

I was thinking, how is a Senator who is not a member of the Agriculture Committee, has not been a party to the hearings and discussions about how this is going to work as a practical matter, how is he going to be able to decide, how is she going to be able to decide whether this is an amendment they want to vote for or against.

These are arguments that have been made on both sides of the issues. I compliment the Senators involved. I think the only thing we can be sure of is we will vote on this. We will vote on this amendment. The yeas and nays have been ordered, and the vote will occur in due course of proceeding on this bill. It will not occur today. But under the order entered for the consideration of the bill today, it would be put over and a vote will occur tomorrow.

I am going to have to come down on the side of the Senator from Idaho and the Senator from North Dakota in arguing that the amendment be voted down. I hope Senators will vote against the amendment, with due respect to my very good friend from New Hampshire, whom I admire greatly.

Mr. President, we are prepared to receive other amendments, or any further debate on this amendment would be in order if Senators care to debate the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

AMENDMENT NO. 4968

(Purpose: To restore funding for the Agriculture Research Service at the level approved by the House of Representatives)

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside, and I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

On page 10, line 18, strike "$721,758,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$702,831,000".

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, this amendment would restore the funding level for the Agriculture Research Service at the House-passed amount. Simply, if the amendment is adopted, we will save $18,927,000, which represents a 3-percent cut from the Senate level.

No Agriculture Research Service programs will be put in jeopardy. No dire outcome will result. Mr. President, it is a very simple amendment. While the Senate does not and should not function as a rubber stamp of House action, the other body was entirely correct when it funded the Agriculture Research Service at $702,831,000.

Mr. President, in the Department of Agriculture appropriations bill, a lot of the unnecessary spending is in the Agriculture Research Service program. Certainly, there is a legitimate need for agricultural research. We all agree on that point.

Let me emphasize, voting for this amendment will not contradict that point. Voting for the amendment does affirm our belief that we must scale back our spending in a responsible manner.

The House funded the Agriculture Research Service at a very reasonable level at $702 million. Again, I want to note that this is a 3-percent cut from the Senate level. I believe that we could cut this nearly $1 billion program by 3 percent.

Mr. President, there is other language in the bill and in the accompanying committee report that concerns me. I would like to raise some of those issues at this time. On page 51 of the bill, the House had language that stated no funding made available under this title shall be used for new studies and evaluations. I applaud the House for inserting this prohibition in the bill. Unfortunately, the Senate struck the House provision and inserted instead the $6 million cap on studies and evaluations. Unfortunately, many of these studies are not necessary or could be privately funded. I hope that when the bill is conferenced, the Senate will recede to the House on this matter.

The committee report continues to recommend funding for a wide variety of specific industry areas. I believe that such earmarking is detrimental to the agriculture industry as a whole because it encourages funding to go to those industries with the best lobbyists or those favored by the members of the committee. All research grants should be based on national priority and competitive bid.

As an example, I would like to comment briefly on the shrimp aquaculture research provisions contained on page 39 of the committee report. The committee recommended a $300,000 increase in Federal funding for shrimp research. Mr. President, the U.S. shrimp industry is a profitable, multibillion-dollar-a-year industry. While it is true that the Asian shrimp industry is much larger than the U.S. shrimp industry—I understand that some desire that we should have an American source of shrimp—it seems that increased Government funding of the shrimp industry is not needed at this time.

Mr. President, my staff met with shrimp industry representatives who explained their ongoing concern with foreign diseases infiltrating our national shrimp farms. I share their concern. However, since the shrimp industry is a profitable industry, and since the Federal Government already spends over $3 million a year on shrimp aquaculture research, this new financial need should be met by the shrimp industry itself.

Again, I hope when the bill goes to conference that the House demand its language on this matter and that Federal involvement with the shrimp industry be kept at a minimum.

I also want to express my concern that the Senate added language to the bill on page 33 that funds the National Natural Resources Conservation Foundation at no more than $250,000. This sounds very good, but it raises many questions. First, according to the act which established the National Natural Resources Conservation Foundation, Public Law 104-127, the foundation is "a charitable and non profit corporation * * * [and] is not an agency or instrumentality of the United States."

The law also notes the numerous duties of the foundation, many of which I agree with. But I want to note that the last of the duties proscribed in the law for this private corporation is "[to] raise private funds to promote the purposes of the foundation." The law states this is a private organization that should raise funds and promote certain agricultural activities. I think we should let the corporation follow that law.

Mr. President, isn't the concept of a private corporation that it is private, therefore, not funded by the Federal Government? In general, private corporations should not be funded with Federal dollars. I hope the Secretary of the Department of Agriculture will not use any appropriated money to fund this organization. While there is a legitimate role for some Federal dollars to be used by private corporations for certain select activities that are necessary but which might otherwise go unfunded, this is not one of those exceptions.

Again, Mr. President, this is a simple amendment. It represents a 3-percent cut in the Agriculture Research Service program and restores the House of Representatives-passed funding level for the program. I hope the Senate will adopt the amendment.

Mr. President, I have read the report language of the bill rather carefully. There are many worthwhile and worthy causes. Some of them I do not quite understand. Some of them are somewhat unusual, to say the least. Grape research, hops, insect rearing, goat grass control, nutrition intervention projects, cotton value-added/quality research, apple research, alfalfa research, corn germplasm research.

Mr. President, all these, I am sure, are worthwhile, but many Americans who are facing cuts in Medicare, cuts in Medicaid, cuts in food stamps, Social Security being in financial jeopardy would ask the question—and I think it is a legitimate one—should the taxpayers be paying for a fish farming experiment laboratory? Should the taxpayers be paying for cotton value-added/quality research? Should the taxpayers be paying for corn germplasm research? Apple research? Alfalfa research? Funding children's hospitals?

Mr. President, the question, I think, is a legitimate one. I have no information that the apple industry in America is in such dire straits that they need to have Federal dollars spent on apple research. I wonder if the apple industry in America could pay for apple research. I have no information that the Arkansas children's hospital is in such bad shape that it needs to have an additional $425,000 of taxpayers' dollars.

Bee research. I did not know that the Hayden Bee ARS Laboratory in Tucson, AZ, required earmarked funding. Mr. President, I did not know that the wheat industry was in such bad shape that it needed an additional $450,000 above the 1996 level for the ARS Pacific Northwest Club Wheat Breeding Program.

What I am saying, Mr. President, is it all gets down to the question about the role of government in our society. I was under the distinct impression that, at least on this side of the aisle, Members felt that the role of government in our society should be prioritized to provide for national security and for those in our society who are unable to take care of themselves who need our help, and certainly other-wise important programs.

I do not understand the logic behind funding with taxpayers' dollars industry, whether it be fish farms or grapes or cotton or wheat or bees, when those industries are not only not in need, but according to the information I have received that agriculture is one of the healthiest industries in America.

So I hope that we will make a modest cut and restore the House level of funding. Mr. President, I have very few illusions as to the prospects of this amendment, but I would suggest that sooner or later the American people will continue to question and question severely this kind of funding. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, let me respond to the Senator from Arizona by saying that when we looked at the President's budget request for funding of the Agriculture Research Service activities, we, too, thought that the request was too high. Our careful evaluation of the needs for research done by the Agriculture Research Service resulted in our reducing the amount available for this activity by $7 million. So the proposal that is before the Senate is $7 million less than requested by the administration.

Let me also point out one other thing. I noticed the Senator's amendment would cut $18 million from the Senate-recommended figure, $18 million from what the Senate recommended. We are already $7 million below the President's request. He does that, he says, to bring our number to the point where we would agree with the House on the level of funding for these activities. The House number is $702 million in total. The bad part is, if you look at the House numbers individually in all the items in the bill that the House says should be funded, it adds up to $710 million more or less.

Draw the bottom line and put $702 million. He wants us to join that hocus-pocus and suggest we want individual projects funded up and down the line in their bill, and if you add them all up it is $710 million, round numbers, but they draw the bottom line and put $702. I will not submit a bill to the floor of this Senate and do that and say I am cutting spending more than we really are recommending when you look at the individual items.

What they are forcing the Department of Agriculture to do, if the Senate goes along with that, we are misrepresenting to the general public, we are misrepresenting to the Department of Agriculture, what our recommendation is. We are forcing the Department to pick out $7 million in cuts and impose them somewhere, and disavowing any connection with it. We are disavowing paternity with a $7 million cut.

If we are going to impose the cut to $702 million, identify where the cuts are going to be. If you are going to cut the Arkansas Research Program that the Department of Agriculture runs, you have to spell it out. If you are going to cut an Arizona cotton research activity that is a substantial investment of dollars in a new facility, say it. Say you are cutting western cotton research, and point out it is done in Arizona. Just to simply say we are spending more than we need but not say how, where, when, or to what extent, that is not right.

Now, after the Senator completed his proposal where he makes this $18 million cut, he then talked about other parts of the bill he found obnoxious that do not have anything to do with Agricultural Research Service funding. If there are programs that should not be funded, I suggest we ought to spell it out. Amendments ought to target those projects. If that is what the complaint is, offer an amendment that does that. But to offer an across-the-board cut which if we passed would force the Department to make the decisions, we would not have any responsibility for doing that. That is irresponsibility. That is not accountability.

I sympathize with the Senator's proposal that we make sure the dollars that are invested in research are, No. 1, needed, serve some public interest, are reviewed carefully. I can assure the Senate and I can assure the Senator from Arizona that will be undertaken here.

He did specifically mention shrimp research for shrimp farming operations and how they were money-making enterprises and they did not need the research dollars. I convened a hearing just on that issue last year to determine what some of the problems were in aquaculture in fresh water, some salt water shrimp and other aquaculture activities. I found out there was an epidemic of exotic viruses that have attacked the shrimp in those operations and we were, in exchange, importing huge quantities of shrimp from China and other foreign sources because we could not meet the supplies needed here for wholesome, safe shrimp and other seafood. This was a growing industry. It was one that had a lot of promise but it was about to be wiped out. These funds that are made available are made available on condition that the industry come up with its own money to help match the dollars that are put up by the Government to get to the bottom of this problem, and it is a problem.

Here is the hearing. This is a hearing record. This is not something the industry just came in and tried to push over on us. I am convinced the dollars that are made available for that activity are needed. The purpose, to provide high health and genetically improved stocks, to control disease agents, to enhance environmental protection, and to develop animal husbandry methods. All of this is needed if we are going to save this industry from a doom, a doom that will cause us to have to rely on foreign sources of these products. We already do. But we will be completely reliant on them if we are not careful, if we let this virus problem spread, if do not figure out how to stop it. That is needed. I will stand behind it. The record supports the need. I hope the Senate will reject the amendment.

Mr. GREGG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is the Senator's amendment number 4959.

AMENDMENT NO. 4969 TO AMENDMENT NO. 4959

(Purpose: To prohibit the use of funds to make loans to large processors of sugarcane and sugar beets unless the loans require the processors to repay the full amount of the loans, plus interest.)

Mr. GREGG. I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GREGG] proposes an amendment numbered 4969 to amendment No. 4959.

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike all after the word "SEC." and insert the following:

REPAYMENT OF CERTAIN SUGAR LOANS.

None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be used to make a loan to a processor of sugarcane or sugar beets, or both, who has an annual revenue that exceeds $15 million, unless the terms of the loan require the processor to repay the full amount of the loan, plus interest.

Mr. GREGG. This is the same as the underlying amendment, but it changes the amount that is required of processors to have recourse on from a $10 million threshold to a $15 million threshold. After that, it is a more lenient amendment than the first, if we presume we are requiring people to pay back loans.

It does not, I think, aggravate the situation and should not from the standpoint of my colleagues who feel differently on this amendment than I do. I offer it to protect my position in the batting order here.

I make one additional point. There was a point made on the other side, and this is, really, ancillary to the overall debate but needs to be responded to. There was a point made on the other side that the Sugar Program as presently structured actually causes a net "infloat" of the Treasury because this is an assessment process. However, if you take into effect in the calculation the cost to the Federal Government of having to buy sugar for products which it uses and food stamps and military feeding and child nutrition at the inflated rate we must pay because the Federal Government is a fairly large consumer—also as I mentioned, and I suspect ad nauseam for my colleagues, the price here is dramatically more than the price the market would be were this a market-oriented program versus price-control program.

GAO has advised us the cost to the Federal Government, by letter of July 18, the cost in 1994 to the Federal Government for purchasing products which had inflated prices due to the cost of sugar was approximately $90 million annually. So that exceeds, by, I think, a factor of three, what is alleged to be the positive cash flow of this program to the Treasury.

Let me read the operative sentences:

In 1994, total expenditures on food were approximately $647 billion. Of this amount, approximately $42 billion was government expenditures for food purchases and cash transfers to consumers for food purchases. This represented 6.5 percent of all domestic food expenditures. Applying this to the $1.4 billion cost of the sugar program, we estimate that the government's additional cost of purchasing food and providing the level of food assistance it delivered in 1994, was approximately $90 million.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent this letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

GENERAL ACCOUNTING OFFICE,
Washington, DC, July 18, 1995.

Congressional Requesters,

In our report entitled Sugar Program; Changing Domestic and International Conditions Require Program Changes (GAO/RCED-93-84, Apr. 16, 1993), we estimated that the U.S. sugar program costs sweetener users an average of $1.4 billion annually. In this context, you requested that we estimate how much the sugar program increases the government's costs of purchasing food and conducting food assistance programs.

While it is impossible to precisely quantify the direct costs of the sugar program to the government, we have approximated the government's additional costs, based on its share of total domestic food expenditures. In 1994, total expenditures on food were approximately $647 billion. Of this amount, approximately $42 billion was government expenditures for food purchases and cash transfers to consumers for food purchases. This represented 6.5 percent of all domestic food expenditures. Applying this percentage to the $1.4 billion cost of the sugar program, we estimate that the government's additional cost of purchasing food and providing the level of food assistance it delivered in 1994, was approximately $90 million.

Table I provides more detail, by program, on the government's expenditures on direct food purchases and cash assistance for consumer food purchases. These calculations are approximated, using the best available information.

While raising the costs of purchasing food and conducting food assistance programs, the sugar program generates some revenues through marketing assessments on sugar. On average, these marketing assessments total $30 million annually. If the sugar program did not exist, these assessments would not be collected.

(For John W. Harman, Director, Food, and Agriculture Issues.)

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment in the second degree.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I yield the floor.

AMENDMENT NO. 4968

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, the amendment of the Senator from Arizona is arbitrary at best and capricious at worst.

The year 1995 culminated a series of cuts in agricultural research over a period of years. In other words, agricultural research funds had been cut every year for several years. In 1995, for the first time in this Nation's history, agricultural yields per acre failed to increase. That was on an apples-and-apples basis, where rainfall and so on was taken into consideration.

Now, the suggestion is, and I am not familiar enough with that study to know, but the suggestion is that as we have cut agricultural research money, we are finally being caught up by lower yields of agricultural products per acre.

When I was a youngster, 15 or 20 bushels of soybeans per acre in much of my State was ordinary. Today, even unirrigated beans ought to make 30 to 40 bushels per acre. Rice, I can remember when 50 to 75 bushels of rice per acre was a big crop, and today it is not uncommon, at all, in my State, for rice farmers to make 200 bushels of rice per acre.

Cotton. When I was a kid, because we did not have any antidote to the boll weevil, a half-bale of cotton to the acre was considered a pretty good crop. And everybody knows what Norman Borlaug did for wheat production in this country. All of those things were not accidental. They were done because the Federal Government put money into agricultural research. Right now, the fire ant is moving north. Southern Arkansas is covered with fire ants. They do a tremendous amount of damage. Killer bees are moving up from Mexico.

Mr. President, I am one of the people who think we probably made a mistake when we eliminated the honey program. The honey program cost very little. The reason I had real trouble with that amendment is because bees pollinate plants; 15 percent of all the pollination in this country is done by native honey bees. The killer bees coming up from Mexico are killing our bees, and, in addition, there are strains of virus and other threats to honey bees that need to be understood. That takes research. Once we understand the problems, solutions will follow.

I saw a story the other day that was interesting to me because the cranberry farmers of Massachusetts, for example, are getting terribly upset because they depend on bee farmers to bring their hives to their crops and pollinate them. I am not sure New Hampshire does not have some crops similar to that, which honeybee farmers bring into New Hampshire. And now the average life of a beehive has gone from 3 years to 1 year. Oh, yes, we spent Federal dollars every year subsidizing the honey industry through research. But I can tell you that is peanuts—if you will pardon the expression—compared to the benefit that honey bees do for the American farmers in pollinating their crops.

The Senator from Arizona mentioned aquaculture. Thirty years ago, the farmers of Arkansas started raising catfish, domestically raised catfish. And all the world, if they are not already familiar, should know that it is the most beautiful, delicious, delicate, succulent fish ever known. We went into the catfish farming business almost out of necessity because we irrigate our rice crops and we store the water in the wintertime. The farmers decided that as long as they have these big ponds of stored water that they use to irrigate rice with, why not figure out another use for those rice irrigating ponds.

My predecessor in the U.S. Senate, Bill Fulbright, helped come up with the idea of raising catfish in those ponds. Mr. President, would you like to know how many pounds of catfish we could raise a year per acre? Seven-hundred pounds. And so at least we started a couple of catfish research projects called aquaculture—all fish-raising is aquaculture. We have one in Mississippi and one in Arkansas. In Arkansas we think continued research is important and 2 years ago we made substantial investments to improve our aquaculture research facilities in Stuttgart. The 1996 farm bill redesignated that facility as the National Aquaculture Research Center, and I can tell you we are all very proud of it. Some of the magazines called it a $7 million fish farm. It had nothing to do with fish farming beyond its application of new information for fish farmers; it was all research. But over the period of the last 30 years, because the Federal Government has put money into fish farming research, catfish farming research, production of catfish per acre has gone from 700 pounds per acre per year to 4,400 pounds per acre per year. And unless we continue to fund agriculture research, we are going to be sitting around the breakfast table looking at each other wondering what we are going to eat that day.

On the front page of the Metro section of the Post this morning there was an interesting article concerning blue crab in the Chesapeake Bay? The crop this year is so sparse that 500 crab pickers are out of work. And the ones who are working are working 3 days a week. Now, if somebody came in here and said they had a beautiful idea for replenishing the crab population of the bay, I might vote for it. I can assure you that those employed in the crabbing industry around Chesapeake Bay and consumers who enjoy reasonably priced crabmeat would be asking us to vote for it.

The Senator from Arizona mentioned Children's Hospital in Arkansas. I can remember when the Children's Hospital in Arkansas was just a small hospital to treat severely burned children. Today, it is one of the finest state-of-the-art children's hospitals in America. And this is the third year we have put money in that. What is the Department of Agriculture doing giving money to the Children's Hospital in Arkansas? It is for a really sophisticated nutrition program. Do you know something else? The Children's Hospital in Little Rock is putting up a lot of money—millions—to build a facility to house this nutrition program. I never knew what a children's hospital was. A hospital was a hospital to me, until my daughter became ill and the pediatrician said, "You ought to take her to Boston." The finest children's hospital in the world is in Boston, MA. That is where I took her. Today, I would not have to go to Boston because of the tremendous strides of the Arkansas Children's Hospital.

A member of my family left a week ago and went to the emergency room of one of the hospitals in Washington, DC, and there were three residents standing there. This new doctor, a young man, walked in. He had just joined Georgetown University Hospital. When he found out I was from Arkansas, he said, "You know, when I finished my training and started looking for a place to settle, believe it or not, I went to Little Rock, AR. I looked over your Children's Hospital, and I never got such a shock in my life. It is one of the finest facilities I have ever been in. I nearly decided to stay in Little Rock, not only because of the facilities but because of the quality of the people there."

There is $425,000 in this bill to continue funding what we hope will be one of the finest children's and nutrition programs in the United States. Now, I can remember when it took 9 to 12 weeks to grow a broiler, a chicken, for the retail fresh market. Today, you do it in 6 weeks. Do you know why? Because of agriculture research.

So I cannot say much more than the chairman has already said. He made a beautiful speech on the McCain amendment a moment ago. I hope when the time comes that the amendment, which, as I say, is arbitrary at best, will be soundly defeated.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Robert Hedberg, who is working for the Senate Agriculture Committee, be given floor privileges during the debate on this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GREGG). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I rise to simply advise the Senate that the Senator from Massachusetts came over a while ago to ask if he could have 10 minutes as if in morning business to talk about a subject that he discussed in the Senate earlier, and hadn't been able to complete his remarks. I suggested that he come over around 4:30, thinking that there might be a lull in the action so that he could proceed with morning business remarks. But I know the Senator from North Dakota is here to talk about the issue before the Senate. I hope we can resolve it so that the Senator from Massachusetts can have a few minutes following the Senator from North Dakota, or preceding the Senator, whatever is their pleasure.

AMENDMENT NO. 4959

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, they are at it again. The critics of farm programs are suggesting bad policy for agriculture and are trying to break the promise just made to the American farmer.

On April 4 this year, the President signed into law the 1996 farm bill. That is April 4 of this year. The proponents of that bill claim they had a 7-year plan for agriculture, one that promised to be reliable, one that promised to provide certainty, one that promised to reduce Government interference.

The farm bill passed, and now we see how quickly their promises have been broken. The House Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee proposed additional cuts in addition to those already made in commodity payments under the freedom to farm legislation. They broke their promise to the American farmer—not 7 years later, but 7 weeks later. So much for reliability and certainty.

Thankfully, those additional cuts in commodity payments were rejected at the full committee level. But the critics of the farm program did not stop there. They proposed, on the House side, capping raw sugar prices. Imagine, people who advocate market orientation are placing into law a limit on what prices could be in an industry. If that is not Government interference, I do not know what is.

Under that amendment, the Republican-led House would be telling the Government to reach into the sugar market and place an arbitrary cap on prices. It is the ultimate irony—Government interference at its worst. Once again, a promise was broken.

Now today we are faced with an amendment to interfere even more with what was just agreed to months ago. The Gregg amendment eliminates the safety net U.S. producers have against heavily subsidized foreign competition.

The Senator from New Hampshire I think is well-motivated, well-intended, but I think sadly misinformed as to international sugar and about what happens in these markets. And I would say to my colleague from New Hampshire that this is not like Dell Computer, or Apple Computer, or IBM. Oh, no, that is not the way the sugar market works in the world. This is not a free market. That is a nice idea—a textbook idea—but it is not the real world. The sugar industry worldwide works in a much different way. Every major producing country has a program—every one. We are not talking about a free market. We are talking about heavy Government involvement in every one of these producing countries.

What the Senator from New Hampshire wants to do is say to the U.S. industry, "You go out there and compete against all these other countries, but without the benefit of a program. You go out there, and we are going to engage in unilateral disarmament here in America." We are going to say to our folks, "You go out and compete not only against other countries' farmers, but against the governments of other countries, and good luck. We hope everything will work out." Everything will not work out.

Anybody who has looked at the sugar industry and what has happened knows better, knows precisely what will happen, if we say to our producers, "You go out there and compete against heavily subsidized foreign sugar and see what happens." We all know what will happen. Our folks will go broke, because the treasuries of these countries with whom we are competing are a lot bigger than the treasuries of the individual producers.

That is the reality of what we face here. This notion that the Senator advocates that U.S. sugar policy unfairly inflates U.S. prices over world prices is absolutely untrue—absolutely untrue. All of us know what happens if you take away the sugar program. This chart shows what has happened the two times we eliminated the sugar program. Here is what happened to prices. They skyrocketed in both cases in the early 1970's and in the early 1980's. Prices skyrocketed. Why? Because the market knew we were headed for turbulence, a lack of certainty, that people would dramatically reduce their plantings. And what would happen is you would see shortages, spot shortages. And those who are producers of sugar, refiners, bid up the price in order to assure themselves of a stable supply. That is what has happened repeatedly.

Unfortunately, when my colleague says, "Gee, look at the price. The sugar price is 22 cents a pound, and the world price is 13 cents. Well, there is evidence, there is clear evidence that this sugar program is gouging consumers." Nonsense, absolute nonsense.

Eighty-five percent of the sugar that is marketed in the world moves under contract. This sugar is not in the world market at all. It is moved under a contract. For this reason, the so-called world market is not a world market. It is a dump market. It is where the sugar sells that is not under contract. That is why you see the prices in the so-called world market, the dump market, selling for 13 cents.

Look at what happens if you eliminate the sugar program. We know what happens. Every time it has been tried, prices skyrocket. And who got hurt? I will tell you who got hurt. The consumer got hurt. This is not a free-market model. That is not what is happening in world sugar production.

Make no mistake: The Gregg amendment kills the sugar program. If you want to kill the sugar program, there is a way to do it—pass the Gregg amendment. If you want to sock it to consumers, pass the Gregg amendment. Prices will skyrocket. We know, it has happened before whenever somebody actually got a mind to pursue this course. But not only will it hurt consumers, it will hurt American producers, because even though prices will go up, American producers will be hurt. Why? Because we will get a flood of foreign sugar into the U.S. market.

We know what will happen. It happened every time in the past when this and the other Chamber has decided that we should eliminate the sugar program, that we were going to be free from the world and act as though there is some free market in world sugar. There is no free market.

Let me just say that the Gregg amendment is not a program. It is a recipe for disaster. It will force dozens of millers and processors and thousands of farmers out of business. This is not some insignificant amendment.

In my State, there are thousands of farmers that depend on sugar for a substantial part of their income. Kill this program, and you kill them. And they know it. They know exactly what is happening in these world markets. They know exactly what has happened with other countries' programs. They know exactly what we are up against in these world markets.

For those less familiar with sugar policy, loans are not made to these producers, because beets and cane are not storable commodities. It is unlike other commodities such as grains, such as corn and wheat. Those are programs that have a payment that goes directly to producers because those are storable commodities.

That is not the case in sugar. Sugar-cane and sugar beets are not storable. So what we have is a program where the loans are made to the millers and processors who store the raw cane or the processed beet sugar. As a result, producers are intricately tied to the millers and processors. If millers and processors are no longer able to use the loan program, they will simply go out of business and they will take farmers with them, make no mistake.

Let us just look at how many beet processors and cane mills have already gone out of business. This chart clearly shows that this industry is already facing hard times. This shows what has happened to beet and cane processing mills that have gone out of business since 1990. If anybody thinks there is some big windfall out here, somebody is getting rich on this program, let us look at the record.

Why did all these folks go out of business if it is so good? Let us look at beet and cane processing mills. This is just since 1990. The record since 1980 is a whole lot darker.

Let us just look since 1990. Delta Sugar Co., beet plant, California, went under in 1993; Holly Sugar, California, beet plant, 1993; Columbia Sugar, cane plant, went out of business, Louisiana, 1994; Hamakua Sugar, cane plant, Hawaii, 1994; Hilo Coast Processing, again, cane sugar, went out of business in 1994; Oahu Sugar, cane plant, Hawaii, 1994; Spreckels Sugar, again, a California plant—this is a beet plant—went out of business in 1996; Holly Sugar, Hamilton City, CA, beet plant, went out of business in 1996; Ka'u Agribusiness Co., cane plant, Hawaii, 1996, went out of business; Kialua Sugar Co., cane plant, Hawaii, 1996, went out of business; McBryde Sugar, cane plant, Hawaii, went out of business in 1996; Western Sugar, Mitchell, NE, beet plant, went out of business in 1996.

One after another, right out of business, and you pass the Gregg amendment and we will be able to provide next year chart after chart just like this one of companies that have gone out of business. That is what we are talking about. The stakes are high.

Let me be clear. The Gregg amendment benefits the sugar refiners. That is who is the beneficiary if this amendment passes, not consumers. They will not benefit. In fact, they will be hurt. Not farmers, not beet processors, not cane mills, but refiners, they will be the beneficiaries.

Let us look at charts that show the efforts made to increase the supply of raw sugar in the U.S. market and the activity it caused in the market. This chart shows what we have seen with respect to raw sugar prices and the import quota increases over the past year and a half as USDA allowed quota increases four consecutive times, all to the benefit of refiners.

This chart shows raw sugar prices from 1995 to 1996. On November 9, 1995, USDA allowed another 330,000 tons to come in over quota—that is, foreign sugar to come into the United States—and look what happened to prices. Prices went down markedly. Then they came back up. January 17 of this year they socked it to the domestic producer again bringing in more foreign sugar and predictably prices plunged again. Then we saw price recovery. All of this is moving in the 22½ to 23 cents a pound range.

On April 1, they did it again, brought in another 220,000 tons from abroad.

Prices plunged. And again, June 12, just a month ago, another 165,000 tons. Look what happened to prices; a steep decline as more foreign sugar was brought in, that benefited whom? Benefited the refiners because they were getting more sugar to process through their plants, more throughput, more activity, more profit.

I do not begrudge them and their profit. But let us look at what is happening with respect to the throughput of the refiners, because the Gregg amendment is misnamed. It ought to be called the "refiners benefit bill." That is really what we are talking about. You are picking sides in an economic fight and you are saying we want to give the refiners more than they are getting now.

Let us look at what the throughput has been through cane refiners' plants in the last 10 years—1985-86 to 1995-96.

Back in 1986-87, we were looking at 5.3 million short tons. Had a bad year in 1987-88. Then we went to 5.4 million short tons. Went up to 5.9 million—that is the peak—in 1990-91. Then we saw some pulling back. But in 1995-96 we see a record for the refiners in terms of throughput, 6.4 million short tons—6.4 million short tons. And yet what do we have before us? The refiners benefit bill. They have just had record throughput. That is the amount of product going through their plants. They just had a record year.

Well, throughput alone does not tell you what the refiners are experiencing. You have to look at the difference between the raw sugar price and the refined sugar price. That will tell you, combined with throughput, how well our refiner friends are doing.

What do we find when we look at that? Well, it is very, very interesting—very interesting, indeed. This chart shows from 1990 to 1996 raw sugar prices. That is in red. I hope there is nothing in the way of their seeing exactly what has happened to raw sugar prices.

They have been stable for 10 years. This awful program that is gouging consumers has provided them with stable prices for 10 years. Name anything else that people buy in this country that has been stable for 10 years. Tell me one thing that has been stable for 10 years. But sugar prices, raw sugar prices have been stable. I wish I could say the same thing for refined sugar because refined sugar, you can see, starting in 1995, took off like a scalded cat. Refined sugar prices jumped, and jumped dramatically at the same time raw sugar prices were falling. Raw sugar prices were falling; refined sugar prices were skyrocketing. I have already shown you the record throughput for refiners in 1995-96. And yet what we have before us is a refiners benefit bill. That is the Gregg amendment.

Why should we be passing a refiners benefit bill when they have just had the biggest throughput in their history and, No. 2, the best margins—the best margins—that you can find in the last 10 years?

Mr. President, what has happened, I believe, is very clear. This is a transparent argument. The refiners want to continue to make more money by refining cheap sugar from the world market. This amendment not only breaks the promises of reliability, certainty, and reduced Government interference in agriculture that was made to American farmers only 4 months ago, but it is bad policy that would send shock waves through a domestic industry, a domestic industry that produces tens of thousands of jobs in this country.

I hope my colleagues will join me in soundly rejecting the Gregg amendment.

Let me just conclude by saying this is, again, not like the typical industry. Senator GREGG refers to the computer industry, and says there is no Government involvement there. He is right. That is a whole different ball game than the worldwide sugar industry, where every single major producing country has a program. Every single one of them aggressively supports their producers. If we are to abandon ours, the results will be very, very clear.

No. 1, we have seen what has happened in the past in terms of prices. Prices will skyrocket. That is undeniable. The world price the Senator refers to as 15 percent of the market is a dump market. It has no relationship to supply/demand relations in the world. The vast majority of sugar moves under contract in the world. So that dump market and its so-called world price is not a world price at all, it is a dump price. That is what people get for sugar produced above and beyond their contractual requirements. If you take away the program you are going to get exactly what we saw the last two times: Prices skyrocket. So consumers are not going to be helped, they are going to be hurt.

No. 2, the processors in this country, beet processors and cane processors, are going to be hurt. I have already shown all the plants that have closed in 1994, 1995, and 1996. A lot of plants have closed. Only one refiner but a lot of processing plants have closed. So those folks would be hurt. When they are hurt the farmers are hurt because the farmers are directly tied with those processing facilities. All of a sudden, if you yank out from U.S. producers any support, what you have done is changed the balance of power in these world markets.

Who have you helped? You have helped our foreign competitors. The Gregg amendment is great if you represent a foreign country and you produce sugar. They would look forward to the day the United States pulls the plug on its producers and its processors. They are just waiting for the opportunity to come in and take over this industry, take the jobs, take the economic growth, and take the economic opportunity.

American farmers who produce sugar are the most efficient in the world. We are ready to compete head to head with anybody at any time. But what our producers are not prepared to do is to take on not only the farmers of another country but the governments of other countries. That is not a fair fight. And our Government should not abandon our producers and our processors, helping foreign governments, foreign producers, foreign processors against the refiners of this country. That is what this amendment is really about. I hope this Chamber will do as it has done before and reject the Gregg amendment and reject it in a resounding way.

I yield the floor.

Mr. KENNEDY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY, WORK OPPORTUNITY, AND MEDICAL

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I thank my colleagues, our managers, for indicating when might be an appropriate time to speak on an issue, the underlying issue, which is welfare reform in a way not to interfere with debate on the agricultural appropriations bill. I will take that opportunity now, to speak on this underlying measure, which the Senate will address tomorrow.

There will be a series of amendments. I offered amendments dealing with the children of legal immigrants and also to provide, if we are going to go into these rather draconian measures in cutting off help and assistance to these children, to another amendment, which has been described in the RECORD earlier today, to help and assist the local counties and communities where they are going to have a particular burden, trying to implement the provisions to terminate help, assistance to poor children.

I have a fuller explanation on that. I will not take the time of the Senate on those measures, which are more fully explained in the RECORD earlier today. I will address the overall issue which is before us, and that is the proposal placed on the Senate agenda, which we will vote on tomorrow, under the title of the welfare reform.

Mr. President, in putting forward this legislation, I believe the Republican majority is asking us to codify extremism and call it virtue. Their plan will condemn millions of American children to poverty as the price for the misguided Republican revolution. If children could vote, this Republican plan to slash welfare would be as dead as the Republican plan to slash Medicare. In fact, the driving force behind this attack on children is not welfare reform at all. It is the desperate Republican need to find some way, any way, to pay for their tax breaks for wealthy.

Honest welfare reform is long overdue. The current system is broken. Major change is needed. I support honest reforms that end welfare as a way of life and make it a waystation to work. But honest reform does not produce anywhere near the massive savings needed to pay for the Republican tax breaks. Child care costs money. Job training and education cost money. And our Republican friends have absolutely no interest in real reform if it costs money.

The proposal before us is not welfare reform. It is nothing more than legislative snake oil, and it is the wrong medicine for what ails us as a Nation. Real welfare reform is about protecting children and putting people to work, not putting on a show. But that is what this is—theater, pure and simple; a glaring and callous example of just how low the Republican majority will go, even if it comes at the expense of millions of American children.

For the Republican majority, this bill may be child's play, but they are playing with real children's lives and real children's futures. This bad bill is Robin Hood in reverse, robbing poor children to pay for tax breaks for rich Republicans.

Since the Republican takeover of Congress, our colleagues have brought us many poison pills wrapped in the rhetoric of reform. But this may well be the most cruel and extreme measure of the entire Republican revolution—because it inflicts so much harm on so many children. In fact, it pushes back 60 years of social progress.

In 1935, Congress made a bold pledge to the elderly and the children of our communities that this rich Nation would not let them sink into poverty. It was a sign of what we stood for as a nation. Republicans may consider destroying this covenant as a virtue—but Bishop Weakland of Milwaukee has called it “a moral blemish on the Earth's most affluent society.” I could not agree more.

I ask unanimous consent to have the Bishop's full statement printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, July 4, 1996]

WISCONSIN WORKS: BREAKING A COVENANT

(By Rembert G. Weakland, OSB)

Catholics in Wisconsin have been in the trenches serving the needy since the Daughters of Charity began their work with the poor of Milwaukee in 1843. I and my family relied on welfare to survive in the 1930s. So it comes naturally for me to consider the implications of Wisconsin's proposal for welfare reform, known as Wisconsin Works or “W-2.”

Certainly the Catholic bishops and others in the church who grapple with the needs of the poor agree that the current welfare system is in need of major reform. Both the U.S. Catholic Conference and the Wisconsin Catholic Conference have said so. Both have challenged the status quo. Both have offered constructive proposals for helping the poor more effectively.

Yet as I reflect on the W-2 proposal in light of my experience and the tenets of Catholic social teaching, I remain convinced of the need for the community to guarantee a “safety net” for the poor, especially children. Accordingly, though the W-2 proposal has merit in important respects, it would be a mistake for the president and Congress to embrace comprehensive legislation or requests from individual states, even my own, that withdraw this guarantee.

Catholic social teaching holds that the poor, especially children, have a moral claim on the resources of the community to secure the necessities of life. For more than 60 years, our society has recognized this claim with a covenant that ensures a minimal level of assistance for food, clothing and shelter to poor children and their families. Millions of children have relied on that covenant since the 1930s. In Wisconsin, more than 120,000 children rely on Aid to Families With Dependent Children (AFDC) today.

People of goodwill can argue over the need to modify AFDC so it better serves that purpose. But it is patently unjust for a society as affluent as ours to nullify that covenant.

Unfortunately, as enacted, the Wisconsin Works program does just that. The enabling statute for the W-2 proposal specifically states no one is entitled to W-2 services, even who are eligible to receive them.

It is one thing to change the rules of the welfare system. It is quite another thing to say, “Even if you play by the new rules, society will not help you.” This is not welfare reform but welfare repeal. Such a message may be politically attractive in this election year; it is not morally justifiable.

Even if one accepts the premise that the W-2 program offers poor families help in return for work, this premise collapses if the help is not provided. The president and Congress must insist that W-2, indeed any welfare reform proposal, serve all who are eligible.

Critics of the welfare system allege that public assistance undermines personal responsibility. This generalizes about poor families when we should strive to take a more personal view.

In the first place, the children of the poor did not choose their families. We should not afflict these children with hunger in order to infuse their parents with virtue.

Additionally, we cannot judge a person's failure to work in isolation from larger forces. My experience from our work with the U.S. bishops' pastoral letter on economic justice impressed on me the truth that poor families are especially vulnerable to economic downturns triggered by national or international events.

Nor can prosperous states ensure full employment. Even in states, like Wisconsin, that enjoy healthy economies and relatively low unemployment, not all who want to work can earn a family wage. So long as this is the case, it is unwise and unjust for the federal government to abandon its commitment to the poor. Our covenant with needy children must remain the responsibility of the entire American family.

Moreover, this critique of welfare ignores the fact that rights and responsibilities are not mutually exclusive but complementary. In the context of welfare policy, a right to work is grounded in a responsibility to support a family. This is relevant when assessing another aspect of W-2.

According to our state's own projections, 75 percent of the families now on AFDC will be assigned to W-2 work slots that provide less than a full-time worker earns at the minimum wage. Accordingly, the responsibility of these parents to care for their children must be supported when necessary by a safety net adequate to meet the family's basic needs.

Finally, the president and Congress must recognize that they cannot repeal the assurance of public assistance in Wisconsin without making it a national policy. Once such a repeal is granted to a single state, others will seek similar license. The poor will lose their safety net by degrees as surely as if Congress and the president repealed it all at once. Such an outcome would be a tragedy for the poor and a moral blemish on the earth's most affluent society.

One can appreciate the burden of difficult choices in an election year.

Nonetheless, the short-term political outlook of the candidate must not cloud the moral vision of the leader. America's 60-year covenant with its poor children and those who nurture them must remain unbroken.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, let me just mention a few points:

For more than 60 years, our society has recognized this claim with a covenant that ensures a minimal level of assistance for food, clothing, and shelter for poor children and their families. Millions of children have relied on that covenant since the 1930's. In Wisconsin, more than 120,000 children rely on aid to families with dependent children today.

People of good will can argue over the need to modify AFDC so it better serves that purpose. But it is patently unjust for a society as affluent as ours to nullify that covenant.

And that is what this measure does.

In the first place, the children of the poor did not choose their families. We should not afflict these children with hunger in order to infuse their parents with virtue.

And then he continues:

Even in States like Wisconsin which enjoy healthy economies and relatively low unemployment, not all who want to work can earn a family wage. So long as this is the case, it is unwise and unjust for the Federal Government to abandon its commitment to the poor. Our covenant with the needy children must remain the responsibility of the entire American family.

And the last full paragraph:

One can appreciate the burden of difficult choices in an election year. Nonetheless, the short-term political outlook of the candidate must not cloud the moral vision of the leader. America's 60-year-old covenant with its poor children and those who nurture them must remain unbroken.

Mr. President, I divert for a moment to two other articles that have been quoted to some extent during the course of the debate on this welfare reform: George Will's article about “Women and Children First?” I quote a paragraph:

Furthermore, there is hardly an individual or industry in America that is not in some sense “in the wagon,” receiving some Federal subvention. If everyone gets out, the wagon may rocket along. But no one is proposing that. Instead, welfare reform may give a whole new meaning to the phrase “women and children first.”

Effectively, what is included in this, women and children first, they are the ones whose interests end up on the chopping blocks. When most think of the women and children first, every young student who has read through history probably thinks of the Titanic, where women and children were first. Mr. Will's excellent article and commentary on this welfare debate suggests, I believe, that the women and children first will have an entirely new and different meaning.

Then today there is in the New York Times an article by David Ellwood, who has been a very thoughtful both commentator and policymaker on the issues of welfare reform and has written extensively about it. Those who have had the opportunity to hear him or listen to him testify can attest to his strong commitment to altering and changing the current system and trying to find ways to do it effectively, and also to protect the interests of the most vulnerable in our society.

He points out in his excellent article in the Times today, Monday, July 22, "Welfare Reform in Name Only":

States would get block grants to use for welfare and work programs. But the grants for child care, job training, workfare, cash assistance combined would amount to less than $15 per poor child per week in poor Southern States, like Mississippi and Arkansas. Moving people from welfare to work is hard. On $15 a week—whom are we kidding?

As the article points out, on $15 a week, you are talking about providing the basic elements of life: roof over the head of the child, clothes for the child, food for the child, as well as for the training of the child, child care for the child—for $15 a week. We see other examples.

Instead of 88 cents per meal, it will be down to 66 cents per meal per child. Mr. President, $26 billion will be taken out of nutrition programs for children and put on to the other side of the ledger for tax benefits and breaks for wealthy individuals. It makes no sense.

Mr. President, nearly 14 million poor children live in America. Each night, 100,000 of them sleep on the streets, scared and homeless. Their faces are pressed against the windows of our glitter and affluence, and Congress is about to pull down the shade.

It may be fashionable in some quarters these days to demonize families on welfare, to pretend that poor people are lazy and don't care about their children.

Listen to just one story I heard recently from a middle-class suburban woman. She tried hard to keep the family together, but she finally fled when her husband badly beat her and her son, and smashing a chair over her son's head, repeatedly kicking him in the ribs and in the face. She left everything behind.

She and her son fled to her parents' home, but the husband found them there. She tried to work, but her husband always found her, threatening both her and her employers. She and her son finally took refuge in a shelter. With no other choice, she turned to AFDC. As she told me:

The support I received from AFDC enabled me to get out, move on to heal myself and my son, and create a new life. It cost the Government a little over $400 a month for 6 months—less than the cost of a modest funeral. Investing in family safety and support seems like the kind of investment this country should protect. Cutting off this lifeline means that the futures of our children are definitely at stake. Let me tell you in all seriousness, these cuts are deadly.

It is true that some cuts never heal, and these cuts, I believe, in this measure are deadly: Close to $60 billion in harsh, extreme, and unjustifiable cuts over the next 6 years.

The reality is that this Nation's safety net is fragile and fraying. The Republican response is to rip even more holes in the safety net and require millions more children to fend for themselves. No terrorist could possibly do so much harm to our country.

Nearly half of the Republican savings are from the Food Stamp Program—$28 billion in cuts, affecting 14 million children. By the year 2002, the Republican proposal would provide poor children in America only 65 cents a meal, just about enough to buy a soft drink.

We know that hungry children are more susceptible to sickness and early death. We know that malnutrition retards growth and delays brain development.

We just had, a year ago, the publication of the Carnegie Commission talking about what happens to a child's brain during the early formative years unless there is sufficient nutrition benefits to that child. It slows their whole ability to achieve academically and emotionally, and it works to their long-term disadvantage.

In short, hungry children can't learn. They are twice as likely to be absent from school and four times as likely to be unable to study.

The Republican revolution says, "Let them eat cake." I say it's the wrong priority for Congress and the wrong priority for America.

Our colleagues attempt to justify this outrage by claiming food stamps are fraught with waste, fraud, and abuse, but the Republican plan has virtually nothing to do with ending the abuses. That is the interesting point. They make the case we ought to cut back this program because there is abuse and fraud in these programs. But 70 percent of the cuts come directly at programs aimed at families with children. Only 2 percent of the cuts are aimed at waste, fraud, and abuse.

The real fraud, waste, and abuse is the scheme to take food from the mouths of children in the guise of welfare reform. The Republican plan also targets children's health care. To be sure, the Republican leadership bowed to the inevitable and dropped their draconian Medicaid provisions from this bill to avoid a certain Presidential veto. But this bill still jeopardizes health care for millions of mothers and children.

We know under Medicaid, 18 million children receive Medicaid and about 75 percent of those children's parents are working—playing by the rules and working. Under the program that was proposed, you would have seen anywhere from 5 to 8 million of those children completely dropped from Medicaid if that had moved forward. What we are talking about now is the alleged welfare reform provisions.

Women will not get the prenatal care they need under this particular program. The 4 million women included would have coverage under this program. They will not get the prenatal care they need. Adolescents will not get the help to avoid pregnancy and stay in school. Injuries and preventable illnesses will now become life-threatening, for example, when they could have been easily treated. Sick children can't learn, and sick parents can't work.

Children with disabilities are also attacked under the proposal. Mr. President, 300,000 children with serious disabilities—mental retardation, tuberculosis, autism, head injuries, arthritis—would lose the direct guaranteed assistance that they have under the Supplemental Security Income Program.

When Democratic Senators proposed that States be required, or at least given the option, of offering vouchers after the time limit to provide children with necessities, such as diapers, clothes, cribs, medicine and school supplies, the Republicans said a resounding no. Why? Because "enough is enough," they say. "It's time to go cold turkey," they say, even if this bill is the real turkey.

Enough is enough. Enough of the back-room deals with high-paid corporate lobbyists. Enough of dismantling commitments to children and families who desperately need help. Enough of cruelty called charity.

Even when Democrats asked for a look back provision—to provide help if the worst predictions materialize and this bill actually becomes the disaster we predict for children—the Republican majority said, "stop overreacting". To them I say, tell that to the countless families who are looking for a chance not a check—a chance for their children to reach for the American dream.

Stripped down—this is the Republican plan they call welfare reform—no resources, no guarantees, no vouchers, no look back, no regrets. It does not get much more extreme than that.

As George Will said in his article,

No child in America asked to be here. Each was summoned into existence by the acts of adults. And no child is going to be spiritually improved by being collateral damage in a bombardment of severities targeted at adults who may or may not deserve more severe treatment.

The comments I am making this evening, Mr. President, are from Mr. George Will, David Ellwood, and Bishop Weakland, who has been one of the most thoughtful of the bishops in terms of children's interests and children's rights. They all have reached the same conclusion, Mr. President, about this measure in terms of its harshness and its retreat from a fundamental sense of decency and caring for the neediest in our society, and that is poor children in our society.

But the Republican majority tells us not to worry. They say the welfare miracles of Wisconsin and Michigan demonstrate that block grants and deep cuts really work. But the facts show this is far from the truth.

It takes money to reform welfare. In Wisconsin, after major changes in the State welfare program, administrative costs rose 72 percent. Wisconsin Governor Thompson himself said that for welfare reform to be successful, "It will cost more up front to transfer the welfare system than many expect."

For welfare reform to succeed, it also takes jobs. Wisconsin and Michigan learned this lesson the hard way. In Wisconsin, a trucking company praised by Governor Thompson and Presidential candidate Bob Dole for hiring welfare recipients, laid off 45 employees this week, including the welfare workers. It was a business slowdown they said.

In Michigan, only one-fifth of former general relief recipients have found jobs. The majority of beneficiaries have become even more destitute.

So it goes when social experiments go wrong. The Republican majority is prepared to push welfare families off the cliff in the hope that they'll learn to fly. And what happens if they fall? Nearly 9 million children, who make up the majority of AFDC recipients, will pay the price. Nine million children, and the majority of AFDC recipients will pay the price. And as a society, so will we.

This is not just theory—the Congressional Budget Office agrees. They recently issued a preliminary assessment of the Republican legislation. And like last year, they said it will not work. According to their study, most States will not even attempt to implement the legislation's work requirements, because putting people to work is too expensive. In fact, the report says States will fall $13 billion short of the mark, and simply throw up their hands.

Nevertheless, the Republicans continue to defy the facts.

We have had, as I mentioned, church leaders, conservative columnists, those who have spoken and written about the various welfare reform programs with extraordinary credibility—the Congressional Budget Office taking the particular relevant facts—all reaching the same conclusion, that this is going to be an extraordinary disaster in its impact on poor children. Like last year, they said it will not work. Nevertheless, the majority continues to defy the facts.

They insist that this legislation is about putting people to work. Trust us, they say. That is not acceptable.

As Catholic Charities USA said in a recent letter: "The welfare proposal reflects ignorance and prejudice far more than the experience of this nation's poorest working and welfare families."

In the final analysis, that is what this legislation is about—ignorance and prejudice. The American people know that pulling the rug out from under struggling families is wrong. Denying health care for sick or disabled children is wrong. Keeping families trapped in poverty and violence is wrong. Condemning homeless children to cold grates is wrong.

Perhaps the greatest irony of all is now on display, as America hosts the Olympic Games. We justifiably take pride in being the best in a variety of different events. We may well win a fist full of golds in Atlanta, but America is not winning any medals when it comes to caring for our children.

The United States has more children living in poverty and spends less of its wealth on children than 16 out of the 18 industrial countries in the world. The United States has a larger gap between rich and poor children than any other industrial nation in the world. Children in the United States are 1.6 times more likely to be poor than Canadian children, 2 times more likely to be poor than British children, and 3 times more likely to be poor than French or German children.

When it comes to our children, America should go for the gold.

Mr. President, not that just assigning resources, money, on this is necessarily the answer to all the problems. But it is a pretty good reflection of where the Nation's priorities are. When the bell tolls tomorrow afternoon on that measure that is going to cut back $27 billion out of children's feeding programs, to move that payment from 88 cents to 65 cents, that is going to be a really clear indication about where the majority believes this Nation's priorities are—to use those savings for tax breaks for the wealthy individuals of this country. That is wrong. We should all take some time to think about what kind of country we want and about what we are doing to children, to ourselves and the Nation. Surely we can do better than this bad bill.

Mr. President, I yield the floor. I see our two floor managers. I appreciate their courtesy.

Mr. COCHRAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

AGRICULTURE, RURAL DEVELOPMENT, FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1997

The Senate continued with the consideration of the bill.

CURRENT EFFORTS TO PROTECT SALMON HABITAT

Mr. KEMPTHORNE. Mr. President, I rise to take note and compliment the Natural Resources Conservation Service's current efforts to encourage and provide technical assistance to private landowners who have salmon habitat on their property. In coordination with the Northwest Power Planning Council's plan for fish and wildlife protection, and other Federal agencies, the NRCS is working with conservation districts across Idaho, Oregon and Washington to assist local property owners on basin-wide and watershed specific plans to protect and restore habitat for dwindling runs for coho salmon, steelhead, sea-run cutthroat, and many chinook salmon runs.

These efforts have been widely popular in my home State, in particular in the Clearwater and Lemhi Valleys where local landowners appreciate having the support to take the initiative to preserve this important cultural and economic resource. Conservation districts have proven to be a most effective method to successfully involve all important local stakeholders in a mutually acceptable way.

Mr. President, it is my intention to commit the Senate to exploring in future legislation the ways in which we might better foster this growing partnership. Would the chairman of the subcommittee agree that this is the sort of incentive approach that merits further consideration?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, the committee agrees that this is the sort of cooperative, incentive-based relationship that should be fostered in order to protect natural resources, as is the goal of the Natural Resources Conservation Service.

YELLOWSTAR THISTLE CONTROL

Mr. KEMPTHORNE. Mr. President, I rise to clarify this Congress' commitment to research that will develop controls for noxious weeds that are problems across this country. In particular, I would like to highlight research being done with the Agricultural Research Service to control yellowstar thistle.

Yellowstar thistle is a problem across the West. Over 5 million acres across the western United States are currently infested with this noxious weed. Scientists at the University of Idaho tell me that it costs an average of $1 per acre in lost production and costs to control this weed. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that we're talking about $5 million lost annually across the West.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I concur with the remarks of Senator KEMPTHORNE. In addition, I understand that, currently, it is nearly impossible to eradicate yellowstar thistle once it has infected the narrow, arid canyon lands of the West, and in particular, the canyons of the Clearwater, Snake and Salmon Rivers of my home State.

Mr. President, it is my understanding that the research to control this weed is reaching a critical stage, where practical biological controls should be available for public use within the next few years. Is it the intention of this bill to fund research with direct and immediate practical applications for the agricultural industry?

Mr. COCHRAN. The Senator is correct.

Mr. KEMPTHORNE. I also noted that the committee specifically directed the ARS to continue funding the Albany, CA yellowstar thistle initiative. Is it the intention of the committee that the ARS continue current yellowstar thistle research contracts associated with that program, including the research efforts with the University of Idaho?

Mr. COCHRAN. Yes, it is.

Mr. JOHNSTON. Mr. President, I would like to engage in a colloquy with the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee to clarify the intent of language included in the committee report providing funding for ongoing research at the Plant Materials Center [PMC] in Golden Meadow, Louisiana, in collaboration with the Crowley Rice Research Station in Crowley, LA; ongoing research on nutria-resistant plant varieties; and funding to test application technologies for recently developed artificial seed for cord grass used to prevent coastal erosion. It is my understanding that it was the committee's intent, in the committee report, to continue the work at the Golden Meadow Plant Materials Center, in collaboration with the Crowley Rice Research Station, on smooth cord grass at the fiscal year 1996 level. In addition, work underway at Crowley on the development of nutria-resistant materials would also continue at the fiscal year 1996 level. Finally, it is also my understanding that the $100,000 mentioned in the committee report to test application technologies for smooth cord grass seed would be in addition to the funding provided to maintain this ongoing work. Is that the chairman's understanding as well?

Mr. COCHRAN. I appreciate the questions of the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, and I am happy to provide further clarification. The Senator is correct in his description of the committee's intent in its report accompanying the bill.

Mr. JOHNSTON. I appreciate this clarification.

ARS FUNDING FOR INTEGRATED LOW-INPUT CROP AND LIVESTOCK PRODUCTION SYSTEMS AT UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN-MADISON

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I am pleased that funding is provided through this bill for the ARS Integrated Farming Systems Program, to pursue long-term research on farming systems that integrate livestock and resource enhancing crop rotations—all aimed at answering farmers urgent questions of how to be profitable and farm in environmentally responsible ways. This new initiative, as requested by the President's fiscal year 1997 budget, recognizes expertise in the farming community by building research partnership teams with State researchers, extension agents, farmers, and nongovernmental organizations.

In this regard, Wisconsin has a nationally recognized program, the Wisconsin Integrated cropping systems trial, with long-term research trials and an excellent team of farmers, researchers, extension and nongovernmental groups collaborating to address questions that go right to the heart of the future of farming in the Midwest.

As specified in the committee report accompanying this bill, $500,000 has been included in this bill to support research through the ARS/IFS Program into integrated low-input crop and livestock production systems, to be carried out at the Wisconsin-Madison Experiment Station. It is my intent and understanding that this funding is to support the Wisconsin Integrated cropping systems trial. I would ask the Senator from Mississippi, the chairman of the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee, if he would concur with me on this matter.

Mr. COCHRAN. I would say to the Senator from Wisconsin that I agree with his comments regarding the ARS/IFS funds provided for the Wisconsin-Madison Experiment Station.

Mr. LEAHY. More than $1 billion a year in Federal funds is saved by WIC infant formula cost containment allowing over 1.6 million more women, infants and children to receive WIC benefits than would otherwise have been the case. One of the most important factors in the success of the WIC cost containment is competition. Until recently there were four infant formula manufacturers in the United States. In January, one of the four, Wyeth Laboratories announced its withdrawal from the domestic market. Now, alarmingly, a move is beginning among States to alter their competitive bidding procedures in a way that restricts competition and makes it impossible for Carnation to compete. If this third small company, Carnation, can't compete, it ultimately could follow Wyeth out of the market. If that occurs, only the two largest manufacturers, Ross and Mead Johnson will remain, and the prospects for sustaining large savings will be bleak. Without a third company seeking to increase market share by winning WIC contracts, cost containment is not sustainable.

In the past, States typically have awarded their WIC contract to the company whose net wholesale price—the wholesale price minus the rebate per can the company offers to pay the state WIC Program—is the lowest. But recently, a few states instead awarded their contracts to the company that offered the highest rebate per can, regardless of the company's wholesale price.

There is one circumstance where a State may have a legitimate case for awarding a WIC contract on the basis of the highest rebate rather than on the basis of the lowest net wholesale price. This occurs in States where retailers charge about the same price for all formula brands and take a much larger mark-up for Carnation products than for those of the other companies.

This problem can be readily addressed by directing States to award contracts on the basis of the lowest net wholesale price—as most States currently do—rather than on the basis of the biggest rebate, except where the State has reliable data showing that retail prices for different formula brands are similar in the State. In any State where this is the case, the State would retain full flexibility as to the basis on which to award its contract.

In 1990, the GAO wrote:

Because only three firms are responsible for almost all domestic infant formula production, coordination of pricing and marketing strategies between the manufacturers is always a potential danger. Competitive bidding will successfully yield high rebates only to the extent that infant formula manufacturers act independently. Consequently, efforts to assure competition in the infant formula industry will be an important element in State efforts to maximize cost-containment savings. (GAO, Infant Formula: Cost Containment and Competition in the WIC Program, September 1990.)

This remedy of awarding contracts on a lowest net wholesale price would help avert the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars in cost containment savings and thereby prevent hundreds of thousands of women and children from being dropped from the program. Nearly one of every four WIC participants is served with cost containment savings—and would have to be removed from the program if cost containment collapses.

The Senate, unlike the House, has managed to correct this problem in the Agriculture appropriations bill. Therefore, in conference, it is imperative that the Senate language on WIC cost containment prevail.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise today to highlight a provision in the agriculture appropriations bill that I think makes an important improvement to the WIC Program. I want to highlight the importance of this provision with hope that we can maintain it in the conference committee.

The WIC infant formula cost containment program saves more than $1 billion a year in Federal funds and allows over 1.6 million more women, infants, and children to be served through WIC each month than would otherwise be the case. Nearly one of every four WIC participants is served with cost containment savings and would have to be removed from the program if cost containment collapsed.

There is a danger now developing that threatens to undermine WIC cost containment and we need Federal action to counteract this development. In the past, States typically awarded their WIC contract to the company whose net wholesale price is the lowest. The net wholesale price represents the wholesale price of the product minus the rebate per can the manufacturer will pay the State WIC program. Recently, though, States have begun to award their WIC contracts to the company that offered the highest rebate per can, regardless of the company's wholesale price. A provision contained in this bill requires that States award contracts on the basis of the lowest net wholesale price—as most States currently do—rather than on the basis of the biggest rebate. An exception would exist if the State has reliable data showing that it makes no difference in the cost outcome whether the contract is awarded on the basis of rebate or net wholesale price.

Let me take a few moments to describe to my colleagues the flaws of the rebate methodology. This methodology is faulty for two reasons:

First, it discriminates against a company that charges low wholesale prices.

An industry heavyweight can sell the product for, say $2.50 per can and then give the State a rebate of $2.00 per can of formula. Under that scenario, the net wholesale price to the program is 50 cents per can of infant formula. A smaller company, on the other hand, may not be able to demand as high a retail price and they may charge only $1.95 per can of formula. At a $1.95 retail, the smaller company can't begin to compete on the basis of rebate, they'd be losing money on every can of formula. What the company could do is offer a rebate of $1.50, setting the net wholesale price at 45 cents per can. Ultimately the smaller company will save the WIC Program a lot of money. But they will never have the opportunity to do so if the only thing the State looks to is the rebate amount.

The second problem with this contract methodology is apparent in the scenario I've just described. Not only does the highest rebate methodology discriminate against small companies, it could cost the WIC Program up to $1 billion a year.

Approaching WIC infant formula contracts on the basis of who offers the highest rebate just doesn't make sense. We know from experience that a truly competitive bidding process will save the WIC program more than $1 billion a year.

I'll close by thanking Senator COCHRAN and Senator HATFIELD for including this cost containment measure in the Agriculture Appropriations bill we're now discussing, and I urge my colleagues serving on the conference committee to support this provision in the conference bill.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of myself and Mr. KOHL, which I think has been cleared on the other side, dealing with the Wetland Reserve Program which would allow additional wetland reserve acreage to be added to the program as long as non-Federal funds were used. "SEC. 721. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act, or made available through the Commodity Credit Corporation, shall be used to enroll in excess of 130,000 acres in the fiscal year 1997 wetlands reserve program, as authorized by 16 U.S.C. 3837: Provided, That additional acreage may be enrolled in the program to the extent that non-federal funds available to the Secretary are used to fully compensate for the cost of additional enrollments: Provided further, That the condition on enrollments provided in section 1237(b)(2)(B) of the Food Security Act of 1985, as amended (16 U.S.C. 3837(b)(2)(B)), shall be deemed met upon the enrollment of 43,333 acres through the use of temporary easements: Provided further, That the Secretary shall not enroll acres in the wetlands reserve program through the use of new permanent easements in fiscal year 1998 until the Secretary has enrolled at least 31,667 acres in the program through the use of temporary easements".

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I am pleased that the managers of the bill are willing to accept my amendment to correct a problem that has arisen with regard to special research grants section of the Agriculture appropriations bill.

Specifically, when the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee requested information from USDA/CSREES regarding special research grant projects, the Babcock Institute for International Dairy Research and Development at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, was mistakenly listed as one of the several projects slated for completion at the end of fiscal year 1996. Unfortunately, that information was not accurate. However, this error was not noticed until after the committee had acted on the bill, and funding for the Babcock Institute was omitted from the Committee Report entirely.

Therefore, my amendment will simply restore funding for the Babcock Institute in the CSREES special grant section of the bill. The funding provided is $312,000, the same as provided in fiscal year 1996.

The importance of the research conducted by the Babcock Institute has never been more important than it is today. The domestic market for many U.S. dairy products will grow less rapidly in the future as the population ages and consumption patterns change. Further, the dairy provisions of the 1996 farm bill also signal the need for dairy farmers to look more toward international markets for their livelihoods. International markets for dairy products are changing in ways that create opportunities for U.S. dairy farmers, as well as dairy exporters. But along with these developments come many research questions, related to how foreign competitors operate, and the risks associated with export markets. Through its research on many of these topics, the Babcock Institute will continue to play an important role for the U.S. dairy industry as it seeks to turn its attention more toward international markets.

Again, I thank the managers for their support of this amendment, and look forward to working with them to retain funding for this valuable program in conference.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment (No. 4976) was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, if I could speak very briefly about a particular provision in the legislation which is a matter of some concern. I do not intend to take time this evening nor do I intend to delay consideration, but I would like to bring to the attention one of the provisions that has been included here that I think the Members should have at least some awareness of.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

MEDGUIDE REGULATIONS

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I want to draw attention to provisions in the appropriation bill that deal with a matter of priority for the FDA, and that is on the proposed Medguide regulations which would establish goals for industries to meet on the issues of prescription drugs. I just want to speak for a few moments on this issue this evening, then indicate to the managers some alternatives that we are thinking about and want to talk over with the managers again tomorrow.

This appropriation bill contains an unwarranted provision that will undermine the Food and Drug Administration's efforts to prevent adverse reactions that cost the American economy an estimated $100 billion a year in direct and indirect costs. That cost is as much as, if not more, than the country spends on prescription drugs in the first place.

The provision would forbid the FDA from going forward with a proposed regulation, called the Medguide regulation, to ensure that patients get adequate information when they buy a prescription.

The FDA's efforts to ensure that the American consumer gets good information when they buy prescription drugs have been under attack by a consortium of pharmacists and other businesses who claim they are already doing an effective job of getting information to consumers without Government regulation.

The facts are to the contrary. For example, in 1992, FDA required a boxed warning—the most serious kind of warning—on labeling for Seldane and Hismanal, two of the most popular antihistamines for allergies. When taken in association with certain antibiotics and antifungals, there have been deaths and serious cardiovascular events.

These same warnings also appeared in the FDA-approved consumer advertising and magazines such as People, Time, and Newsweek. These warnings about taking these drugs in combination did not appear on the information sheets that pharmacists gave to consumers—information that was written after these warnings went into effect. In fact, consumers were given better information in magazine ads than they were given by the pharmacists who dispensed their prescriptions.

Even today, after concerted efforts to educate physicians and pharmacists about the dangers of prescribing Seldane with certain antibiotics, 2.5 percent are coprescriptions written in conjunction with one of those antibiotics, erythromycin. As a result, tens of thousands of patients are presently at risk.

FDA's concerns are not speculative. A 29-year-old woman taking Seldane died because she was not warned about the risk of taking it with an antifungal. If she had been warned of this possibility of a fatal interaction she might be alive today.

Leaving out critical warnings is unacceptable. In these types of life-and-death cases, FDA oversight is clearly warranted. The health and the lives of too many patients is at stake.

FDA has rightfully decided that consumers deserve more protection than the status quo. The Medguide regulation is intended to correct this gross deficiency in our consumer protection laws.

Today, we go into a supermarket to buy a loaf of bread, a carton of milk, or a box of cereal, and we know there is complete nutritional information on the package. When we buy an over-the-counter drug like aspirin or Tylenol in the same grocery store, FDA regulations require the drugs to have complete information so that those who take the pills understand what they are doing, how to take it, the side effects to watch out for, what foods or drugs it interacts with.

But, if we buy a prescription drug in the pharmacy or one of these same grocery stores, there is no guarantee that we will get the same kind of information when the prescription is filled. Current laws require more information about breakfast cereals than dangerous prescription drugs.

The costs of this lack of information are high. Mr. President, 30 to 50 percent of adult patients do not use their medications properly, and lack of information is one of the primary reasons. In children, noncompliance exceeds 50 percent. In the elderly, who rely most heavily on medication, noncompliance is often higher.

If patients do not take medication properly, they are poorly served by their health care system. The public health is put at risk if unsecured infections are transmitted and resistant infections develop.

The cost of misuse of prescription drugs and adverse reactions to drugs is estimated at $20 billion a year in the elderly alone. Industry's own estimates place the indirect costs at five times higher—$100 billion a year when lost productivity and reduced quality of life are included.

To avoid further tragedies and lower costs, the proposed Medguide regulations would establish concrete goals for industries to meet. By the year 2000, FDA seeks to ensure that at least 75 percent of patients with new prescriptions would obtain adequate, useful, easily understood written information. By the year 2006, 95 percent of patients with new prescriptions would receive this information. That is a goal by the year 2000, that 75 percent would receive adequate information; and 95 percent by the year 2006. It does not seem to me to be enormously prohibitive.

Working with drug companies, pharmacists, physicians and consumers, FDA plans to establish nonbinding guidelines on such information. These guidelines will help pharmacies ensure that the written information they give out is adequate.

If the goals set out in the proposed regulation are not met, FDA would either institute a mandatory program or seek public comment on what steps to take next.

This approach is reasonable. It gives the private sector the opportunity to achieve compliance without regulatory requirements over the next 4 years. Yet industry still objects. It claims that neither the Medguide regulation, nor any binding requirements are necessary. Clearly, if the industry meets the health goals by the year 2000, no binding requirements would be imposed. These goals were established in a bipartisan fashion during the Bush Administration. They should be honored by Congress today. The guidelines that have been established were established under the Republican administration with the support of the industry at that particular time.

The industry has already failed to deliver on its promise of voluntary action. In 1982, a regulation mandating that information be given to patients when they buy new prescriptions was withdrawn, because the private sector promised it can do better without regulations.

This whole proposal that is out there builds on a long history of relationship between the agency and the industries which are affected, and an agreement had been worked out. Now there is an attempt to circumvent that agreement to the disadvantage of consumers.

FDA then monitored the industry's efforts of 1982, and found that few patients were getting information, and much of the information was not adequate, and that failure led to the rule-making that the industry is now trying to avoid.

The provision in the appropriation bill states that if the private sector develops a plan within 120 days of enactment, FDA's rulemaking is suspended. We understand that now. The provision in the appropriation bill states if the private sector develops a plan within 120 days of enactment, FDA's rulemaking is suspended. However, the Secretary of HHS and the commissioner cannot review the voluntary program to determine if it is, in fact, adequate. The only action that HHS or FDA is allowed to take is to order the plan to see if it meets the goals set by the industry. So this is an industry plan. They could develop it within 120 days. The FDA is prohibited from protecting consumers. The only ability FDA has is eventually auditing the industry program to find out if there has been compliance with the industry program.

Mr. President, this is on an issue of such vital importance to the consumers. We have a solid record in our committee on adverse drug reactions and on what the industry has been willing to do, what they have not done, and what we have reviewed in our committee and is a part of the FDA reform program, which the leader indicated they are going to call up. But we have just heard about this proposal in the last several hours. The bill further hamstringing FDA by precluding activities such as guidelines that might assist the private sector.

This provision is an abdication of Congress' responsibility to protect the public health. Instead of responsible action by the FDA, an industry with an unsatisfactory track record is permitted to regulate itself without any FDA oversight of their program. That is inadequate.

Mr. President, tomorrow, I will have an amendment to address that particular issue. I will consult with the floor managers to find out about whether they share the sense or concern which I have spoken to this afternoon and if they have a way to try to address it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks recognition?

Mr. BRYAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4977

(Purpose: To limit funding for the market access program)

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nevada [Mr. BRYAN], for himself, Mr. KERRY, and Mr. GREGG, proposes an amendment numbered 4977.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the end of the bill, add the following:

SEC. . FUNDING LIMITATIONS FOR MARKET ACCESS PROGRAM.

None of the funds made available under this Act may be used to carry out the market access program pursuant to section 203 of the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978 (7 U.S.C. 5623) if the aggregate amount of funds and value of commodities under the program exceeds $70,000,000.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. President, this amendment is regarding the Market Access Program. The Market Access Program, or MAP, was created to encourage the development, maintenance, and expansion of exports of U.S. agricultural products. MAP is the successor to the Market Promotion Program [MPP], which in turn was the successor to the Targeted Export Assistance Program [TEA], established in 1986. TEA was originally created to "counter or offset the adverse effect of subsidies, import quotas, or other unfair trade practices of foreign competitors on U.S. agriculture exports." Since 1986, over $1.43 billion has been spent for TEA, MPP and now MAP.

MAP is operated through about 64 organizations that either run market promotion programs themselves or pass the funds along to companies to spend on their own market promotion efforts. In fiscal year 1994, about 43 percent of all program activities involved generic promotions while 57 percent involved branded promotions.

The General Accounting Office [GAO] has pointed out that the entire Federal Government spends about $3.5 billion annually on export promotion. While agricultural products account for only 10 percent of total U.S. exports, the Department of Agriculture spends about $2.2 billion, or 63 percent of the total. The Department of Commerce spends $236 million annually on trade promotion.

While the stated goal of MAP is to benefit U.S. farmers, the program has benefited foreign companies. In fiscal years 1986-1993, $92 million on MPP funds went to foreign-based firms. This amount represented nearly 20 percent of the total funds allocated for brand-name promotions during the 8-year period. In fiscal year 1995, 49 foreign-based firms received MPP funds; in fiscal year 1994 over 110 foreign firms received MPP funds from the U.S. Treasury. I found this to be unfathomable, and I offered an amendment to remedy this to the 1996 farm bill. My amendment passed, and I am pleased to say that MAP money can no longer be given to foreign corporations.

Still, many problems exist with the MAP program:

First, wasted dollars: There is still no proof that MAP funds are not simply replacing funds that would have been spent anyway on advertising. USDA does not have any good data on this phenomenon. Commercial firms still have the opportunity to substitute MAP funds for promotional activities they would have otherwise undertaken with their own funds.

Second, graduation: Current regulations require MAP assistance to cease after 5 years. However, the 5-year clock started running in 1994. This means that some companies will have been in the program for 13 years at the end of 1999. Thirteen years is enough time to overcome barriers and develop markets. Already, 136 firms have participated in this program for 6 to 8 years and have received the bulk of the brand-name funds.

Third, efficiency: GAO states that taxpayers do not have reasonable assurance that the considerable public funds expended on export promotion are being effectively used to emphasize sectors and programs with the highest potential returns. MAP supporters use examples of increased exports to defend this program. However, even if a brand-name promotion effort results in identifiable increases in exports, unless the Foreign Agriculture Service [FAS] can convincingly demonstrate that the promotion effort would not have been undertaken without MAP assistance, those increases in exports cannot be attributed to the program.

Since 1986 there have been over 100 participants in the program, and yet the Foreign Agriculture Service has completed only 12 program evaluations. Only 9 of 26 participants who have received over $10 million have been evaluated.

Fourth, U.S. content: MAP regulations issued in August 1991 do not restrict program participation to products that have 100 percent U.S. content. Regulations permit full funding for products that have at least 50 percent U.S. content by weight.

There is no dependable data on percent of U.S. content. The Foreign Agriculture Service relies on statements made in MAP applications about U.S. content and not-for-profit organizations rely on unverified statements regarding U.S. content from their branded participants. In 1993, the Foreign Agriculture Service began to review the support for the certifications made regarding U.S. content during their audits of participants. Their work is limited to the not-for-profit organizations and they do not, as a rule, audit the commercial entities performing brand-name promotions.

Who should get these funds? Although new guidelines say small firms should have priority—one third of fiscal year 1994 funds went to large companies. For that reason, large corporations such as Sunkist, Sun-Maid, Welch's, and Pillsbury still receive large sums of money. In 1992, the average amount awarded to the top 50 firms was $1 million. Eight of those firms had sales over $1 billion.

There were 17 MAP participants receiving more than $1 million for fiscal years 1993-95:

Sunkist, $11.1 million.
 Ernest & Julio Gallo, $9.1 million.
 Sunsweet, $4.6 million.
 Blue Diamond, $4.5 million.
 American Legend, $2.9 million.
 North Am. Fur Producers, $2.3 million.
 Dole, $2.1 million.
 Tyson Foods, $1.9 million.
 M&M Mars, $1.8 million.
 21st Century Genetics, $1.5 million.
 Welch Foods, $1.4 million.
 Pillsbury, $1.3 million.
 Campbell Soup, $1.2 million.
 Hansa-Pacific, $1.1 million.
 Hershey, $1.1 million.
 Canandaigua Wine, $1.1 million.
 Seagram, $1.0 million.

Private, for-profit companies are the ones who benefit from this program. Taxpayers should not pay for advertising particular products. These companies should take over the costs themselves. MAP, like MPP and TEA before it, is a convenient source of free cash for wealthy businesses, such as McDonald's, to help pay for their overseas advertising budgets.

While the Federal Government does have a legitimate role in promoting exports to foreign countries, we should use our considerable Federal expertise to assist companies in cutting red tape in foreign countries and providing them with technical assistance. We should not do it by granting scarce taxpayer dollars to private, for-profit companies for activities they would otherwise conduct on their own.

Mr. President, the amendment I offer today is nearly identical to the position the Senate took on the Federal Agricultural Improvement and Reform Act, or farm bill, of 1996. The Senate voted 59 to 37 in February to accept the Bryan amendment on the MPP program. That amendment restricted use of MPP program moneys to small businesses, as certified by the Small Business Administration, and Capper-Volstead cooperatives. Because the amendment eliminated foreign companies from the program, the funding level for MPP was capped at $70 million.

In the House-Senate conference on the farm bill, my language prohibiting foreign companies from participation in MPP was retained, but the level of funding was raised to $90 million. So while the conferees were attempting to reform the MPP program by removing foreign companies, they also enacted a 29-percent increase in funding. My amendment would return the MAP program to the originally approved Senate funding level of $70 million. This represents no real cut to the program as foreign companies may no longer participate. This frees up funds for domestic businesses.

Mr. President, reiterating, I am renewing an effort that I had been involved in—as Members will be familiar with—for some years. It is a program that was originally known as the Targeted Export Assistance Program. A little later iteration referred to it as the Market Promotion Program, and it has now evolved into the Market Access Program.

The historical genesis, as well as the ostensible premise for its continuation, is an effort to encourage the development, maintenance, and expansion of exports of U.S. agricultural products abroad, originally designed to counter or offset the adverse effects of subsidies, import quotas, and other unfair trade practices.

Since 1986, TEA, MPP, and now MAP, has resulted in the expenditure of $1.5 billion. This program is operated through about 64 different organizations, as I know the distinguished Presiding Officer and the chairman of the committee are both very familiar with. In fiscal year 1994, about 43 percent of all program activities involved generic promotions, while 57 percent involved branded promotions. By that, Mr. President, we mean specific products of company A, B, C, or D.

We will talk later about some of the companies who have received very generous amounts of taxpayer dollars to support a program which, in the view of this Senator, amounts to a corporate entitlement program that could not have been justified even in the most affluent circumstances at the Federal level. Now, while we are trying to downsize, streamline, cut expenditures, and reach targeted goals for balancing our budget by 2002 or 2003, this is precisely the kind of program that is still a legacy of the past and, in my judgment, one I cannot support on its merits.

I think it might be helpful to note that the Federal Government spends about $3.5 million annually on export promotion activities. Agricultural products represent about 10 percent of the total U.S. exports. Yet, of that $3.5 billion spent at the Federal level, about $2.2 billion, or 63 percent of the total amount, is spent on agricultural export promotion. The Department of Commerce, for example, spends about $236 million annually on trade promotion.

Now, earlier this year, Mr. President, one of the objections that this Senator and others raised was that a substantial amount of the funding on this program went not to American companies, but went to foreign companies. So joining with the distinguished occupant of the chair, and other colleagues on both sides of the political aisle, we were able to get an amendment through that, as it ultimately worked its way through the legislative process, dealt with one issue which, in my judgment, was inconceivable, unfathomable, in that we would continue to provide money to foreign companies with taxpayer dollars. I am happy to report that, in the legislation that passed, we have now eliminated moneys that previously went to foreign-based firms. So, prospectively, that can no longer occur, and the money that we are talking about here this afternoon will no longer be given to foreign corporations. But the fundamental objections to the programs remain.

First, the General Accounting Office, which has evaluated this program, has determined that these are wasted dollars. There is no evidence to support the proposition that money which ostensibly is given to companies to augment or increase their promotional activities has simply not been used to replace existing dollars already in these major corporations' advertising accounts. So rather than a McDonald's spending $500 million a year, if they get $4 million or $5 million, they reduce the amount of their own budget allocation to $496 million—the point being that there is no extra dollar outlay spent on the promotion and advertising of these products. That is to even accept the proposition that you can target or trace a correlation between the amount of money that is spent on advertising dollars and the kind of products that these companies are able to market overseas.

So that is the first objection raised, and that is as valid today as it was when the General Accounting Office did its evaluation some 5 years ago that there is no assurance of companies simply not trading their own corporate dollars and replacing them with dollars that the American taxpayers pay.

The second is a graduation problem. There is no graduation formula. How long does one remain as part of the program? Current regulations, enacted in response to criticisms made by this Senator and others about the merits of the program, ultimately caused the re-evaluation of the regulation so that this MAP assistance will cease after 5 years. However, those who continue to benefit from this financial allocation provided at taxpayer expense target it to 5 years to run prospectively from the date of the enactment of the regulation, so you can still stay on this program up until 1999.

Now, for some companies, that would mean being a part of this program for 13 years. That is an incredibly long period of time. If you find any merit to this program—and I must say I am one who finds none—how do you justify keeping a particular company as part of this program for up to 13 years? Already, 136 firms have participated in the program for 6 to 8 years and have received the bulk of the brand-name funds.

The third objection is a question of efficiency. GAO states that taxpayers do not have any reasonable assurances that the rather considerable public funds expended on export promotion are being effectively used to emphasize sectors and programs with the highest potential returns. It is frequently said in the course of debate—and I am sure will be again in the context of this amendment—where supporters of this program cite increased exports as an example of why this program is so needed, why it is so beneficial, why it does so much good. But there is no analytical correlation between those increases in exports and moneys being expended from the program. That is to say, would those increases have occurred notwithstanding the allocations made under the MAP program? Since 1986, there have been over 100 participants in the program, and yet the Foreign Agricultural Service has completed only 12 program evaluations. Only 9 of 26 participants who have received more than $10 million have been evaluated.

Finally, Mr. President, on the question of U.S. content, MAP regulations issued in August 1991 do not restrict program participation to products that have 100 percent U.S. content. Regulations permit full funding for products that have no more than 50 percent of U.S. content by weight.

There is no dependable data on the percent of U.S. content. The Foreign Agricultural Service relies on statements made in MAP applications about U.S. content to ascertain the amount of U.S. content without doing an independent analysis. So these are self-certified statements without any type of independent verification whatsoever.

The question is: Who should get these funds? Although new guidelines say some small firms should have priority, one-third of fiscal year 1994 funds went to large companies. It is for that reason that some of the largest corporations in America—among them Sunkist, Sun Maid, Welch's, and Pillsbury—still receive large sums of money. In 1992, the average amount awarded to the top 50 firms was $1 million. Eight of those firms have sales over $1 billion.

I am sure most Americans would ponder, with a company that has a sales volume of $1 billion, should the American taxpayer be subsidizing the advertising account of a firm of that size? I must say again that I do not believe that should justify defending those appropriations.

But to give you some more current data, there were 17 MAP participants receiving more than $1 million for the past 2 fiscal years, fiscal year 1993 to fiscal year 1995: Sunkist, $11.1 million; Ernest & Julio Gallo, $9.1 million; Sunsweet, $4.6 billion; Blue Diamond, $4.5 million; American Legend, $2.9 million; North America Fur Producers,

$2.3 million; Dole, $2.1 million; Tyson Foods, $1.9 million; M&M Mars, $1.8 million; 21st Century Genetics, $1.5 million; Welch Foods, $1.4 million; Pillsbury, $1.3 million; Campbell Soup, $1.2 million; Hansa-Pacific, $1.1 million; Hershey, $1.1 million; Seagram, $1 million.

Mr. President, those are some of the great household names of America. These are companies that have been exceedingly successful, and all of us as Americans quite curiously share in their success. We are delighted when American firms prosper and do well. But why should they do well at the expense of the taxpayer who is being asked to pay his and her hard-earned dollars to supplement the advertising accounts of some of the largest companies in America?

I believe that the Federal Government has a legitimate role in promoting exports to foreign countries, but we should certainly use our considerable expertise to assist companies in cutting red tape in foreign countries and providing them with technical assistance. We should not do it by granting scarce taxpayer dollars to private companies, either, for-profit companies, or activities that they would otherwise conduct on their own.

So, Mr. President, that brings me to the point of what our amendment would do. It is identical virtually to the position that the Senate took on the Federal Agricultural Improvement and Reform Act, commonly referred to as the farm bill of 1996. The Senate voted by 59 to 37 in February to accept the Bryan amendment on the MPP program, and that amendment restricted use of MPP moneys to small businesses certified by the Small Business Administration and Capper-Volstead cooperatives. Because the amendment eliminated foreign companies from the program, the funding level for MPP was capped at $70 million. That is to say, based upon the recent experience of the Market Promotion Program, out of an appropriation of $110 million it was projected that $40 million was being allocated to foreign companies. So if you flatten out the program and keep it at its present level, $70 million would continue to fund the program other than for foreign company participation.

I make it clear that I think none of my colleagues are misled about this. My preference would be to zero out this program for all of the reasons that I have outlined. And I daresay I think the distinguished occupant of the chair shares the view of the Senator from Nevada. But yielding to pragmatic imperatives, it is clear that this body is not yet prepared to go that far.

So what this amendment would do would be to cap the current level at $70 million. The current appropriations bill provides for $90 million. So when you factor out that none of this money can go to foreign companies, in effect, this program would be increased by 29-percent—a 29-percent increase.

The amendment that I have offered would return this program to the originally approved Senate funding level of $70 million. That, I believe, is a reasonable compromise, and I believe that my colleagues having voted once before by 59 to 37 to cap the program at that level and to carry out the intent of the farm bill of 1996, we ought to hold the appropriations to the level authorized in that bill.

Mr. President, I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I am pleased to join my friend from Nevada, Senator BRYAN, in another attempt to save American taxpayers from funding U.S. corporate advertising in other countries. The Market Promotion Program is one of the most blatant examples of corporate welfare in the budget—the American taxpayers have footed a bill of more than $1 billion to pay for corporate advertising since its inception. And Senator BRYAN and I have been as tenacious as it is possible to be in trying to eliminate this program.

This is a subsidy program which has been roundly criticized by research institutes across the political and economic spectrum—the National Taxpayers' Union, the Progressive Policy Institute, Citizens Against Government Waste, and Cato Institute.

Taxpayers in Massachusetts would be shocked if they knew that the Federal Government is collecting taxes from them and using their hard-earned money to embellish the advertising budgets of corporate America.

I have taken to the floor time and time again to speak about wasteful spending in the budget. And I have been an outspoken critic of this Market Promotion Program. Our colleagues have heard me discuss how we have paid the Gallo Bros. to peddle their wine to the French; how we helped advertise Japanese-made underwear in Tokyo; how we promoted fashion shows of mink coats and fur stoles; how we have subsidized M&M's and Chicken McNuggets.

We have tried to reform the MPP program over the past few years. Last year, we prohibited the mink industry from receiving Federal subsidies to promote fashion shows abroad. That was a step in the right direction. And, Mr. President, I am very pleased the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee, Senator COCHRAN, has agreed to exclude mink subsidies in this year's bill. In addition, Mr. President, last year, in the Department of Agriculture appropriations bill, the Senate voted to curb the Market Promotion Program—we passed the Bryan-Bumpers-Kerry amendment to limit the program to small businesses and agricultural co-ops. This was a good start to curb corporate welfare, but the provision was dropped in conference. So, the program continues despite the Senate's vote.

Accordingly, my friend from Nevada, Senator BRYAN, and I are making the effort once again to halt this unnecessary flow of funds from the Treasury.

We must not force American taxpayers to keep subsidizing multimillion-dollar corporations. When my friends and neighbors in Massachusetts measure this program against the extraordinary reductions we are facing in programs that really matter to working Americans, they ask me how Congress can continue to justify this type of corporate welfare. There is no good answer to that question. This program is unjustifiable in the current budget environment.

Mr. President, I am grateful Senator BRYAN is willing to lead the charge. Together, we will continue to fight this waste of taxpayer money until this program is eliminated. We fought the wool and mohair subsidy, and that is now gone. We fought the mink subsidy, and that is now gone. Ultimately, we will win this battle, too, because the Senate will recognize that it is a monumental waste of money. I yield the floor.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, this Market Promotion Program has been one that has attracted an awful lot of attention and some controversy over the last several years. Senators have heard the arguments for it and against it, and why it is important for us to continue to support those who are trying to market their commodities and food products in overseas markets, particularly when they are confronted with trade practices that are developed by our competitors, or even those countries in which we are trying to export our products that operate against our interests.

Under the rules of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade, we have tried to reduce barriers to trade, make the playing field fair, and have as a principle for our international trade that if we are going to make available our market here in the United States, we are going to insist that other countries do the same. But from time to time, even though this is the general understanding and the general basis for these international agreements, we run into specific problems—structural difficulties, bureaucratic redtape, call it what you will. It is all an effort to prefer one of our competitors over our exporters in these markets, or to keep us out of the markets altogether.

These funds have been very helpful, I am told at our hearings with the Foreign Agriculture Service, in breaking down barriers to trade, to overcoming these efforts to keep our suppliers and our exporters out of international markets.

There is no question that this is an area of economic activity that has benefited American business, agriculture, and industry. We have seen a growing amount of jobs created in our own economy here at home because of access to overseas markets for our products. There is a direct correlation between the amount of exporting we do and the amount of benefit we get economically here in terms of jobs, pay for workers, and renewed and invigorated business activity.

It has been consistently shown on the basis of experience that we have had using these funds that as we provide assistance to exporters and suppliers in international markets, we do better; we sell more; we are more successful. I hope the Senate will not be persuaded to further reduce the ability of the Foreign Agriculture Service to go to bat for our exporters, to try to help where help is needed, and use these funds in a targeted way, in a way that is designed to help us sell more of what we produce in these emerging markets around the world.

I know that we are not going to resolve this issue tonight, and we have a lot of information that will be available to Senators, but almost all the Senators who are going to vote—and I presume we are going to go to a record vote on this unless the Senator decides to withdraw his amendment on the basis of my overwhelmingly persuasive remarks in opposition to his amendment. I presume we are going to vote on this amendment tomorrow.

Mr. BRYAN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. COCHRAN. I will be happy to yield to my friend from Nevada.

Mr. BRYAN. I always find my friend from Mississippi extraordinarily articulate. Without any derogation intended, he has not persuaded this Senator. At this particular point, it would be my intent to ask for a rollcall vote at the appropriate time. And I can assure the Senator I do not intend to prolong the debate tonight, but when he finishes, I might just make a very brief comment.

Mr. COCHRAN. I thank the Senator. I know he is committed on this issue. He raises it from time to time. I do appreciate the fact we do not have all the charts and other things that he has brought to the floor in the past to persuade Senators on the correctness of his position, but he is certainly correct in pointing out that this issue was debated fully, extensively in the discussion of the farm bill earlier this year. The farm bill did have provisions relating to the program, and so Senators are familiar with it, and they are familiar with the arguments for and against.

I am not going to belabor the issue again. I hope Senators will reject the amendment and support the committee's funding level for this program. It is, I would say, consistent with the authorization contained in the conference report of the farm bill.

I rest my case, and I am happy for the Senate to work its will on this subject. I hope they will support the decision that we made in the committee.

Mr. BRYAN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. BRYAN. I ask unanimous consent that the distinguished senior Senator from Arkansas be added as a cosponsor of this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BRYAN. If I may very briefly respond to my friend from Mississippi, and then I will yield to my friend from Arkansas, it seems to me that we talk a lot about sacrifice—the need for us to notch up the proverbial belt and slim down, streamline Government, all of these sorts of things, and we ask most segments in our society to do more with less.

I must say, with all due respect to my friend from Mississippi, it seems to me that those who are part of this corporate entitlement program that has been culturally ingrained as part of this Federal budget process, we never ask them. I do not think it is asking too much of our friends, the McDonald's hamburger people, Pillsbury, the Welch's, Sunkist, Sun Maid, Seagrams, all these other marvelous corporations to say, look, this is a program we thought we could afford at one time but this is 1996 and you folks have followed our debate on balancing the budget. Both parties, both the Congress and the White House have agreed that a balanced budget ought to be our goal, that ought to be a national priority. There are benefits that inure to our society, to our economy, and we cannot do that if we continue the old ways, as comfortable as they may have become.

So I conclude with the observation that the $70 million is $70 million more than I would like to spend, but this appropriations bill sets a funding level of $90 million, so it does represent a 29 percent increase over the $70 million that would be available under the parameters of the farm bill because we have deleted the money for foreign companies. It seems to me that a spirit of sacrifice and fairness would say, look, those who are the giants of corporate America, they ought to be asked to trim their sails and to cut their spending a bit by enabling us to wean ourselves gradually from this program.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter that I received as chairman of the subcommittee from the Coalition of U.S. Exporters in support of the Market Access Program.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

COALITION TO PROMOTE U.S.
AGRICULTURAL EXPORTS,
Washington, DC, July 9, 1996.

Hon. THAD COCHRAN,
Chairman, Subcommittee on Agriculture, Rural Development, and Related Agencies, U.S.
Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: As Congress considers the FY 1997 agriculture appropriations bill, we want to emphasize again the need to maintain funding for USDA's export programs, including the Market Access Program and FAS Cooperator Program, as authorized under the new Farm Bill.

Such action is critical to the success of the new Farm Bill, which gradually eliminates direct income assistance to producers, while providing increased planting flexibility. Within this framework, the long term viability of American agriculture is even more dependent on ensuring access to foreign markets and maintaining and expanding U.S. agricultural exports.

It is also vital to our nation's economic well-being. For example, U.S. agricultural exports this year are now projected to reach a record $60 billion. This is expected to result in a record agriculture trade surplus of approximately $30 billion, generate as much as $100 billion in related economic activity, and provide jobs for over one million Americans.

The Market Access Program, along with the FAS Cooperator Program, are among the few programs specifically allowed under the Uruguay Round Agreement and not subject to any reduction or discipline. When other countries are increasingly pursuing such policies to help their agriculture industries maintain and expand their share of the world market, now is not the time for the U.S. to continue to unilaterally reduce or eliminate such programs.

Under the new Farm Bill, the Market Access Program already has been reduced from $110 million to just $90 million annually. The new Farm Bill also makes permanent the reforms included in the FY 1996 agriculture appropriations bill, including limiting any direct cost-share assistance to small businesses, farmer cooperatives and trade associations.

Clearly, the Market Access Program and other USDA export programs remain an essential element of our nation's overall agriculture and trade policy. They are key to helping boost U.S. agricultural exports, strengthening farm income, promoting economic growth and creating needed jobs throughout our entire economy. Accordingly, we urge your strong support to ensure such programs continue to be fully funded and aggressively implemented.

Sincerely,

Coalition to Promote U.S. Agricultural Exports.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, first, let me say that my good friend, the distinguished manager of the bill and the chairman of the Subcommittee on Agriculture Appropriations, and I very seldom disagree, and we have worked on a number of bills when I was chairman of this subcommittee and now the last 2 years he has been chairman of the subcommittee, and I think we have worked together well and produced really good bills for the Senate's consideration. This is one of those rare occasions when we disagree.

I feel very strongly, and have for many years, that the Market Promotion Program, recently renamed the Market Access Program, is just short of outrageous. When I first got involved in it, the General Accounting Office had just done a study. We were putting millions of dollars in a program to encourage McDonald's to sell Big Macs in Moscow. In addition, we were spending money to encourage one of the big companies in my own State, Tyson Foods, a company I am more than happy to champion on most occasions, to advertise their products overseas. Further, Gallo wine was a big recipient. The liquor industry was getting millions to export liquor.

I said last year, where is the Christian Coalition when we need them? But we finally, through the determined efforts of the Senator from Nevada, last year were able to change the people who were eligible to put a little bit of sense in it. We made a substantial contribution to common sense last year on the Senate floor, but unfortunately the conferee committee was not satisfied until they worked in a loophole big enough to drive a Fortune 500 company through.

Having said that, let me say if I had a chance to eliminate the whole program as it currently operates at this moment, if I had the power to do it, I would be more than happy to do it. But at least because of the efforts of the Senator from Nevada, we have been able to make it a little more palatable.

But think about this, Mr. President. We have capped the Export Enhancement Program now for 1997 at $100 million. But when you take the Export Enhancement Program, Public Law 480, which has been on the books for decades—and there are three titles in that program, I, II, and III, all designed and calculated to enhance agricultural exports—everybody is for agricultural exports. The USDA also has the GSM Program as an export tool. There are the COAP and SOAP Programs. If it were not for agricultural exports, the trade deficit in this country would be really staggering. I am not sure what the correlation is in the amounts between how much oil we import from around the world compared to how many agricultural products we export, but I think the two are very similar. That will give you some idea how staggering the deficit would be if we did not do a lot of agricultural exporting.

But when I think of the programs that run into hundreds of millions of dollars to export agriculture products and then here is this questionable—well, it is not insignificant. It is $90 million. Where I come from, that is considered sizable. Last year, we were able to cut that program from $90 million to $70 million, and this year, lo and behold, it is back to $90 million. So while we have been able to get the Gallo Bros. and McDonald's and people like that out of the program, at least directly, and allow cooperatives such as my own Riceland Foods, and their farmer-members, to benefit from the program, we should certainly not in the days of budget constraints that we are experiencing now be raising that program by about 25 percent.

So, Mr. President, I will not belabor it. I see the Senator from Nebraska here. He, apparently, wants to offer an amendment. I do not want to delay his opportunity to do that. But I say I am more than happy to cosponsor the amendment of the Senator from Nevada, which does not eliminate the program but simply puts the funding level from $90 million back to $70 million, where we put it last year.

I yield the floor.

Mr. KERREY addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

AMENDMENT NO. 4978

(Purpose: To increase funding for the Grain Inspection, Packers and Stockyards Administration and the Food Safety and Inspection Service, with an offset)

Mr. KERREY. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection the pending amendments are set aside.

The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. KERREY] proposes an amendment numbered 4978.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 18, line 12, strike "$432,103,000" and insert "$421,078,000".

On page 20, line 10, strike "$98,000,000" and insert "$86,975,000".

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I have brought this problem to the attention of both the chairman, the distinguished Senator from Mississippi, as well as the ranking member, the distinguished Senator from Arkansas. This amendment would increase funding for the Food Safety and Inspection Service as well as for the Grain Inspection, Packers and Stockyards Administration, the first by $8.5 million, the second by $1.5 million. The increases are offset by a reduction in funding available for the Agriculture Quarantine Inspection Program. This is a user fee account within the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

I understand there have been some problems. I understand the committee has asked the Department of Agriculture, under the FSIS, the Food Safety Inspection Service, to give the Congress an evaluation of its computer programs. I understand this has just occurred today. But we are now moving, the Department is moving from an old carcass-by-carcass system of evaluating product—which in many cases did not improve the safety of the meat coming out to the consumer because the inspection system was not able to apply good science to determine whether or not there were pathogens on the animals—we are moving from that old system to a new system called HACCP. HACCP is, to my mind, a vastly preferable system. But it will be very difficult in my judgment to do that if we underfund FSIS in the process.

Let me say parenthetically, I believe across the board in those areas where Republicans and Democrats agree the Government function is important—and there are still some disagreements between Republicans and Democrats, or sometimes, as we have just heard, inside, even, each party; sometimes it does not break along party lines, with the Market Promotion Program as an example, the Sugar Program and so forth—but in many cases we have reached agreement: The FAA should be funded. FSIS is important to fund. That increases the quality of our product and the confidence of the consumer. It makes our economy more productive and, as a consequence, is a very important function of the Government.

Very often we find ourselves in those areas as a result of an unwillingness to fund the program because we will not allocate money from other places. I will make the point again, typically it is not this kind of temporary reallocation, which is all this is, internal to USDA. Very often it is a problem of not being willing to either say we are going to raise taxes to pay for it, which very few people at this point want to do, or we are going to get it out of the growth of entitlements, or we are not going to build the F-18C, or some other thing, some other major program like that.

If we do not fund FSIS this year and next year and the year after, as the appropriations accounts get smaller, I believe we are going to pay a big price for it. So I understand there may be some language that can be worked out in this particular reallocation out of concern for the very specific program I would like to fund, the field automation and information management project. I have a great deal of respect for the chairman and ranking member's concerns for that particular effort.

The second thing that is being funded in here is a bit easier and a lot more straightforward. That is just a $1.5 additional million for the Grain Inspection, Packers and Stockyards Administration. A lot of us have expressed concern this year as the price of beef has gone down. Once again the concern is, is the market working? That is to say, has the concentration in the beef and the concentration of the pork industry reached a point where we no longer have competition, where we no longer have price discovery, where we no longer have a market that is working to the advantage of either the consumer or for the American economy?

That question is a difficult one to answer. Last year there was an advisory committee that was put together. A couple of months ago they made their recommendations to us. The dominant recommendation, at least the recommendation at the top of the list, was we should just do more of what the Packer and Stockyards Act says the USDA should do. Even if we are able to get an additional $1.5 million, I must say a $24 or $25 million budget against the Packer and Stockyards budget, against a $120-billion industry, is not likely, even by some sort of common-sense evaluation, to provide this agency with enough money to get the job done.

For all Members who have issued press releases expressing enthusiasm about this Commission's report, this panel report, this amendment would provide for: An industry structure performance surveillance of $550,000—it was in the concentration recommendations; $480,000 for a packer market competition study—that, again, was in the recommendation that was made; and a quarter of a million dollars for an electronic filing system, also in the Commission's recommendation.

It is impossible for us to be able to go from saying "we are concerned about whether or not the market is working" to a point where, particularly for the smaller packers as well as the great number of feedlot operators and growers out there who say "the market is not working," unless we fund this particular agency.

Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4979

(Purpose: To provide funds for risk management, with an offset)

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to lay that amendment aside and move immediately to the consideration of second amendment I have.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. KERREY] proposes an amendment numbered 4979.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 25, line 16, strike "$795,000,000" and insert "$725,000,000".

On page 29, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

RISK MANAGEMENT

For administrative and operating expenses, as authorized by section 226A of the Department of Agriculture Reorganization Act of 1994 (7 U.S.C. 6933), $70,000,000, except that not to exceed $700 shall be available for official reception and representation expenses, as authorized by section 506(i) of the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1506(i)).

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, this amendment establishes a separate appropriation for salaries and expenses for the Risk Management Agency inside the Farm Service Agency's account. I wish the administration of the Department of Agriculture had sent up a separation. I think it is clear to most of us who look at the new farm program that increasingly it is going to be the farmers managing their own risks that will determine how well they do in a market that is increasingly volatile. The risk management program, the combination of Government and, increasingly, private sector insurance, is going to determine whether or not a producer, a farmer, or small business person out there operating in the marketplace, is going to be successful. This establishes this risk management agency and sets up a separate account for it so we make sure the U.S. Department of Agriculture does allocate a sufficient amount of resources to do so. I pull $70 million out of the FSA to do that. I believe it is much more likely, as a consequence of doing this, that the risk management program is going to be executed in the fashion that both Republicans and Democrats desire. Again, as we look at this new age of farmers on their own establishing what the risk is and purchasing coverage for that risk, it is much more likely, if this agency is funded separately, that the market, the consumer out there, will determine what the nature of that product is going to be and that the agency itself will, as a consequence, be sufficiently funded.

Mr. President, Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 4980

(Purpose: To provide the Secretary of Agriculture temporary authority for the use of voluntary separation incentives to assist in reducing employment levels, and for other purposes)

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to lay this pending amendment aside and I ask immediate consideration of a third amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. KERREY] proposes an amendment numbered 4980.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, this third amendment is one of those sort of good Government amendments. I have spoken with the authorizing committee about this. They raise some concerns that I will attempt to address in a moment. This gives the U.S. Department of Agriculture the authority to conduct a voluntary buyout in order to meet its downsizing needs. No question, under this appropriations bill, the Department of Agriculture, particularly in FSA, is going to have to downsize and, equally important, Mr. President, no question, that is a desirable thing to do, given the substantial reduction in work that is likely to be required under the new farm program.

So it is not that I am objecting to that downsizing, I am merely, with this amendment, trying to provide the Department with the authority to do buyouts which very often can save them substantial money and save the taxpayers substantial money in the process.

I note there has been considerable attention to giving buyout authority to other agencies in the Federal Government, Treasury in particular. I am well aware of the work others have done in this area. As indicated, I have had discussions with the authorizing committee—that is to say, the Committee on Governmental Affairs—in gaining acceptance for my amendment.

Thus, Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to amend my amendment before it comes to a vote tomorrow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on the third amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. KERREY. I yield the floor.

FAIR ACT CREDIT TITLE

Mr. SIMPSON. Mr. President, I rise to inquire of my friend, Senator LUGAR of Indiana, about a provision in the Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform Act [FAIR Act] which became law on April 4, 1996. Specifically, I am concerned with the way the U.S. Department of Agriculture has interpreted section 663, the section of the credit title that provides a transition period for elimination of the Lease-back/Buyback program.

The statutory language says that only those borrowers who have submitted complete applications to acquire inventory property prior to the date of enactment will be considered for this form of loan servicing. The language is clear that applications must have been fully submitted on or before April 4, 1996, but a difficulty has arisen with regard to whether or not the property—on which the application is being made—must actually be in Federal inventory prior to the date of enactment. The statute is not clear on this point. The Department has interpreted the clause, "Applications to acquire inventory property," to mean the property must already be in Federal inventory. This is called a "post-acquisition" application—"acquisition" referring to when the Government takes ownership of the property.

I am concerned that this "brightline" has stranded a number of "pre-acquisition" applicants in the pipeline. These borrowers have submitted complete applications for lease-back/buyback servicing within the valid timeframe, but for a variety of reasons, the Government has not yet acquired their property.

I certainly do understand the desire of the Department to expeditiously resolve as many debt servicing cases as possible, and I am supportive of the FAIR Act's marked advances in streamlining the farm loan programs and returning Government to its proper role as a "lender of last resort." I do believe, however, that we should grandfather those applications that were submitted prior to the change in law.

I would ask my friend from Indiana whether he agrees with me that USDA's interpretation is incorrect?

Mr. LUGAR. Senator SIMPSON raises a valid issue regarding the interpretation of section 663 of the Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform Act of 1996. Although I disagree with your statement that the statute is not clear on this point, I agree that USDA has incorrectly interpreted this section.

Section 663 clearly states that a complete application to acquire inventory property must have been submitted prior to the date of enactment of the FAIR Act. The issue is whether the property in question has already come into the Government's possession. Until that time, the property should not be deemed inventory property.

If a borrower had submitted an application that the Secretary would have deemed complete except that the steps necessary for the Government to acquire the property had not been fulfilled, those borrowers' applications should be considered complete so that once the property does enter the Government's inventory, the lease back-buyback agreement can be executed.

Mr. SIMPSON. Then you agree that borrowers who had completed applications for inventory property that had not yet been acquired by the Government should be grandfathered?

Mr. LUGAR. Yes.

Mr. SIMPSON. I thank my fine friend for his assistance in this matter.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 4981 AND 4982, EN BLOC

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following amendments be considered en bloc and agreed to en bloc:

The first is offered for the Senator from South Dakota [Mr. PRESSLER], dealing with electronic warehouse receipts.

The second is offered for the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. INHOFE], dealing with research facilities in Oklahoma of the Agriculture Research Service.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. COVERDELL). Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. COCHRAN] proposes amendments numbered 4981 and 4982, en bloc.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendments be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments are as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 4981

(Purpose: To improve the issuance of warehouse receipts)

At the end of the bill, add the following:

SEC. . WAREHOUSE RECEIPTS.

(a) ELECTRONIC WAREHOUSE RECEIPTS.—Section 17(c) of the United States Warehouse Act (7 U.S.C. 259(c)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)(A), by striking "cotton" and inserting "any agricultural product";

(2) by striking "the cotton" each place it appears and inserting "the agricultural product"; and

(3) in paragraph (2)—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking “in cotton” and inserting “in the agricultural product”; and

(B) in the last sentence of subparagraph (B)—

(i) by striking “electronic cotton” and inserting “electronic”; and

(ii) by striking “cotton stored in a cotton warehouse” and inserting “any agricultural product stored in a warehouse”.

(b) WRITTEN RECEIPTS.—Section 18(c) of the United States Warehouse Act (7 U.S.C. 260(c)) is amended by striking “consecutive”.

AMENDMENT NO. 4982

On page 11, line 22, add the following proviso after the word “law”: “: Provided further, That all rights and title of the United States in the property known as the National Agricultural Water Quality Laboratory of the USDA, consisting of approximately 9.161 acres in the city of Durant, Oklahoma, including facilities and fixed equipment, shall be conveyed to Southeastern Oklahoma State University.”

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, those amendments have been cleared on this side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendments are agreed to.

The amendments (Nos. 4981 and 4982) were agreed to, en bloc.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendments were agreed to.

Mr. BUMPERS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, it appears that Senators who were prepared to offer their amendments have come to the floor and offered and discussed the amendments that they have to this bill. We understand there are other amendments that Senators would like to offer to this bill.

I have a list, which I am prepared to read just for the information of all Senators. It is obvious we are not going to be able to complete action on this bill tonight. We do have amendments that votes have been ordered on that will occur tomorrow, and during the wrap-up tonight, an agreement will be proposed for an order in which those amendments will be taken up and voted on tomorrow.

Let me suggest, if Senators can still this evening come to the floor to offer their amendments, we are prepared to be here for that purpose.

We have this list:

Senator BURNS, an amendment on barley; Senator BROWN, an amendment on water rights; Senator SANTORUM, who has eight amendments on peanuts; Senator MIKULSKI, an amendment on the Food and Drug Administration; Senator LEAHY on milk orders; Senator CRAIG on GAO study on agriculture workers; Senator LUGAR on double cropping; Senator KERREY, which he has now offered, three amendments; Senator MURKOWSKI on seafood inspection; Senator KERREY, another amendment, which he has offered; Senator KENNEDY on Food and Drug Administration; Senator THURMOND on agriculture research; Senator FRAHM on section 515 rental housing program; Senator SIMPSON on wetland easements.

We know of no other amendments. We hope those will be the only amendments, and maybe if Senators will let us know about suggested changes, we may be able to work out accepting some of these amendments tonight or when we reconvene on this bill tomorrow.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, I think Senator PELL has a small amendment that he wants to offer that we probably should add to that list.

Mr. COCHRAN. OK.

Mr. President, we understand that it will be unlikely that we can get an agreement tonight to limit the amendments to those that I have just read. We had hoped to be able to get that agreement. We understand, if we propounded that request, there would be an objection. So we will not propound a unanimous-consent request, but we hope that will be all the amendments we will have to this bill, and we will take them up when Senators come to the floor to offer them. If they don't come to offer them tonight, we will be here tomorrow.

Mr. BUMPERS. Mr. President, to direct a question to the distinguished chairman and floor manager, as I understand it, we are going to have a whole slew of votes in the morning on the welfare bill, as many as 20. I was wondering if the chairman will be willing to make a unanimous-consent request that immediately following final passage of the welfare reform bill tomorrow that we proceed immediately, while the Senators are still here on the floor, to a vote on the Gregg amendment and the McCain amendment.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, that will be in the proposed request which the majority leader will propound. That is an excellent idea. We are going to try to include that in the request of the majority leader as we wind up business tonight.

I am told now the amendment of the Senator from Alaska, Senator MURKOWSKI, which we had tried to clear earlier, has now been cleared for adoption.

AMENDMENT NO. 4983

(Purpose: To reconcile seafood inspection requirements for agricultural commodity programs with those in use for general public consumers)

REPORT OF PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO FISCAL YEAR 1997 APPROPRIATIONS REQUESTS—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 162

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
Washington, July 22, 1996.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

SIR: I ask the Congress to consider amendments to the FY 1997 appropriations requests for the Department of Defense, the Department of the Treasury, the General Services Administration, and the Office of Personnel Management. These amendments would not increase the proposed budget totals.

The details of these actions are set forth in the enclosed letter from the Acting Director of the Office of Management and Budget. I concur with his comments and observations.

Sincerely,

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

REPORT CONCERNING THE NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO LIBYA—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—PM 163

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

To the Congress of the United States:

I hereby report to the Congress on the developments since my last report of January 22, 1996, concerning the national emergency with respect to Libya that was declared in Executive Order No. 12543 of January 7, 1986. This report is submitted pursuant to section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1641(c); section 204(c) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act ("IEEPA"), 50 U.S.C. 1703(c); and section 505(c) of the International Security and Development Cooperation Act of 1985, 22 U.S.C. 2349aa-9(c).

1. On January 3, 1996, I renewed for another year the national emergency with respect to Libya pursuant to IEEPA. This renewal extended the current comprehensive financial and trade embargo against Libya in effect since 1986. Under these sanctions, all trade with Libya is prohibited, and all assets owned or controlled by the Libyan government in the United States or in the possession or control of U.S. persons are blocked.

2. There have been no amendments to the Libyan Sanctions Regulations, 31 C.F.R. Part 550 (the "Regulations"), administered by the Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC) of the Department of the Treasury, since my last report on January 22, 1996.

3. During the current 6-month period, OFAC reviewed numerous applications for licenses to authorize transactions under the Regulations. Consistent with OFAC's ongoing scrutiny of banking transactions, the largest category of license approvals (91) concerned requests by non-Libyan persons or entities to unblock transfers interdicted because of what appeared to be Government of Libya interests. Three licenses were issued for the expenditure of funds and acquisition of goods and services in the United States by or on behalf of accredited persons and athletes of Libya in connection with participation in the 1996 Paralympic Games. One license was issued to authorize a U.S. company to initiate litigation against an entity of the Government of Libya.

4. During the current 6-month period, OFAC continued to emphasize to the international banking community in the United States the importance of identifying and blocking payments made by or on behalf of Libya. The Office worked closely with the banks to assure the effectiveness of interdiction software systems used to identify such payments. During the reporting period, more than 129 transactions potentially involving Libya were interdicted, with an additional $7 million held blocked as of May 15.

5. Since my last report, OFAC collected eight civil monetary penalties totaling more than $51,000 for violations of the U.S. sanctions against Libya. Two of the violations involved the failure of banks to block funds transfers to Libyan-owned or Libyan-controlled banks. Two other penalties were received from corporations for export violations, including one received as part of a plea agreement before a U.S. district judge. Four additional penalties were paid by U.S. citizens engaging in Libyan oilfield-related transactions while another 30 cases involving similar violations are in active penalty processing.

On February 6, 1996, a jury sitting in the District of Connecticut found two Connecticut businessmen guilty on charges of false statements, conspiracy, and illegally diverting U.S.-origin technology to Libya between 1987 and 1993 in violation of U.S. sanctions. On May 22, 1996, a major manufacturer of farm and construction equipment entered a guilty plea in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Wisconsin for Libyan sanctions violations. A three-count information charged the company with aiding and abetting the sale of construction equipment and parts from a foreign affiliate to Libya. The company paid $1,810,000 in criminal fines and $190,000 in civil penalties. Numerous investigations carried over from prior reporting periods are continuing and new reports of violations are being pursued.

6. The expenses incurred by the Federal Government in the 6-month period from January 6 through July 6, 1996, that are directly attributable to the exercise of powers and authorities conferred by the declaration of the Libyan national emergency are estimated at approximately $733,000. Personnel costs were largely centered in the Department of the Treasury (particularly in the Office of Foreign Assets Control, the Office of the General Counsel, and the U.S. Customs Service), the Department of State, and the Department of Commerce.

7. The policies and actions of the Government of Libya continue to pose an unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security and foreign policy of the United States. In adopting United Nations Security Council Resolution 883 in November 1993, the Security Council determined that the continued failure of the Government of Libya to demonstrate by concrete actions its renunciation of terrorism, and in particular its continued failure to respond fully and effectively to the requests and decisions of the Security Council in Resolutions 731 and 748, concerning the bombing of the Pan Am 103 and UTA 772 flights, constituted a threat to international peace and security. The United States will continue to coordinate its comprehensive sanctions enforcement efforts with those of other U.N. member states. We remain determined to ensure that the perpetrators of the terrorist acts against Pan Am 103 and UTA 772 are brought to justice. The families of the victims in the murderous Lockerbie bombing and other acts of Libyan terrorism deserve nothing less. I shall continue to exercise the powers at my disposal to apply economic sanctions against Libya fully and effectively, so long as those measures are appropriate, and will continue to report periodically to the Congress on significant developments as required by law.

THE WHITE HOUSE, July 22, 1996.

THE END THE TRADE DEFICIT ACT

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I am pleased today to come to the floor with my colleague and friend, Senator BYRD from West Virginia, to introduce a piece of legislation that we feel is important and timely. It is a piece of legislation that we have discussed for many months and are now prepared to introduce in the hope that we would be able to do the things necessary to allow it to become law between now and the end of this legislative session.

Simply put, this piece of legislation deals with a deficit. There has been a great deal of discussion in the Congress in recent years about deficits, almost all of it dealing with the question of budget deficits. Those deficits are a problem and have been a problem, and we have tried in a number of ways, both on the Democratic side and on the Republican side, in different kinds of approaches, to bring down the budget deficit.

I am pleased to say a substantial amount has been accomplished. The budget deficit has been reduced almost in half in the last 3 to 4 years. The budget deficit is down and is coming down. In fact, a report just last week by the Congressional Budget Office was an extraordinarily optimistic report about further reductions in the budget deficit.

However, there is another deficit that almost no one speaks about. It is called the merchandise trade deficit, and it is growing and getting larger. We are going to introduce a piece of legislation today that establishes a commission. It asks that an emergency commission to end the trade deficit be impaneled to review economic and trade policies, tax and investment laws and other incentive and restrictions that affect trade, with the hope that recommendations can be made that Congress will be able to embrace to not only reduce this trade deficit but also to end the trade deficit.

I will offer a couple of charts to show my colleagues what has happened with respect to the trade deficit. We have had 20 consecutive years of trade deficits, totaling $1.8 trillion. Last year, we had the largest negative trade balance in history. This chart shows, and the red demonstrates, the merchandise trade deficit.

These are troublesome because trade deficits must be repaid with a lower standard of living in the United States. You can make a more direct case on national budget deficits. That is money people owe to themselves, and except for the maldistribution of the debt, it is not such a big deal. I do not make that case on the trade deficit, but some economists might. Nobody can make a case with respect to the trade deficit, except this: Trade deficits must be and will be repaid by a lower standard of living in this country. And they must be repaid someday.

This chart shows what has happened to the trade deficits. There has been very little discussion in the Congress about what is causing the trade deficit, in what direction it is headed, and how to begin to develop some policies to address it.

The trade deficit also represents some other underlying problems. These deficits mean that we are buying more from abroad than we are selling to other countries. It means that jobs that normally would have been created in our country are created elsewhere. It means jobs are moving from our country to foreign countries. Less opportunity here, more opportunity abroad.

When you see these kinds of policies that inherently weaken our manufacturing base and sap our economic strength, you have to be prepared to say that this is a serious problem for this country. We must address it. Just as we have been addressing the other deficit, the budget deficit, so, too, we must address this issue of 20 years of growing merchandise trade deficits.

The next chart is a chart that shows that projections by econometric firms and forecasting firms tell us that the trend line by Data Resources indicates that the merchandise trade deficit will reach over $330 billion by the year 2006, 10 years from now. Wharton Econometrics projects a doubling of the trade deficit by the year 2010.

These are the forecasting groups who say, "Here is what we think will happen to the merchandise trade deficit." They see a doubling of the trade deficit. This is Data Resources: $331 billion by the year 2006. Clearly, that is a course that this country should not accept. Clearly, we ought to do something about it.

The next chart. The United States, in a very few short years, has moved from being in the position of the world's largest creditor Nation to being the world's largest debtor Nation. That has happened in a very short period of time. This is an astounding change in our country's economic position.

Now, think of this as a neighborhood, and you look at one house over near a driveway with very nice shutters, a manicured lawn, a pretty home, with five or six cars sitting outside in the driveway. You think to yourself, gee, that person is really doing well—except the person is very close to going under, because it is all borrowed money. That is what is happening with our merchandise trade deficit, and why we are going from the largest creditor Nation in the world to being the largest debtor Nation in the world.

The next chart I want to show describes our trade deficit by country. You will see the largest trade deficit, by far, is with Japan. We have had this for a long while. It is continuing and abiding and does not seem to change. It was nearly $60 billion last year. China was $34 billion. Canada and Mexico together were about $33 billion. A very substantial problem. Six countries make up 94 percent of our country's trade deficit.

Now, part of the problem is that these countries have not completely opened up their borders to our goods. Yet, they ship their goods to our country in wholesale quantities. When we want to move goods into their countries, we are told that we are doing better. But we are not doing good enough because our manufacturers, businesses, and workers cannot get our products into those countries on nearly the same basis as they move their products into our country.

One common myth with respect to this trade issue is that what we are importing into this country is really the product of cheap labor, and that low-skill, cheap labor products are being sent into this country. Not true. Not true at all. Seventy-five percent of what the U.S. imports are high-tech and value-added manufactured goods: Automobiles, automobile parts, electronics, office machines, telecommunications. That is what is coming into our country. It is not trinkets produced with low-wage labor. Rather, it is high-tech, value-added manufactured goods.

I want to show one additional chart that describes that in the past 25 years the imports of manufactured goods into our country has risen and risen and risen. Today it is at the point where imports now equal 56 percent of our manufacturing capacity. That means imports today are equal to over one-half of our domestic manufacturing capacity.

No wonder the purchasing power of hourly and weekly wages in this country for the vast majority of working Americans are back down to levels, in some cases, in constant dollars, to the 1950's and 1960's. That kind of downward pressure means fewer jobs in this country, and the jobs that exist in the manufacturing sector pay less and have less security.

Now, if you take this trade deficit and calculate it with respect to the common calculations about jobs, they talk about 20,000 jobs per $1 billion in exports. If we export $1 billion worth of American goods, they say that means we created 20,000 additional jobs. If you would use the same formula, it should be equally true that, for $1 billion worth of imports, someone else had the 20,000 jobs and we did not. That means that last year's trade deficit represents a loss of somewhere around 3.5 million good jobs. Just the increase in that trade deficit from 1994 to 1995 would mean a loss of 166,000 jobs.

What we propose today—Senator BYRD and myself, and, hopefully, others who will join us—would be an emergency commission to end the trade deficit. We would propose that this commission review five broad areas of trade policy concerns: The manner in which the Government establishes and administers our fundamental trade policies and objectives, No. 1; No. 2, the causes and consequences of the persistence and the growth of the overall trade deficit, as well as the bilateral trade deficits; No. 3, the relationship of U.S. trade deficits to the competitive and comparative advantages within the global economy; No. 4, the relationship between the growth of direct investment both into and out of the United States and the trade deficit; finally, No. 5, the development of policies and alternative strategies to achieve a systematic reduction of the trade deficit and, hopefully, an end to the trade deficit.

This would be an 11-member commission. It would have 16 months to present its report to Congress and the President. We do this today because we think it is time—probably past the time—to be thinking of what these trade deficits and what the projections of where the trade deficits are going to go will mean to this country.

As I conclude, Mr. President, I want to make a point. I am honored to have Senator BYRD join me in this endeavor, and I hope very much that, by the end of this year, this will be law and we will have a commission to evaluate this and make recommendations to the Congress.

The minute someone comes to the floor of the Senate and begins talking about trade and talking about trade deficits, two things happen: One, people start to yawn. They say, "Well, this is so boring. It is uninteresting." They do not want to talk about it. Or, two, they immediately rise on their haunches, and say, "Well, what you are is someone who wants to close America's borders; you are some kind of an isolationist; a xenophobic stooge who doesn't understand the complexities of international trade."

I do not want to close America's borders. I want more trade—not less trade. I want expanded opportunity for American products and workers. But I want to finally make sure that we reduce and finally eliminate the trade deficit, and have some balance in trade by deciding that it is important that America shall not be taken advantage of in international trade.

For 50 years our trade policy was our foreign policy. And we would do this and that and the other thing to help various countries as a matter of foreign policy. Let's look at the first 25 of those 50 years. Let's look at income in this country for workers. After all, that is what really matters. At the end of the day have we increased the standard of living for the American worker and the American family. If you look at the first 25 of those 50 years their incomes went steadily upward because we had a trade policy that was really just foreign policy and we still beat everybody else in the world with one hand tied behind our back. In the first 25 years, incomes went steadily upward with an increasing standard of living. What about the second 25 years. Look at the graph. What you will see is a steady diminution of income and security for American workers.

Often people sit around their supper table talking about their lot in life. They are working harder and working more hours. More people in the family are working. And, adjusted for inflation, they are making the same or less than they were 20 years ago.

The fact is we must do something to try to strengthen and maintain a strong manufacturing base in this country. And the circumstances that relate to this chronic and growing trade deficit tend to undermine America's manufacturing capability. No country—none—will ever remain a world economic power unless it retains its manufacturing base. That is what is slowly eroding and being washed away by these chronic, troublesome trade deficits.

Senator BYRD and I do not propose solutions or strategies that would have us withdraw from the global economy, or have us retreat from the world trade system. But we do insist it is in this country's best interest to achieve a balance of trade and to end these chronic trade deficits that injure our country's well-being and lead to a decreased standard of living in America.

Mr. President, the future of our Nation is being undermined by a problem that simply is not getting adequate attention or concern. There are those who do not even acknowledge that it is a problem, despite the fact it has reached record proportions.

Our Nation's trade deficit is one of the twin deficits that this country must address. Today the trade deficit is the larger twin, yet most of our attention is still focused on the Federal budget deficit. We need to solve these twin deficit problems, because together and individually they are threatening the economic security of Americans.

Today I am introducing legislation to address this crucial problem. The End the Trade Deficit Act will establish a commission to develop plans to end the trade deficit in the next 10 years, and establish a competitive trade policy for the 21st century which will not only increase production and manufacturing in our country, but also job opportunities, and wages.

Just as balancing the budget has come to represent the need to take a more disciplined approach to deciding our national priorities, our goal in ending the trade deficit must be to develop a more disciplined approach in deciding and carrying out our Nation's trade policies.

Our trade deficit is symptomatic of larger economic conditions and questions that must be addressed. My purpose in this legislation is not simply to get rid of the red figures at the bottom of our trade ledger. Instead, it is to help develop the national economic and trade strategies which will rebuild the American economy and the American dream.

GROWTH OF TRADE DEFICIT

Many economists predicted that our trade deficit would disappear as we reduced our Nation's budget deficit. That is not what is happening. The fact is that in the past few years we are bringing down our budget deficit. Yet, we have recorded back to back record merchandise trade deficits during the past 2 years. Our budget deficit is going down while our trade deficit continues to grow.

Last year, the United States experienced its 20th consecutive annual merchandise trade deficit. During these past two decades we have piled up a total merchandise trade deficit of $1.8 trillion.

The trend line in the growth of this deficit should be of great concern to the American people. Last year we had the largest negative merchandise trade balance in the history of the United States. The $175 billion merchandise trade deficit was larger than the $164 billion federal budget deficit.

An econometric forecasting firm, Data Resources, Inc., is projecting that our Nation's merchandise trade deficit will continue to grow reaching new records in the next few years. Based on long-term trends, Data Resources is forecasting that the merchandise trade deficit can be expected to almost double during the next 10 years to $331 billion. Wharton Econometrics is forecasting that the U.S. merchandise trade deficit will double by the year 2010.

As a result of our twin deficits, the United States has shifted from being the world's largest creditor nation to the world's largest debtor nation. Our country has gone from a net creditor position of over $250 billion in the early 1980's to a net debtor position of over three-quarters of a trillion dollars by the mid-1990's. The positive net international asset position that we had built up over the past 100 years was eliminated in a short 6-year period during the 1980's.

We used to earn $30 billion annually on our international assets. Now we are paying something in the neighborhood of $11 billion to service this international debt.

IMPORTANCE OF TRADE DEFICIT

The persistence and growth of our trade deficit is not just a concern of academics and ivory tower economists. It is a question of fair trade and fair competition. It is an issue of American jobs and the purchasing power of American wage earners. It is a matter of what opportunities we will have for our future.

Today the bulk of the products that we import are not labor-intensive goods. Instead our merchandise trade deficit consists primarily of high-technology, manufactured items. Autos, office equipment, electronic goods, and telecommunications equipment make up three-fourths of the imports.

Imports of manufactured goods have increased from 11 percent of the total U.S. manufacturing gross product to over 50 percent. This means that rather than expanding our own manufacturing base in this country, we are importing more of our manufactured goods from abroad. It means that we are shipping jobs overseas.

The bottom line is that we are shifting from a manufacturing, production-based economy with high wages, to a service-based economy with low wages. No wonder the purchasing power of hourly and weekly wages of the vast majority of working Americans are back down to levels we haven't seen since the 1950's and 1960's.

Together with the record merchandise trade deficit this past year, the value of the U.S. dollar fell to its weakest level in history. Yet, despite the weakening dollar, our trade deficit has continued to mount.

Neither the American consumer nor the American economy is making any long-term gains by the continuing trade deficit and the devaluation of the dollar. Instead, they represent an erosion of both our sovereignty and our economy.

CAUSES OF TRADE DEFICITS

Our merchandise trade deficit is a result of a serious trade imbalances with a handful of countries. Six countries comprise 94 percent of the U.S. merchandise trade deficit. This includes Japan, China, Canada, Mexico, Germany, and Taiwan. Over one-half this trade deficit is with only two countries: Japan and China.

Our trade relationships are most accurately described as unilateral free trade. As a nation we have opened our borders wide open to almost anything and everything that can be produced anywhere. Unfortunately we pay little attention to the conditions under which these goods have been produced or if the competition is fair.

At the same while the United States has one of the most open borders and open economies in the world, this Nation faces significant barriers in shipping American goods abroad. As a result, these negative trade balances do not reflect the actual competitiveness or the productivity of the American economy. Yet, there is no question that we are one of the most competitive economies in the world.

Instead most of our bilateral trade deficits effectively illustrate the barriers that continue to exist despite hundreds of new trade agreements in recent years. As documented annually in the reports of the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative reciprocal market access remains an elusive goal.

ENDING THE TRADE DEFICIT

As a nation we need to bring the same attention and the same commitment to working on the trade deficit that we are giving to reducing our budget deficit.

It has been a quarter of a century since the last comprehensive review of national trade and investment policies was conducted by a Presidential commission. In these past 25 years we have had only 3 years in which the United States has had trade surpluses.

We have witnessed massive worldwide economic and political changes in the past 25 years. These changes have profoundly affected world trading relationships.

The cold war has ended. It is no longer necessary or even prudent for U.S. trade policy to take a back seat to our foreign policy objectives.

Regional trade relationships including the European Union and the North American Free Trade Agreement are redefining political, economic, and trading geography. The Uruguay round of negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade has resulted in the creation of the World Trade Organization.

Globalization is part and parcel of the increased mobility of capital and technology that is reshaping comparative and competitive advantages among nations of the world.

While other nations and many multinational companies are enjoying the fruits of globalization, the United States is not realizing the full opportunities or benefits of its competitive capacity and productivity.

Unilateral free trade no longer serves the interests of the American people, if it ever did. We need fair rules and reciprocal market access if our competitive economy is to thrive within a global system. I am not calling for trade restrictions. Rather I am calling for expanded trade, but with rules that are fair.

EMERGENCY COMMISSION

The United States is once again at a critical juncture in trade policy development. The persistence and growth of the trade deficit must be reversed. We must identify the causes and consequences of our trade deficit.

Rather than allowing our trade deficit to double during the next 10 years, we need to develop a plan which would end the trade deficit in that time period. That is why I am introducing a bill with Senator BYRD today to establish an Emergency Commission To End the Trade Deficit.

The purpose of this Commission is to develop a comprehensive trade strategy to eliminate the merchandise trade deficit by the year 2006 and to develop a competitive trade policy for the 21st century.

The bill directs the Commission to develop the necessary strategies to achieve a trade balance that fully reflects the competitiveness and productivity of the U.S. economy while improving the standard of living for the people of this country.

It would require the Commission to examine our national economic policies, trade laws, tax laws, investment policies, and all the other legal incentives and restrictions that are relevant to the trading position of this country.

The Commission would look at five broad areas:

First, the manner in which the Government of the United States establishes and administers the Nation's fundamental trade policies and objectives.

Second, the causes and consequences of the persistence and growth of the overall trade deficit, as well as our bilateral trade deficits.

Third, the relationship of U.S. trade deficits to the competitive and comparative advantages within the global economy.

Fourth, the relationship between investment flows, both into and out of the United States, and the trade deficit.

Fifth, the identification and evaluation of policies and alternative strategies by which the United States can achieve the systematic reduction of the trade deficit and the improvement of the economic well being of its people.

This Commission would consist of a blue-ribbon panel of leaders from a broad spectrum of the economic life of our Nation. The members would be appointed by the President and the leadership of Congress. They would be given the responsibility to study the situation, gather necessary data, conduct at least seven public hearings, and evaluate strategies to end the trade deficit.

The Commission would be required to present its final report not later than 16 months following the enactment of this bill. The final report would outline its findings and conclusions, and provide a detailed plan for reducing our Nation's trade deficits together with recommendations on administrative and legislative actions that may be required to achieve that goal.

The Commission's report would be submitted to the President and the Congress for review, consideration, and implementation. To facilitate the Commission's report through Congress, this bill would have the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee conduct hearings on the report within 6 months after it is submitted to Congress.

TIME FOR CHANGE

Today it is apparent that we do not have a consensus about where we should go with our national trade policies. We are not even sure whether we have the necessary tools to effectively achieve our trade goals.

Most importantly, we do not have a good set of alternatives and strategies to place before the American people so that they can effectively participate in making the decisions that are shaping their future.

It is time to develop a new trade strategy for the twenty-first century. We can get started on this path by making our first goal to end the trade deficit. Once we have set that goal, then we need the strategies to get there. That is why I believe it is time for such a commission.

I am pleased that Senator ROBERT BYRD is cosponsoring this legislation. I hope others will join us in this effort and look forward to working with them in moving forward on this critically important agenda for our future.

Mr. President, let me now yield the floor. The Senator from West Virginia under the unanimous-consent agreement would also like to address the piece of legislation that we will introduce in the Senate today.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, how much of the 30 minutes are remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 18 minutes remaining.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that should I need an additional 5 minutes under the same terms and conditions that I be allowed to have that time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I am pleased to join with the very distinguished Senator from North Dakota in introducing an ambitious new effort on the matter of our nation's persistent and growing trade deficit. This legislation—as the distinguished Senator has already explained—would establish a Commission to take a broad, thorough look at all important aspects of trends involving, and solutions to, the growing U.S. trade deficit, with particular attention to the manufacturing sector.

The trade deficit, as my colleagues know, is a recent phenomenon, with large annual deficits only occurring within the last 15 years, or so, as my colleague has explained. Between 1970 and 1995, the U.S. merchandise trade balance shifted from a surplus of $3.2 billion to a deficit of $159.6 billion. It did not reach sizeable levels until it jumped up to $52 billion in 1983. As my colleague has suggested, projections by econometric forecasting firms indicate long term trends will bring this figure to $300 billion or more within the next 10 years. No one is predicting a decline in the near future. And this is bad news. Thus, unless we act, our trade deficit will soon exceed our annual appropriations for the Department of Defense.

This legislation is committed to a goal of reversing that 10-year trend. The goal of the commission is to “develop a national economic plan to systematically reduce the U.S. trade deficit and to achieve a merchandise trade balance by the year 2006.”

While it is not clear what the particular reasons for this growing trade deficit may be, nor what the long term impacts of a persistently growing deficit may be, the time is overdue for a detailed examination of the factors causing the deficit. We need to understand the impacts of it on specific industrial and manufacturing sectors. Furthermore, we need to identify the gaps that exist in our data bases and economic measurements to adequately understand the specific nature of the impacts of the deficit on such important things as our manufacturing capacity and the integrity of our industrial base, on productivity, jobs and wages in specific sectors.

We debate the trade deficits frequently. Both Senator DORGAN and I have participated in these debates. I voted against NAFTA. I voted against GATT, and for good reasons which are becoming clearer.

So we debate these deficits frequently. We moan about them. We groan about them. We complain about them. But if we do not understand the nature, impacts and long term vulnerabilities that such manufacturing imbalances create in our economy and standard of living, we are in the dark. It appears to me that debate over trade matters too often takes on the form of lofty rhetorical bombast of so-called “protectionists” versus so-called “free traders.” But I would suggest that neither side knows enough about what is really transpiring in our economy, given the very recent nature of these annual persistent deficits.

Certainly we know that the deficit reflects on the ability of American business to compete abroad. We want to be competitive. Certainly we know that specific deficits with specific trading partners causes frictions between the United States and those friends and allies. This is particularly the case with Japanese, as we are well aware, and is becoming quickly the case with China. It is clear that the trade deficit has contributed to the depreciation of the dollar and the ability of Americans to afford foreign products and American products as well. Less clear, but of vital importance, is the relationship of the trade deficit to other important policy questions on the table between the United States and our foreign trading partners. Attempts by the United States to reduce tariff and non-tariff barriers in the Japan and China markets, which clearly restrict access of U.S. goods to those markets, have been crippled by the intervention of other, more important policy goals.

During the cold war, the U.S.-Japan security relationship had a severe dampening effect on our efforts to reduce the myriad barriers in Japan to U.S. exports. The same effect appears to have resulted from our need for the Japanese to participate in our treasury bill auctions. This becomes a closed cycle—the need to finance the trade deficit with foreign capital, resulting in regular involvement of the Japanese government in our treasury bill auctions, seems to dampen our efforts to push the Japanese on market opening arrangements. Naturally, without reciprocal open markets, the trade imbalance remains exaggerated between the U.S. and Japan, prompting further need for Japanese financial support to fund our national debt. Thus, some argue that the need for Japanese involvement in financing our national debt hurts the ability of our trade negotiators to get stronger provisions in the dispute settled last year over the Japanese market for auto parts.

Similar considerations appear to prevail in negotiating market access with the Chinese in the area of Intellectual Property rights. While our Trade Negotiator managed a laudable, very specific agreement with the Chinese last year in this area, the Chinese were derelict in implementing it, leading to another high-wire negotiation this year to avoid $2 billion of trade sanctions on the Chinese, and to get the Chinese to implement the accord as they had promised. Again, it is unclear whether the Chinese will now follow through in a consistent manner with the implementing mechanisms for the Intellectual Property agreement belatedly agreed to in the latest negotiation. Intellectual Property is an area of great potential for U.S. exports to China. The Chinese have promised major action against piracy of CD's, movies, and other products, and to permit co-production of audiovisual products and joint ventures regarding artists. This is a major test case of our ability to obtain appropriate access to the great Chinese market. We need to monitor it carefully. The highly trumpeted mantra about how the U.S.-China relationship will be one of the most important, if not the most important, U.S. bilateral relationship for the next half century, has a chilling effect on insisting on fair, reciprocal treatment, and good faith implementation of agreements signed with the Chinese government.

It will only be when we truly understand the specific impacts of this large deficit on our economy, particularly our industrial and manufacturing base, that the importance of insisting on fair play on the trade account will become clear.

Finally, the legislation being introduced by the distinguished Senator from North Dakota, [Mr. DORGAN], requires the Commission to examine alternative strategies which we can pursue to achieve the systematic reduction of the deficit, particularly how to retard the migration of our manufacturing base abroad, and the changes that might be needed to our basic trade agreements and practices.

These are the purposes of the Commission that Senator DORGAN and I are proposing in this legislation. And I join with him in welcoming other Senators to cosponsor this legislation.

We can either continue to blunder along without a clear sense of the importance of the U.S. manufacturing base or of how to protect and enlarge upon that base or we can begin now to gather the data that will lead us in the right direction for the future of U.S. trade policy.

In other words, we can put up the right fences now or deal with a very sick economy and an ever-spiraling trade deficit which may take our economy right over a very dangerous cliff in the years ahead.

Mr. President, there is an old poem that was written by Joseph Malins many years ago which I think aptly describes the situation we are in.

FENCE OR AN AMBULANCE

"Twas a dangerous cliff, as they freely confessed,
Though to walk near its crest was so pleasant;
But over its terrible edge there had slipped
A duke and full many a peasant.
So the people said something would have to be done,
But their projects did not at all tally;
Some said, "Put a fence around the edge of the cliff."
Some, "An ambulance down in the valley."
But the cry for the ambulance carried the day,
For it spread through the neighboring city;
A fence may be useful or not, it is true,
But each heart became brimful of pity
For those who slipped over that dangerous cliff;
And the dwellers in highway and alley
Gave pounds or gave pence, not to put up a fence,
But an ambulance down in the valley.
"For the cliff is all right, if you're careful," they said,

"And, if folks even slip and are dropping,
It isn't the slipping that hurts them so much,

As the shock down below when they're stopping."

So day after day, as these mishaps occurred,
Quick forth would these rescuers sally
To pick up the victims who fell off the cliff,
With their ambulance down in the valley.
Then an old sage remarked: "It's a marvel to me

That people give far more attention
To repairing results than to stopping the cause,

When they'd much better aim at prevention.
Let us stop at its source all this mischief," cried he,

"Come, neighbors and friends, let us rally;
If the cliff we will fence we might almost dispense

With the ambulance down in the valley."

"Oh, he's a fanatic," the others rejoined,
"Dispense with the ambulance? Never!
He'd dispense with all charities, too, if he could;

No! No! We'll support them forever.
Aren't we picking up folks just as fast as they fall?

And shall this man dictate to us? Shall he?
Why should people of sense stop to put up a fence,

While the ambulance works in the valley?"

But a sensible few, who are practical too,
Will not bear with such nonsense much longer;

They believe that prevention is better than cure,
And their party will soon be the stronger.
Encourage them then, with your purse,
voice, and pen,

And while other philanthropists dally,
They will scorn all pretense and put up a stout fence
On the cliff that hangs over the valley.
Better guide well the young than reclaim them when old,

For the voice of true wisdom is calling,
"To rescue the fallen is good, but 'tis best
To prevent other people from falling."

Better close up the source of temptation and crime
Than deliver from dungeon or galley;
Better put a strong fence round the top of the cliff
Than an ambulance down in the valley.

I commend the Senator from North Dakota for his studious approach to this question and for choosing the route of prevention over the ambulance down in the valley. I am pleased to join him in offering this proposal for the consideration of the Senate, and I hope that many of our colleagues will join us, and that we can secure passage of the proposal before the 104th Congress adjourns sine die this fall.

Mr. President, I thank my colleague for his courtesy in allowing me to join in cosponsoring this very important legislation. I thank him for his courtesy in securing the time on this day and for his yielding to me that I might add to the record. I yield the floor.

I yield back such time as I may have.

By Mr. JEFFORDS:

S. 1979. A bill to amend the Social Security Act to help disabled individuals become economically self-sufficient and eligible for health care coverage through work incentives and a medicare buy-in program, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE WORK INCENTIVE AND SELF-SUFFICIENCY

• Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I introduce the Work Incentive and Self-Sufficiency Act of 1996. I believe that few people are returning to work after becoming eligible for Social Security disability income [SSDI] not because they can no longer find gainful employment, but because of a greater systemic problem we face as a nation. What I am referring to is this country's current schizophrenic national disability policy.

The laudable policy we set forth in the Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990 [ADA] which requires that resources be provided to promote functioning and work for people with disabilities, as well as, income support for those who cannot work or whose ability to work is very limited, are not well integrated into our current SSDI and SSI programs. This is a very complex problem that we must deal with if we ever expect to get our Federal deficit under control.

I remember when we reported the ADA out of the Labor and Human Resources Committee, the committee made explicit that the goals of this law were to provide people with disabilities with: equality of opportunity, full participation, independent living, and economic self-sufficiency. Disability is not just a characteristic of individuals, but is a description of how well someone is able to fit into our society which includes his or her capacity to work. To provide for a clear and consistent national disability policy we must make sure that the incentives, and goals of our public programs, SSDI, SSI, Medicare, and Medicaid work in conjunction with the private sector.

Many disabled individuals would like to return to work, but they are heavily penalized for their efforts to do so. For example, some courts have determined that if a person qualifies for SSDI, but then wants to try to go back to work and can't find a job, they have no cause of action under the ADA. I believe that the greatest disincentive for disabled individuals to return to work is the fear of losing their health care coverage. These individuals literally may not survive without health care coverage. Their condition often requires immediate utilization of health services and they cannot go, for, even for a short period of time, without the security of knowing they have guaranteed health coverage. It is understandable that they would prefer not to work if it will jeopardize this lifeline.

Also in the labor market, despite the ADA, there is a disincentive to hire or maintain the disabled employee. The disabled employee will likely have a chronic high cost illness and if the employer offered a health plan they would be covered under this plan. It is important to keep in mind that all employer group health plans, both insured and self-insured, are covered under ERISA.

Under ERISA, the employer currently has substantial flexibility in not only the benefits it chooses to cover, but also the types of plan design features it uses. Some employers have used plan design features which will carve out any high cost individual from coverage under the employee benefit health plan.

With no where else to turn, disabled individuals once again become dependent upon public sector health care plans. This cost-shift from the employer health plans to the public health plans was the main argument I made during debate on the Health Insurance Reform Act when I brought my amendment on the lifetime caps to the floor. Employers, by limiting the maximum benefits they will pay for employees in a lifetime, actually set the point where their costs will end and Government expenditures begin. In the private market, health plans usually decide how much risk they will assume and then they reinsure the rest. In this case, the private market uses the Government-run health plans as the reinsurer of last resort.

According to previous testimony by the General Accounting Office [GAO] no more than 1 of every 1,000 SSI and DI leave the rolls for work as a result of the Social Security Administration's assistance. These programs need to place a greater focus on the rule the employer can play in getting people rehabilitated and back to work. Once an individual becomes disabled the link with their current employer is disrupted and often terminated. If there were incentives, particularly early in the process, for the employer to remain involved the chances of returning to work would go up markedly.

The employer could focus on accommodating a valuable employee rather than on replacing him. Employers could assist their workers in getting assessed for rehabilitation services immediately instead of waiting for the SSI or SSDI programs to first complete the application process and then making a referral for such services. If the employer were to keep in closer contact it would have better opportunity to prepare for any unique assistance the individual might ultimately need like a personal assistant or other assistance technology.

The Work Incentive and Self-Sufficiency Act of 1996, is designed to address two significant problems in the Social Security Disability Income [SSDI] Program: If individuals with significant disabilities cannot keep their health coverage when they return to work, and if that work does not leave them financially better off, they cannot afford to go back and work, and leave the cash assistance they receive under SSDI or SSI. It is not only the cash assistance they receive from benefits that is critical, it is the health coverage they obtain through becoming Medicare eligible.

some who were in the work force longer at higher earnings receive more while many others receive less. At the current minimum wage of $4.25 per hour, a person working full time—176 hours per month, or 8 hours per day for a standard 22 days—will earn $748. This is not much money, but if you assume a slightly better than minimum wage or some overtime at 1.5 times regular wages, then take home pay from work replaces the cash assistance that is lost.

However, that cash assistance brings with it several noncash supports. The most well-known of these is health coverage, which comes through Medicare for SSDI beneficiaries and through Medicaid for SSI recipients. Other noncash supports include long-term supports under Medicaid, vocational rehab, or other programs, food stamps, rental assistance, home heating assistance, and a variety of discounts and reduced fares on public services, among other supports. The cost of replacing these noncash benefits for individuals with significant disabilities is often double or even triple the value of the cash assistance that is lost.

The major assumptions are that individuals with significant disabilities can qualify for health coverage, much less afford to pay for it themselves, and private providers for long term supports can be located and afforded. The reality is that individuals with disabilities are often not able to locate health coverage that meets their needs, or if they can find coverage, it comes with either high deductibles and premiums, services exclusions, preexisting conditions limits, and/or yearly or lifetime caps on benefits.

The same is true for the long term supports required by some individuals with significant disabilities such as quadriplegia or cerebral palsy. Many individuals with disabilities can work if they have the assistance of another person to perform activities of daily living that are required to prepare for work such as bathing, dressing, eating, transferring from bed to chair or using the bathroom. The difficulty is not with necessarily with working, but with locating and paying the support workers needed to prepare for and to perform work.

Currently, when an SSDI beneficiary earns $500 monthly, that person demonstrates the capacity to work at the substantial gainful activity [SGA] level. If this work is sustained for 9 consecutive months, the individual no longer meets the first criteria for work disability eligibility: the incapacity to perform substantial gainful work in the national economy. Thus, proceedings are begun to end cash assistance. But, since take home pay equals or exceeds cash assistance, there is no problem.

Or is there? One month individuals with significant disabilities are earning $748 from wages, less taxes, $630 from cash assistance, and receiving noncash benefits ranging in value from $1,200 to $1,800. The next month these individuals with significant disabilities are earning $748 from wages, less taxes, and from this amount now are expected to purchase up to $1,800 in medical coverage, long term supports, food, rent, and other necessities. It does not require sophisticated cost/benefit calculations here to draw the conclusion that individuals with significant disabilities are being punished if they attempt to work.

There are some basic solutions to this problem. First, continue health coverage for those who are on SSDI after they return to work. Second, make work pay by allowing low income former SSDI beneficiaries to receive benefits that gradually reduce as their take home pay increases. The Work Incentive and Self-Sufficiency Act of 1996 is designed to implement both of these solutions. First, it allows SSDI beneficiaries to keep their Medicare coverage if they return to work. If they take a job that does not offer health coverage, Medicare remains their primary insurance. If they find a position that does offer health insurance, they have the option to purchase Medicare coverage to use as supplementary coverage. Working beneficiaries would purchase this coverage on their own through premiums that rise on a sliding scale.

Second, it allows SSDI beneficiaries to keep part of their cash assistance after they return to work. Rather than losing the entire amount once they earn $500 a month, they would lose $1 of cash benefits for every $2 in wages they earn that is above $500 a month. This is similar to, but not the same as, the rule that allows individuals over 65 who are retired on Social Security to earn wages and continue to receive retirement income and Medicare.

Third, it allows some individuals to apply only for Medicare coverage but not cash assistance. This would offer some workers who acquire a disability during their working years the option to purchase Medicare coverage and continue working. The Medicare coverage could be either their primary or supplemental coverage.

At this point some will ask, "Won't that increase already rising costs of benefits?" Actually, no. Extending health coverage to those who return to work will not increase costs essentially because so few people are leaving the disability program for work. In fact, enabling people who were former beneficiaries or recipients to keep this health coverage would lead to some of them eventually being covered by private health insurance, thus reducing costs. It will also lead to a reduction in the amount of SSDI and SSI cash assistance paid as reentering workers replace benefits with wages, and pay taxes on those wages.

Employers would not be required to purchase any additional insurance or to report any additional information to the Government. Individuals with disabilities would assume the responsibility to exercise the option to purchase

Medicare and pay the Medicare premiums. Considering the very important role employers have in assuring our Nation's policy goal to self-sufficiency for individuals with disabilities I am especially pleased to have a letter from Michael R. Losey, president and CEO of the Society for Human Resource Management [SHRM]. SHRM is and I quote, "fascinated by your proposal that would provide employment incentives to individuals with disabilities * * * SHRM looks forward to working with you and your staff to promote employment and reemployment incentives for those with disabilities." I would also like to thank both Fred Grandy, president and CEO of Goodwill Industries International, Inc., and the Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities Task Force on Social Security, especially the cochairs, Tony Young, Marty Ford and Rhonda Schulzinger, for their letters of support for this bill. Mr. President, I asked unanimous consent that these three letters be inserted into the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SOCIETY FOR HUMAN RESOURCE MANAGEMENT,

DEAR SENATOR JEFFORDS: On behalf of the Society for Human Resource Management (SHRM), I am writing to commend you for your efforts to address the employment and reemployment needs of individuals with disabilities. SHRM is the leading voice of the human resource profession, representing the interests of more than 70,000 professional and student members from around the world.

SHRM is committed to equal employment opportunity in all employment practices, including hiring, training, compensation, benefits, promotion transfer, termination, and reduction in force, for all individuals without regard to disability. SHRM is committed to these policies because of our firm conviction that adherence to these principles is sound management practice and contributes significantly to the success of our membership and our members' organizations.

As a result, SHRM is fascinated by your proposal that would provide employment incentives to individuals with disabilities. Faced with the loss of much-needed health care coverage or minimal financial support, many individuals who could continue making contributions as employees, are actually discouraged from going back to work. It is clear that the private and public sectors should work together to increase opportunities for all Americans.

SHRM looks forward to working with you and your staff to promote employment and reemployment incentives for those with disabilities.

Sincerely,

MICHAEL R. LOSEY, SPHR,
President & CEO.

CONSORTIUM FOR CITIZENS WITH DIS-ABILITIES TASK FORCE ON SOCIAL SECURITY,

July 18, 1996.

Hon. JAMES JEFFORDS,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR JEFFORDS: The undersigned members of the Task Force on Social Security of the Consortium for Citizens with Disabilities support the principles set forth in the Work Incentive and Self-Support Act of 1996 to enable individuals on Social Security Disability Insurance to return to work.

The Consortium for Citizens With Disabilities (CCD) is a working coalition of more than 100 national consumer, service provider, parent and professional organizations that advocate on behalf of people with disabilities and their families. The work of the Consortium in conducted by Task Forces in various policy areas such as health care, education, employment, technology, housing, civil rights, social security, and budget and appropriations.

The Work Incentive and Self-Sufficiency Act of 1996 is designed to address two significant problems in the SSDI program: 1) individuals with significant disabilities cannot keep their health coverage when they return to work and 2) if that work does not leave them financially better off, they can not risk or afford to go back to work, and leave the cash assistance they receive under SSDI.

There are some basic solutions to this problem. First, continue health coverage for those who are on SSDI after they return to work. Second, make work pay by allowing low income former SSDI beneficiaries to receive benefits that gradually reduce as their take home pay increases. The Work Incentive and Self-Sufficiency Act of 1996 is designed to implement both of these solutions.

First, it allows SSDI beneficiaries to keep their Medicare coverage if they return to work. If they take a job that does not offer health coverage, Medicare remains their primary insurance. If they find a position that does offer health insurance, they have the option to purchase Medicare coverage to use a supplementary coverage. Working beneficiaries would purchase this coverage on their own through premiums that rise on a sliding scale.

Second, it allows SSDI beneficiaries to keep part of their cash assistance after they return to work. Rather than losing the entire amount once they earn $500 a month, they would lose $1 of cash benefits for every $2 in wages they earn that is above $500 a month. This is similar to (but not the same as) the rule that allows individuals over 65 who are retired on Social Security to earn wages and continue to receive retirement income and Medicare.

Third, it allows some individuals to apply only for Medicare coverage but not cash assistance. This offers some workers who acquire a disability during their working years the option to purchase Medicare coverage and continue working. The Medicare coverage could be either primary or supplemental coverage.

We thank you and your lead staff person on this issue, Elaina Goldstein, for the outstanding leadership demonstrated toward enhancing the employment of individuals with disabilities through this bill. This is extremely important legislation for individuals with disabilities. The CCD is eager to work with you and your staff to enact this legislation.

July 16, 1996.

Hon. JAMES M. JEFFORDS,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR JIM: On behalf of the Goodwill Industries network, I congratulate you on the introduction of the Work Incentive and Self-Support Act of 1996.

This important legislation incorporates two reforms long advocated by Goodwill Industries to assist Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) beneficiaries to return to work. First, we believe that no individual should suffer a loss of income when leaving the SSDI rolls. By allowing a SSDI beneficiary to retain a portion of cash benefits when they re-enter the work force, your legislation will remove this major disincentive. Secondly, Goodwill Industries recognizes that loss of medical insurance is a significant impediment confronting SSDI recipients who want to work. Again, the Work Incentive and Self-Support Act of 1996 addresses this disincentive by permitting an individual to apply for Medicare coverage while working, or to purchase medical coverage with premiums based on income level.

Enclosed is a copy of testimony presented last year to the House Ways and Means Subcommittee on Social Security that discusses Goodwill Industries' recommendations for reforming the SSDI program in greater detail.

Please let me know how Goodwill Industries can assist you in securing enactment of the Work Incentive and Self-Support Act of 1996.

Sincerely,

FRED GRANDY,
President & Chief Executive Officer.

WORK INCENTIVE AND SELF-SUFFICIENCY ACT
OF 1996—Section-by-Section Analysis

Intent of Legislation: To Create a Consistent Disability Work Incentive Policy for Social Security Disability Insurance Beneficiaries and Conform with the National Disability Policy Established with the Passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

OVERVIEW

The intent of this bill is to create a work incentive policy for Social Security Disability Income (SSDI) beneficiaries. The model that has been used is the 1619(a)(b) SSI/Medicare provisions. SSDI and Medicare are amended to provide the same incentive as the 1619 model which is to make sure a person who goes off the DI roles will not be worse off. The key reason, according to the GAO in their report to Senate Select Committee on Aging issued this past April, why many people who can work but do not is because they can not obtain health care coverage because of their disability. Therefore, a buy-in to the Medicare program is paramount in this bill. Although a Medicare buy-in program currently exists it has not been a success.

This bill repeals the current trial work period and extended period of eligibility and replaces them with the 1619(a)(b) model provisions. Second, we allow people to purchase Medicare if they meet the current medical listing test in SSDI. The buy-in is on a sliding scale.

Lastly, the bill also includes the Medicare-Medicaid Integration demonstration project was that was included in the 1995 reconciliation bill and repeals the Medicare/Medicaid Data Bank.

SECTION 2: RETURN-TO-WORK PROGRAM FOR SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY INCOME BENEFICIARIES

(A) Benefit reductions based on income

Current law: An allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary who returns to work loses eligibility for DI cash assistance when achieving Substantial Gainful Activity (SGA). SGA is defined as earnings from wages or salaries that equal or surpass $500 monthly (for non blind disabled beneficiaries) that are earned continuously for nine months or longer. Beneficiaries can shelter some income from the SGA calculation by using work incentives such as the Impairment Related Work Expense offset.

Revision: An allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary who returns to work has their DI cash assistance reduced by $1 for every $2 earned beginning when achieving Substantial Gainful Activity (SGA). SGA is defined as earnings from wages or salaries that equal or surpass $500 monthly (for non blind disabled beneficiaries) that are earned continuously for nine months or longer. Beneficiaries can shelter some income from the SGA calculation by using work incentives such as the Impairment Related Work Expense offset. This creates an incentive similar to the cash continuation provisions for 1619(a).

(B) Benefit reductions for those who are dually eligible

Current law: An individual who is dually eligible for SSDI and SSI and who returns to work loses eligibility for both DI cash assistance and Medicare when achieving Substantial Gainful Activity (SSA). SGA is defined as earnings from wages or salaries that equal or surpass $500 monthly (for non blind disabled beneficiaries) continuously for nine months or longer. Beneficiaries can shelter some income from the SGA calculation by using work incentives such as the Impairment Related Work Expense offset. This individual would have their SSI cash assistance and Medicaid coverage continued under the 1619(a) and (b) program.

Revision: An individual who is dually eligible for SSDI and SSI and who returns to work would have their SSI cash assistance and Medicaid coverage continued under the 1619(a) and (b) program, and, when achieving SGA the individual has their DI cash assistance reduced by $1 for every $2 earned. Reductions in cash assistance are taken first from SSI and secondly from SSDI.

Current law: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives a Continuing Disability Review (CDR) at intervals of either three, five, or seven years depending on whether their allowed class is Medical Improvement Expected (MIE=3 years), Medical Improvement Possible (MIP=5 years) or Medical Improvement Not Expected (MINE=7 years). The individual must continue to meet criteria of: 1) earning less than $500 per month in wages or salaries; 2) having a medically determinable physical or mental condition that has lasted or is expected to last 12 or more months; 3) being unable to perform any job in the national economy.

Revision: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives a Continuing Disability Review (CDR) at intervals of either three, five, or seven years depending on whether their allowed class is Medical Improvement Expected (MIE=3 years), Medical Improvement Possible (MIP=5 years) or Medical Improvement Not Expected (MINE=7 years). The individual must continue to meet criteria of having a medically determinable physical or mental condition that has lasted or is expected to last 12 or more months through a condition or combinations of impairments which meets or equals the requirements of the Listings, including functional equivalents, who, except for earned income meets the disability definition. This incentive is similar to 1619(a) provisions regarding Medicaid.

(D) Repeal of trial work period

Current law: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives SSDI cash assistance after a five month waiting period and receives Medicare coverage after a two year waiting period. If the individual returns to work and earns $500 or more per month (Substantial Gainful Activity), cash assistance and no cost Medicare continues through a nine month Trial Work Period and a three month transition period.

Revision: Continuing disability status, gradual decline of cash assistance, and a sliding scale buy-in to Medicare make the Trial Work Period unnecessary.

(E) Repeal of extended period of eligibility

Current law: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives SSDI cash assistance after a five month waiting period and receives Medicare coverage after a two year waiting period. If the individual returns to work and earns $500 or more per month (Substantial Gainful Activity), no cost Medicare continues through a nine month Trial Work Period and a Three month transition period. Beginning in month 13, an Extended Period of eligibility continues Medicare for 36 months if the beneficiary elects to pay the full cost of both the Part A and Part B premiums.

Revision: Continuing disability status, gradual decline of cash assistance, and a sliding scale buy-in to Medicare make the Extended Period of Eligibility unnecessary.

(F) Reaffirmation of disability status

Current law: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives a Continuing Disability Review (CDR) at intervals of either three, five, or seven years depending on whether their allowed class is Medical Improvement Expected (MIE=3 years), Medical Improvement Possible (MIP=5 years) or Medical Improvement Not Expected (MINE=7 years). The individual must continue to meet criteria of: (1) earning less than $500 per month in wages or salaries; (2) having a medically determinable physical or mental condition that has lasted or is expected to last 12 or more months; (3) being unable to perform any job in the national economy.

Revision: An individual who is as allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives a Continuing Disability Review (CDR) at intervals of either three, five, or seven years depending on whether their allowed class is Medical Improvement Expected (MIE=3 years), Medical Improvement Possible (MIP=5 years) or Medical Improvement Not Expected (MINE=7 years). The individual must continue to meet criteria of having a medically determinable physical or mental condition that has lasted or is expected to last 12 or more months through a condition or combinations of impairments which meets or equals the requirements of the Listing, including functional equivalents, who, expect for earned income meets the disability definition. This incentive is similar to 1619(a) provisions regarding Medicaid.

SECTION 3: CONTINUED ELIGIBILITY FOR MEDICARE BUY-IN BENEFITS FOR DISABLED INDIVIDUALS

(A) Continuation of Medicare and Medicare buy-in

Current law: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives SSDI cash assistance after a five month waiting period and receives Medicare coverage after a two year waiting period. If the individual returns to work and earns $500 or more per month (Substantial Gainful Activity), no cost Medicare continues through a nine month Trial Work Period and a Three month transition period. Beginning in month 13, Medicare continues if the beneficiary elects to pay the full cost of both the Part A and Part B premiums.

Revision: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary who returns to work and earns $500 or more per month (SGA), is in a continuing disability status unless medical recovery is determined as described in paragraph 3 above and receives no cost Medicare until Adjusted Gross Income (AGI) reached $15,000; after this point beneficiaries would pay Medicare premiums of 10% of AGI beyond $15,000. This incentive is similar to the continuation of Medicaid under 1619(b). [The exact Formula is to be determined pending additional research].

(B) Defining the Medicare buy-in conditions

Current law: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives SSDI cash assistance after a five month waiting period and receives Medicare coverage after a two year waiting period. If the individual returns to work and earns $500 or more per month (Substantial Gainful Activity), no cost Medicare continues through a nine month Trial Work Period and a Three month transition period. Beginning in month 13, Medicare continues if the beneficiary elects to pay the full cost of both the Part A and Part B premiums.

Revision: An individual who is an allowed Medicare Buy-In beneficiary receives no SSDI cash assistance month, but receives Medicare coverage without a two year waiting period. If the individual returns to work (or remains at work) and earns $500 or more per month (Substantial Gainful Activity), no cost Medicare continues through a nine month Trial Work Period and a Three month transition period. Beginning in month 13, Medicare continues if the beneficiary elects to pay the cost of both the Part A and Part B premiums on a sliding income scale. The beneficiary would receive free Medicare until Adjusted Gross Income (AGI) reached $15,000; after this point beneficiaries would pay a premium of 10% of AGI beyond $15,000. [The exact Formula is to be determined pending additional research].

SECTION 4: MEDICARE BUY-IN PROVISION FOR DISABLED INDIVIDUALS WHO CAN WORK BUT REMAIN ON SSDI BECAUSE THEY CANNOT OBTAIN HEALTH CARE ADEQUATE COVERAGE IN THE PRIVATE MARKET

(A) Creating a new allowed beneficiary class to promote work

Current law: An individual qualifies for SSDI/Medicare if they meet a series of stringent criteria. This criteria includes: 1) earning less than $500 per month in wages or salaries; 2) having a medically determinable physical or mental condition that has lasted or is expected to last 12 or more months; 3) being unable to perform any job in the national economy. In order to meet the criteria of having a medically determinable condition, an applicant must either a) have a condition which meets or exceeds the requirements of the Listings, b) have two or more conditions which meets or exceeds the requirements of the Listings, or c) meet strict functional criteria for not being capable of performing any job in the national economy, given their condition, age, and education. If these criteria are met, an applicant is an allowed beneficiary and receives SSDI cash assistance after a five month waiting period. Medicare begins after a two year waiting period.

Revision: An individual qualifies for Medicare Buy-In, but not for SSDI cash assistance, if they meet a slightly less stringent test of disability. The applicant would be required to meet criteria that demonstrates having a medically determinable physical or mental condition that has lasted or is expected to last 12 or more months. In order to meet the criteria of having a medically determinable condition, an applicant must either a) have a condition which meets or exceeds the requirements of the Listings, or b) have two or more conditions which meets or exceeds the requirements of the Listings. If these criteria are met, an applicant is an allowed beneficiary and receives Medicare, but without a two year waiting period.

(B) Reaffirmation of disability status

Current law: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives a Continuing Disability Review (CDR) at intervals of either three, five, or seven years depending on whether their allowed class is Medical Improvement Expected (MIE=3 years), Medical Improvement Possible (MIP=5 years) or Medical Improvement Not Expected (MINE=7 years). The individual must continue to meet criteria of: 1) earning less than $500 per month in wages or salaries; 2) having a medically determinable physical or mental condition that has lasted or is expected to last 12 or more months; 3) being unable to perform any job in the national economy.

Revision: An individual who is an allowed SSDI/Medicare beneficiary receives a Continuing Disability Review (CDR) at intervals of either three, five, or seven years depending on whether their allowed class is Medical Improvement Expected (MIE=3 years), Medical Improvement Possible (MIP=5 years) or Medical Improvement Not Expected (MINE=7 years). The individual must continue to meet criteria of having a medically determinable physical or mental condition that has lasted or is expected to last 12 or more months through a condition or combinations of impairments which meets or equals the requirements of the Listings, including functional equivalents, who, except for earned income meets the disability definition. This incentive is similar to 1619(a) provisions regarding Medicaid.

SECTION 5: MEDICARE/MEDICAID INTEGRATION DEMONSTRATION PROJECT

SECTION 6: REPEAL OF MEDICARE AND MEDICAID COVERAGE DATA BANK ●

By Mr. LAUTENBERG:

S. 1980. A bill to prohibit the public carrying of a handgun, with appropriate exceptions for law enforcement officials and others; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

THE CONCEALED WEAPONS PROHIBITION ACT OF 1996

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation that would prohibit individuals from carrying a handgun, concealed or in the open, in public. The bill includes exceptions for certain people authorized to carry handguns under State law, such as law enforcement personnel and duly authorized security officers. Additionally, States could choose to exempt persons whose employment involves the transport of substantial amounts of cash or other valuables.

Also, Mr. President, States could provide exemptions in individual cases, based on credible evidence, that a person should be allowed to carry a handgun because of compelling circumstances warranting an exemption, such as a woman being stalked by someone who is threatening her. However, a simple claim of concern about generalized risks would not be sufficient. It would have to be a specified, credible threat.

Mr. President, common sense tells you that there are more than enough dangerous weapons on America's streets. Yet, incredibly, some seem to think that there should be more. They want to turn our States and cities into the wild, wild west, where everyone carries a gun on his or her own hip, taking the law into their own hands. This is a foolhardy, and dangerous, trend.

The statistics are clear, Mr. President. This country is already drowning in a sea of gun violence. Every 2 minutes, someone somewhere in the United States is shot. Every 14 minutes someone in this country dies from a gunshot wound. In 1994 alone, over 15 thousand people in our country were killed by handguns. Compare that to countries like Canada, where 90 people were killed by handguns that year, or Great Britain, which had 68 handgun fatalities.

Mr. President, the Federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention estimates that by the year 2003, gunfire will have surpassed auto accidents as the leading cause of injury-related deaths in the United States. In fact, this is already the case in seven States.

It is because we already suffer from an epidemic of gun violence that I have introduced this legislation. The fact is, Mr. President, concealed weapons make people less, not more, secure. You don't have to take it from me. Listen to the real experts: The police officers on the street. There is near-unanimous agreement in the law enforcement community that concealed weapons laws are bad policy.

Arming more people is not the way to make the streets safer. It is a way to get more people killed. Mr. President, the National Rifle Association and its allies may believe that the presence of concealed weapons will scare criminals from committing crimes. To me, just the opposite is true. More likely, criminals will just get more violent.

Think about it, Mr. President. If a criminal thinks that you might be carrying a concealed weapon, common sense tells you that he is much more likely to simply shoot first, and ask questions later.

Perhaps more importantly, concealed weapons will mean that many routine conflicts will escalate into deadly violence. Every day, people get into everything from traffic accidents to domestic disputes. Maybe these arguments lead to yelling, or even fisticuffs. But if more people are carrying guns, those conflicts are much more likely to end in a shooting, and death.

Mr. President, the bottom line is that more guns equals more death. This legislation will help in our struggle to reduce the number of guns on our streets, and help prevent our society from becoming even more violent and dangerous.

I hope my colleagues will support the bill, and ask unanimous consent that a copy of the legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1980

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION. 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Concealed Weapons Prohibition Act of 1996".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds and declares that—

(1) crimes committed with handguns threaten the peace and domestic tranquility of the United States and reduce the security and general welfare of the Nation and its people;

(2) crimes committed with handguns impose a substantial burden on interstate commerce and lead to a reduction in productivity and profitability for businesses around the Nation whose workers, suppliers, and customers are adversely affected by gun violence;

(3) the public carrying of handguns increases the level of gun violence by enabling the rapid escalation of otherwise minor conflicts into deadly shootings;

(4) the public carrying of handguns increases the likelihood that incompetent or careless handgun users will accidentally injure or kill innocent bystanders;

(5) the public carrying of handguns poses a danger to citizens of the United States who travel across State lines for business or other purposes; and

(6) all Americans have a right to be protected from the dangers posed by the carrying of concealed handguns, regardless of their State of residence.

SEC. 3. UNLAWFUL ACT.

Section 922 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(y)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), it shall be unlawful for a person to carry a handgun on his or her person in public.

"(2) Paragraph (1) shall not apply to the following:

"(A) A person authorized to carry a handgun pursuant to State law who is—

"(i) a law enforcement official;

"(ii) a retired law enforcement official;

"(iii) a duly authorized private security officer;

"(iv) a person whose employment involves the transport of substantial amounts of cash or other valuable items; or

"(v) any other person that the Attorney General determines should be allowed to carry a handgun because of compelling circumstances warranting an exception, pursuant to regulations that the Attorney General may promulgate.

"(B) A person authorized to carry a handgun pursuant to a State law that grants a person an exemption to carry a handgun based on an individualized determination and a review of credible evidence that the person should be allowed to carry a handgun because of compelling circumstances warranting an exemption. A claim of concern about generalized or unspecified risks shall not be sufficient to justify an exemption.

“(C) A person authorized to carry a handgun on his or her person under Federal law.”.

By Mr. CRAIG:

S. 1981. A bill to establish a Joint United States-Canada Commission on Cattle and Beef to identify, and recommend means of resolving, national, regional, and provincial trade-distorting differences between the countries with respect to the production, processing, and sale of cattle and beef, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

THE JOINT UNITED STATES-CANADA COMMISSION ON CATTLE AND BEEF ESTABLISHMENT ACT OF

• Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I introduce a bill of critical importance to our Nation's cattle producers. The Joint United States-Canada Commission on Cattle and Beef is designed to resolve some of the existing differences in trade practices between the two countries.

As a former rancher, I have a firsthand understanding of the challenges that face the cattle industry. The prolonged down cycle is especially troubling because it affects the livelihoods of thousands of ranching families in Idaho and across the country.

These beef producers are the largest sector of Idaho and American agriculture. Over 1 million families raise over 100 million head of beef cattle every year. This contributes over $36 billion to local economies. Even with the extended cycle of low prices, direct cash receipts from the Idaho cattle industry were almost $620 million in 1995. These totals only represent direct sales; they do not capture the multiplier effect that cattle ranches have in their local economies from expenditures on labor, feed, fuel, property taxes, and other inputs.

Over the years, cattle operations have provided a decent living and good way of life in exchange for long days, hard work, and dedication. While the investment continues to be high, the returns have been low in recent years.

The problems facing the cattle industry in recent years are complex. The nature of the market dictates that stable consumption combined with increased productivity and growing herd size yield lower prices to producers. This, combined with high feed prices and limited export opportunities, has caused a near crisis.

Many Idahoans have contacted me on this issue. Some suggest the Federal Government intervene in the market to help producers. However, many others have expressed fear that Federal intervention, if experience is any indication, will only complicate matters and may also create a number of unintended results. I tend to agree with the latter. Time and again, I have seen lawmakers and bureaucrats in Washington, DC, albeit well-intentioned, take a difficult situation and make it worse. This does not mean that I believe Government has no role to play. I have supported and will continue to support measures of proven value. However, I will continue to follow this situation closely with the hope that free market forces will, in the long run, aid in making cattle producers more efficient, productive, and profitable.

The cattle industry is part of a complex, long-term cycle; however, there are producers who might not survive the short-term consequences. The Beef Industry Assistance Resolution addresses a number of these short term issues. These are issues that were raised at a hearing of the Agriculture Committee that I chaired a few weeks ago.

The resolution has five sections—antitrust monitoring, market reporting, private sector self-regulation, recognition of barriers to international trade, and emergency loan guarantees.

Section 1 encourages the Secretary of Agriculture and Department of Justice to increase the monitoring of mergers and acquisitions in the beef industry. Investigation of possible barriers in the beef packing sector for new firms and with other commodities is encouraged.

Section 2 directs the Secretary of Agriculture to expedite the reporting of existing beef categories and add additional categories. These categories include contract, formula and live cash cattle prices, and boxed beef prices. The Secretary is also encouraged to increase the frequency of captive supply cattle from every 14 to 7 days. I am especially interested in the improved reporting of all beef and live cattle exports and imports. The second section also directs the Secretary to capture data on a previously unrecorded segment of the market—away from home consumption. While this market consumes approximately half of the Nation's beef production, very little is known about it.

Section 3 encourages two very important measures within the private sector. First, meat packing companies are encouraged to fully utilize a grid pricing structure which will provide producers with a more complete picture for the particular type of the cattle they produce. Second, agricultural lenders are encouraged to consider the total asset portfolio, not just cash flow, when evaluating this year's beef loans. Even the best operators will have great difficulty cash-flowing a cattle outfit because of the prolonged period of low prices.

Section 4 recognizes a number of barriers to international trade that adversely affect American beef producers. The section is meant to elevate the importance of all trade issues and specifically references the elimination of the European Union hormone ban and animal health barriers between the United States and Canada.

Section 5 recommends that emergency loan guarantees be made available to agricultural lenders with cattle industry loans. I am disappointed that the President zeroed out funding for this program in his fiscal year 1997 proposal. I have heard from a number of lenders that a high number of loans are questionable for this fall.

The Beef Industry Assistance Resolution is a measure designed to provide immediate, short-term solutions to some of the serious problems facing the cattle industry. I know that a number of my colleagues have legislation pending in regards to the cattle market. I would comment that I see this resolution as a starting point, not an ending point for cattle industry issues.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of my bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

"(2) In considering an employer's petition for admission of H-2A aliens the Attorney General shall consider the certification decision of the Secretary of Labor and shall consider any countervailing evidence submitted by the employer with respect to the non-availability of United States workers and the employer's compliance with the requirements of this section, and may consult with the Secretary of Agriculture."

(b) Section 218(b) (8 U.S.C. 1188(b)) is amended by striking out paragraph (4) and inserting the following:

"(4) DETERMINATION BY THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary determines that the employer has not filed a job offer for the position to be filled by the alien with the appropriate local office of the State employment security agency having jurisdiction over the area of intended employment, or with the State office of such an agency if the alien will be employed in an area within the jurisdiction of more than one local office of such an agency, which meets the criteria of paragraph (5).

"(5) REQUIRED TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF EMPLOYMENT.—The Secretary determines that the employer's job offer does not meet one or more of the following criteria:

"(A) REQUIRED RATE OF PAY.—The employer has offered to pay H-2A aliens and all other workers in the occupation in the area of intended employment an adverse effect wage rate of not less than the median rate of pay for similarly employed workers in the area of intended employment.

"(B) PROVISION OF HOUSING.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The employer has offered to provide housing to H-2A aliens and those workers not reasonably able to return to their residence within the same day, without charge to the worker. The employer may, at the employer's option, provide housing meeting applicable Federal standards for temporary labor camps, or provide rental or public accommodation type housing which meets applicable local or state standards for such housing.

"(ii) HOUSING ALLOWANCE AS ALTERNATIVE.—In lieu of offering the housing required in clause (i), the employer may provide a reasonable housing allowance to workers not reasonably able to return to their place of residence within the same day, but only if the Secretary determines that housing is reasonably available within the approximate area of employment. An employer who offers a housing allowance pursuant to this subparagraph shall not be deemed to be a housing provider under section 203 of the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act (29 U.S.C. 1823) merely by virtue of providing such housing allowance.

“(iii) SPECIAL HOUSING STANDARDS FOR SHORT DURATION EMPLOYMENT.—The Secretary shall promulgate special regulations permitting the provision of short-term temporary housing for workers employed in occupations in which employment is expected to last 40 days or less.

“(iv) TRANSITIONAL PERIOD FOR PROVISION OF SPECIAL HOUSING STANDARDS IN OTHER EMPLOYMENT.—For a period of five years after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall approve the provision of housing meeting the standards described in clause (iii) in occupations expected to last longer than 40 days in areas where available housing meeting the criteria described in subparagraph (i) is found to be insufficient.

“(v) PRE-EMPTION OF STATE AND LOCAL STANDARDS.—The standards described in clauses (ii) and (iii) shall preempt any State and local standards governing the provision of temporary housing to agricultural workers.

“(C) REIMBURSEMENT OF TRANSPORTATION COSTS.—The employer has offered to reimburse H-2A aliens and workers recruited from beyond normal commuting distance the most economical common carrier transportation charge and reasonable subsistence from the place from which the worker comes to work for the employer, (but not more than the most economical common carrier transportation charge from the worker's normal place of residence) if the worker completes 50 percent of the anticipated period of employment. If the worker recruited from beyond normal commuting distance completes the period of employment, the employer will provide or pay for the worker's transportation and reasonable subsistence to the worker's next place of employment, or to the worker's normal place of residence, whichever is less.

“(D) GUARANTEE OF EMPLOYMENT.—The employer has offered to guarantee the worker employment for at least three-fourths of the workdays of the employer's actual period of employment in the occupation. Workers who abandon their employment or are terminated for cause shall forfeit this guarantee.

“(6) PREFERENCE FOR U.S. WORKERS.—The employer has not assured on the application that the employer will provide employment to all qualified United States workers who apply to the employer and assure that they will be available at the time and place needed until the time the employer's foreign workers depart for the employer's place of employment (but not sooner than 5 days before the date workers are needed), and will give preference in employment to United States workers who are immediately available to fill job opportunities that become available after the date work in the occupation begins.”

(c) Section 218 (8 U.S.C. 1188) is amended by striking out subsection (c) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

“(c) The following rules shall apply to the issuance of labor certifications by the Secretary under this section:

“(1) DEADLINE FOR FILING APPLICATIONS.—The Secretary may not require that the application be filed more than 40 days before the first date the employer requires the labor or services of the H-2A worker.

“(2) NOTICE WITHIN SEVEN DAYS OF DEFICIENCIES.—

“(A) The employer shall be notified in writing within seven calendar days of the date of filing, if the application does not meet the criteria described in subsection (b) for approval.

“(B) If the application does not meet such criteria, the notice shall specify the specific deficiencies of the application and the Secretary shall provide an opportunity for the prompt resubmission of a modified application.

“(3) ISSUANCE OF CERTIFICATION.—

“(A) The Secretary shall provide to the employer, not later than 20 days before the date such labor or services are first required to be performed, the certification described in subsection (a)(1)—

“(i) with respect to paragraph (a)(1)(A) if the employer's application meets the criteria described in subsection (b), or a statement of the specific reasons why such certification can not be made, and

“(ii) with respect to subsection (a)(1)(B), to the extent that the employer does not actually have, or has not been provided with the names, addresses and Social Security numbers of workers referred to the employer who are able, willing and qualified and have indicated they will be available at the time and place needed to perform such labor or services on the terms and conditions of the job offer approved by the Secretary. For each worker referred, the Secretary shall also provide the employer with information sufficient to permit the employer to contact the referred worker for the purpose of reconfirming the worker's availability for work at the time and place needed.

“(B) If, at the time the Secretary determines that the employer's job offer meets the criteria described in subsection (b) there are already unfilled job opportunities in the occupation and area of intended employment for which the employer is seeking workers, the Secretary shall provide the certification at the same time the Secretary approves the employer's job offer.”

(d) Section 218 (8 U.S.C. 1188) is amended by striking out section (e) and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

“(e) EXPEDITED APPEALS OF CERTAIN DETERMINATIONS.—The Secretary shall provide by regulation for an expedited procedure for the review of the nonapproval of an employer's job offer pursuant to subsection (c)(2) and of the denial of certification in whole or in part pursuant to subsection (c)(3) or, at the applicant's request, a de novo administrative hearing respecting the nonapproval or denial.”

(e) Section 218 is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (f) through (i) as subsections (g) through (j), respectively; and

(2) by adding the following after subsection (e):

“(f) The following procedures shall apply to the consideration of petitions by the Attorney General under this section:

“(2) EXPEDITED AMENDMENTS TO PETITIONS.—The Attorney General shall provide an expedited procedure for the amendment of petitions to increase the number of workers on or after five days before the employers date of need for the labor or services involved in the petition to replace referred workers whose continued availability for work at the time and place needed under the terms of the approved job offer can not be confirmed and to replace referred workers who fail to report for work on the date of need and replace referred workers who abandon their employment or are terminated for cause, and for which replacement workers are not immediately available pursuant to subsection (b)(6).”

(g) Section 218(g) (8 U.S.C. 1188(g)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (2) as paragraph (2)(A); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (2)(A) the following:

“(B) No employer shall be subject to any liability or punishment on the basis of an employment action or practice by such employer that conforms with the terms and conditions of a job offer approved by the Secretary pursuant to this Section, unless and until the employer has been notified that such certification has been amended or invalidated by a final order of the Secretary or of a court of competent jurisdiction.”

(h) Section 218(h) is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

“(3) No court of the United States shall have jurisdiction to issue any restraining order or temporary or permanent injunction preventing or delaying the issuance by the Secretary of a certification pursuant to this section, or the approval by the Attorney General of a petition to import an alien as an H-2A worker, or the actual importation of any such alien as an H-2A worker following such approval by the Attorney General.”

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I submit an amendment regarding reforms to the H-2A Temporary Agricultural Workers Program.

Let me start by publicly thanking my good friend, AL SIMPSON. The senior Senator from Wyoming has been tireless in his efforts to maneuver immigration legislation through the 104th Congress. While, I am very appreciative of his efforts in general, I want to address an issue that is of utmost importance to this country's farmers and ranchers.

That issue is the impact of immigration reform on the supply of agricultural labor. There is very real concern among Idaho farmers and throughout the countryside that these reforms will reduce the availability of agricultural workers.

Farmers need access to an adequate supply of workers and want to have certainty that they are hiring a legal work force. In 1995, the total agricultural work force was about 2.5 million people. That equates to 6.7% of our labor force that is directly involved in production agriculture and food processing.

Hired labor is one of the most important and costly inputs in farming. U.S. farmers spent more than $15 billion on hired labor expenses in 1992—one of every eight dollars of farm production expenses. For the labor-intensive fruit, vegetable and horticultural sector, labor accounts for 35 to 45 percent of production costs.

The competitiveness of U.S. agriculture, especially the fruit, vegetable and horticultural specialty sectors, depends on the continued availability of hired labor at a reasonable cost. U.S. farmers, including producers of labor-intensive perishable commodities, compete directly with producers in other countries for market share in both U.S. and foreign commodity markets.

Wages of U.S. farmworkers will not be forced up by eliminating alien labor, because growers' production costs are capped by world market commodity prices. Instead, a reduction in the work force available to agriculture will force U.S. producers to reduce production to the level that can be sustained by a smaller work force.

Over time, wages for these farm workers have actually risen faster than non-farm worker wages. Between 1986-1994, there was a 34.6-percent increase in average hourly earnings for farm workers, while nonfarm workers only saw a 27.1 percent increase.

Even with this increase in on-farm wages, this country has historically been unable to provide a sufficient number of domestic workers to complete the difficult manual labor required in the production of many agricultural commodities. In Idaho, this is especially true for producers of fruit, sugar beets, onions and other specialty crops.

The difficulty in obtaining sufficient domestic workers is primarily due to the fact that domestic workers prefer the security of full-time employment in year round positions. As a result the available domestic work force tends to prefer the long term positions, leaving the seasonal jobs unfilled. In addition, many of the seasonal agricultural jobs are located in areas where it is necessary for workers to migrate into the area and live temporarily to do the work. Experience has shown that foreign workers are more likely to migrate than domestic workers. As a result of domestic short supply, farmers and ranchers have had to rely upon the assistance of foreign workers.

The only current mechanism available to admit foreign workers for agricultural employment is the H-2A program. The H-2A program is intended to serve as a safety valve for times when domestic labor is unavailable. Unfortunately, the H-2A program isn't working.

Despite efforts to streamline the temporary worker program in 1986, it now functions so poorly that few in agriculture use it without risking an inadequate work force, burdensome regulations and potential litigation expense. In fact, usage of the program has actually decreased from 25,000 workers in 1986 to only 17,000 in 1995.

Our amendment will provide some much needed reforms to the H-2A program. I urge my colleagues to consider the following parts of our amendment as a reasonable modification of the H-2A program.

First, the amendment will reduce the advance filing deadline from 60 to 40 days before workers are needed. In many agricultural operations, 60 days is too far in advance to be able to predict labor needs with the precision required in H-2A applications. Furthermore, virtually all referrals of U.S. workers who actually report for work are made close to the date of need. The advance application period serves little purpose except to provide time for litigation.

Second, in lieu of the present certification letter, the Department of Labor [DOL] would issue the employer a domestic recruitment report indicating that the employer's job offer meets the statutory criteria and lists the number of U.S. workers referred. The employer would then file a petition with INS for admission of aliens, including a copy of DOL's domestic recruitment report and any countervailing evidence concerning the adequacy of the job offer and/or the availability of U.S. workers. The Attorney General would make the admission decision. The purpose is to restore the role of the Labor Department to that of giving advice to the Attorney General on labor availability, and return decision making to the Attorney General.

Third, the Department of Labor will be required to provide the employer with a domestic recruitment report not later than 20 days before the date of need. The report either states sufficient domestic workers are not available or gives the names and Social Security Numbers of the able, willing and qualified workers who have been referred to the employer. The Department of Labor now denies certification not only on the basis of workers actually referred to the employer, but also on the basis of reports or suppositions that unspecified numbers of workers may become available. The proposed change would assure that only workers actually identified as available would be the basis for denying foreign workers.

Fourth, the Immigration and Naturalization Service [INS] will provide expedited processing of employers' petitions, and, if approved, notify the visa issuing consulate or port of entry within 15 calendar days. This will ensure timely admission decisions.

Fifth, INS will also provide expedited procedures for amending petitions to increase the number of workers admitted on 5 days before the date of need. This is to reduce the paperwork and increase the timeliness of obtaining needed workers very close to or after the work has started.

Sixth, DOL will continue to recruit domestic workers and make referrals to employers until 5 days before the date of need. This method is needed to allow the employer at a date certain to complete his hiring, and to operate without having the operation disrupted by having to displace existing workers with new workers.

Seventh, our amendment will enumerate the specific obligations of employers in occupations in which H-2A workers are employed. The proposed definition would define jobs that meet the following criteria as not adversely affecting U.S. workers:

1. The employer offers a competitive wage for the position.
2. The employer will provide approved housing, or a reasonable housing allowance, to workers whose permanent place of residence is beyond normal commuting distance.

3. The employer continues to provide current transportation reimbursement requirements.

4. A guarantee of employment is provided for at least three-quarters of the anticipated hours of work during the actual period of employment.

5. The employer will provide workers' compensation or equivalent coverage.

6. Employer must comply with all applicable federal, state and local labor laws with respect to both U.S. and alien workers.

This combination of employment requirements will eliminate the discretion of Department of Labor to specify terms and conditions of employment on a case-by-case basis. In addition, the scope for litigation will be reduced since employers (and the courts) would know with particularity the required terms and conditions of employment.

Eighth, our amendment would provide that workers must exhaust administrative remedies before engaging their employers in litigation.

Ninth, certainty would be given to employers who comply with the terms of an approved job order. If at a later date the Department of Labor requires changes, the employer would be required to comply with the law only prospectively. This very important provision removes the possibility of retroactive liability if an approved order is changed.

Again, I urge my colleagues to support this amendment and avoid actions that would jeopardize the labor supply for American agriculture.

CRAIG AMENDMENT NO. 4971

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. CRAIG submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill, H.R. 3603, supra; as follows:

At the end of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment, insert the following:

SEC. . REVIEW AND REPORT ON H-2A NON-IMMIGRANT WORKERS PROGRAM.

(a) SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.—It is the sense of the Congress that the enactment of this Act may impact the future availability of an adequate work force for the producers of our Nation's labor intensive agricultural commodities and livestock.

(b) REVIEW.—The Comptroller General shall review the effectiveness of the H-2A nonimmigrant worker program to ensure that the program provides a workable safety valve in the event of future shortages of domestic workers after the enactment of this Act. Among other things, the Comptroller General shall review the program to determine—

(1) that the program ensures that an adequate supply of qualified United States workers is available at the time and place needed for employers seeking such workers after the date of enactment of this Act;

(2) that the program ensures that there is timely approval of applications for temporary foreign workers under the H-2A nonimmigrant worker program in the event of shortages of United States workers after the date of enactment of this Act;

(3) that the program ensures that implementation of the H-2A nonimmigrant worker program is not displacing United States agricultural workers or diminishing the terms and conditions of employment of United States agricultural workers; and

(4) if and to what extent the H-2A non-immigrant worker program is contributing to the problem of illegal immigration.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 1996, or three months after the date of enactment of this Act, whichever is sooner, the Comptroller General shall submit a report to Congress setting forth the finding of the review conducted under subsection (b).

(d) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this section—

(1) the term "Comptroller General" means the Comptroller General of the United States; and

(2) the term "H-2A nonimmigrant worker program" means the program for the admission of nonimmigrant aliens described in section 101(a)(15)(H)(ii)(a) of the Immigration and Nationality Act.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I submit an amendment regarding temporary agricultural workers.

My amendment mandates an immediate General Accounting Office [GAO] study on the availability of an adequate work force for our Nation's labor intensive farm and ranch sectors. In addition, the study will review the effectiveness of the existing H-2A non-immigrant worker program. This report will be concluded within 3 months of the agricultural appropriations bill enactment.

This same amendment was supported by a bipartisan group of 10 Senators during the immigration reform legislation and accepted on an unanimous consent basis. I urge my colleagues to accept this amendment and avoid a potential agricultural labor shortage this fall.

(2) The Secretary may offer separation pay under paragraph (1) to employees within such components of the agency, occupational groups or levels of an occupation, geographic location, or any appropriate combination of these factors, subject to such other similar limitations or conditions as the Secretary may require.

(e) EFFECT OF SUBSEQUENT EMPLOYMENT WITH THE GOVERNMENT.—(1) An individual who has received a voluntary separation incentive payment under this section and accepts any employment with the Government of the United States within 5 years after the date of the separation on which the payment is based shall be required to repay, before the individual's first day of such employment, the entire amount of the incentive payment to the agency that paid the incentive payment.

(2) For the purpose of this subsection, the term "final basic pay", with respect to an employee, means the total amount of basic pay which would be payable for a year of service by such employee, computed using the employee's final rate of basic pay, and, if last serving on other than a full-time basis, with appropriate adjustment therefor.

(g) REDUCTION OF AGENCY EMPLOYMENT LEVELS.—The total full-time equivalent positions in the Department of Agriculture shall be reduced by one position for each separation of an employee who receives a voluntary separation incentive payment under this section. The reduction shall be calculated by comparing the Department's full-time equivalent positions for the fiscal year in which the voluntary separation payments are made with the full-time equivalent position limitation for the prior fiscal year.

(h) REPORTS.—No later than March 31 of each fiscal year, the Office of Personnel Management shall submit to the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate and the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight of the House of Representatives a report which, with respect to the preceding fiscal year, shall include for the Department of Agriculture—

(B) the title and grade or pay level of the position filled by each employee to whom the waiver applied.

(i) EFFECTS ON REDUCTIONS IN FORCE.—Under procedures prescribed by the Office of Personnel Management, an agency of the Department of Agriculture may administer a reduction in force action to provide that if an employee separates from service and receives an incentive payment under this section during a reduction in force action affecting the agency—

(1) another employee who would otherwise be separated from service in such reduction in force may be retained; and

(2) the voluntary separation by the employee shall be treated as an involuntary separation resulting from such reduction in force.

(j) EMPLOYEES WITH CRITICAL KNOWLEDGE AND SKILLS.—The Secretary may exclude an employee from receiving a separation incentive payment under this section, if the Secretary determines that—

(1) such employee has critical knowledge and skills; and

(2) separation by the employee would impair the performance of the employing agency's mission.

(k) CONTINUATION OF HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE.—(1)(A) During the period beginning on the date of the enactment of this Act through September 30, 2000, any employee described under paragraph (2) may elect continued health care insurance for no longer than 18 months in accordance with section 8905a of title 5, United States Code.

(B) Notwithstanding section 8905a(d)(1)(A) of title 5, United States Code—

(i) such employee shall pay only the amount of the employee contribution into the Employees Health Benefits Fund; and

(ii) the Department of Agriculture shall pay the amount of the agency contribution and any cost of administrative expenses into the Employees Health Benefits Fund.

(2) An employee referred to under paragraph (1) is any employee who—

(A) voluntarily separates from service and receives an incentive payment under this section; or

(B) is involuntarily separated from service in a reduction in force action.

On page 11, line 22, add the following proviso after the word "law": "; Provided further, That all rights and title of the United States in the property known as the National Agricultural Water Quality Laboratory of the USDA, consisting of approximately 9.161 acres in the city of Durant, Oklahoma, including facilities and fixed equipment, shall be conveyed to Southeastern Oklahoma State University".

MURKOWSKI AMENDMENT NO. 4983

Mr. COCHRAN (for Mr. MURKOWSKI) proposed an amendment to the bill, H.R. 3603, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . Hereafter, notwithstanding any other provision of law, any domestic fish or fish product produced in compliance with food safety standards or procedures accepted by the Food and Drug Administration as satisfying the requirements of the "Procedures for the Safe and Sanitary Processing and Importing of Fish and Fish Products" (published by the Food and Drug Administration as a final regulation in the Federal Register of December 18, 1995), shall be deemed to have met any inspection requirements of the Department of Agriculture or other Federal agency for any Federal commodity purchase program, including the program authorized under section 32 of the Act of August 24, 1935 (7 U.S.C. 612c) except that the Department of Agriculture or other Federal agency may utilize lot inspection to establish a reasonable degree of certainty that fish or fish products purchased under a Federal commodity purchase program, including the program authorized under section 32 of the Act of August 24, 1935 (7 U.S.C. 612c), meet Federal product specifications.

SINGING SENATORS TRIBUTE TO SENATOR MARK HATFIELD

• Mr. KEMPTHORNE. Mr. President, last Thursday evening was a special night in the life of the U.S. Senate. That night the Senate paid tribute to Senator MARK HATFIELD in anticipation of his retirement from the Senate at the end of this Congress, and in recognition of his outstanding service to Oregon, the Senate, and to the Nation.

Thursday night was one of those evenings that makes service in the U.S. Senate a privilege. As the accompanying article from the Washington Post reports, "How many politicians could get both Bill Clinton and TRENT LOTT to sing their praises. Senator MARK HATFIELD, for one." The entertainment was also a highlight. The Singing Senators—TRENT LOTT, LARRY CRAIG, JOHN ASHCROFT, and JIM JEFFORDS—brought the house down as they sang in near perfect harmony such tunes as "Dig a Little Deeper" and "Elvira."

The evening of course belonged to Senator HATFIELD. The evening's quiet humor, graciousness, thoughtful remarks, and kind words were perfect for the witty, gracious, thoughtful, and kind MARK HATFIELD. I ask that the article from the Washington Post be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

HATS OFF TO MARK HATFIELD

SENATORS GATHER TO SING PRAISES OF RETIRING GENTLEMAN FROM OREGON

(By Roxanne Roberts)

Short of giving away millions of dollars, the best way to ensure lavish tributes this year is to resign from the United States Senate.

But how many politicians could get both Bill Clinton and Trent Lott to sing their praises? Sen. Mark Hatfield, for one.

"Because he has tried to love his enemies, he has no enemies," said the president last night, thanking the retiring Oregon Republican for his unwavering conviction, humanitarian spirit, faith and 30 years of consensus building. "This town is the poorer for his leaving, but the richer for his legacy."

One could also detect a serious undertone in the Sheraton Washington ballroom that went beyond the loss of this one "remarkable man," as Clinton called him. Hatfield is one of 14 senators who have decided not to return, the largest exodus from the august institution in 100 years.

"I approach this evening with an inescapable nostalgia," said a subdued Howard Baker. Hatfield is the last of the class who, with Baker, came to the Senate in January 1967. "With his retirement, not only a distinguished career, but a political era, is ending," said the former majority leader.

Heads in the audience of more than 700 nodded in agreement. The dinner for Hatfield was the second in what promises to be a continuing lovefest for moderate politicians on both sides of the aisle: A black-tie dinner in May for Sen. Alan Simpson (R-Wyo.) kicked off the tributes, with most of the Senate and former president George Bush in attendance.

"It was very, very touching," said Simpson last night. "I loved it."

Sen. Howell Heflin (D-Ala.), who is also leaving, noted that a retiring senator can do almost no wrong. "Most people wish you well," he said.

"They're not as demanding. Maybe they figure now you can tell them to . . ."—he paused and smiled broadly—. . . whatever."

Hatfield's dinner and the entertainment were delayed by—what else?—a Senate vote. So the honoree and the president opened the program with a little mutual admiration.

Hatfield, characteristically, talked about what he had in common with Clinton: both small-town boys, both governors and "both of us, in our time in Washington, have managed to irritate both the Republicans and Democrats," said the only GOP senator to vote against the balanced-budget amendment last year on principle.

"If all of us could be more like you, America would be an even greater nation," Clinton returned.

Once the "entertainment" had cast its votes, they arrived to take the stage. The "Singing Senators"—Majority Leader Lott, Larry Craig (R-Idaho), Jim Jeffords (R-Vt.) and John Ashcroft (R-Mo.)—are a cross between a barbershop quartet and IRS auditors.

"It sort of epitomizes the Senate," said Lott. "We don't always make great music, but we keep working on it."

There were high fives after the first medley. ("Anytime we start together and end together, we celebrate," Lott explained). Then they belted out three spirited but dreadful selections, including "Dig a Little Deeper" (a nod to Hatfield's chairmanship of the Appropriations Committee), and capped the performance with Lott soloing on "Elvira."

"Think of it this way: It's in a good cause," observed emcee Cokie Roberts wryly.

The cause, the Mark O. Hatfield Library at Willamette University in Hatfield's home state, received the proceeds of the $500-per-seat event. Even lobbyists contributed solely out of admiration for Hatfield.

"Hatfield's leaving, so there's nothing he can do for us," said one who declined to identify himself. "He has been a straight-shooter his entire career. He's a good guy and deserves the recognition."

After dinner, a video chronicled Hatfield's career, including his opposition to the death penalty and his work to ban nuclear testing.

When it was his turn to speak, Hatfield didn't crack a smile. "He's always reserved and serious," said Sen. Jay Rockefeller (D-W.Va.). "And yet, when you're alone with him, he's gentle, thoughtful, kind. He's just a splendid human being."

Calling himself truly blessed, Hatfield thanked his family and staff. The son of a blacksmith and a schoolteacher also thanked long-dead teachers and voters, then moved on to his colleagues.

"For your diversity—Republicans, Democrats, Independents—you have helped keep me in the political center," said Hatfield.

"And I'm grateful."

TRIBUTE TO SAM M. GIBBONS

• Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, it was a great privilege for me to introduce legislation to name the Federal Courthouse in Tampa, FL as the Sam M. Gibbons United States Courthouse.

The Honorable SAM GIBBONS has devoted his entire life to serving the United States of America. A veteran of World War II, GIBBONS was awarded the Bronze Star after parachuting into Normandy on D-day as a part of the initial Allied assault force. He achieved the rank of captain in the 501st Parachute Infantry of the 101st Airborne Division before embarking on his long and distinguished career as a public servant.

GIBBONS' career in public service began with his election to the Florida House of Representatives in 1952. In the Florida House, he passed legislation creating the University of South Florida and is appropriately recognized as The father of the University of South Florida. In 1958, GIBBONS' moved from the House to the Florida Senate where he enacted legislation to establish Florida's regional water management districts. These districts are vital to Florida's ability to allocate and preserve its precious water resources.

GIBBONS barnstormed into the U.S. Congress in 1962. President Johnson appointed GIBBONS, then a junior Congressman, floor manager of his Great Society initiatives. GIBBONS deftly steered this legislation, including Project Head Start, through the Congress. He also wrote the law that allows Americans over the age of 55 to protect, from taxation, capital gains from the sale of their primary homes. Despite his enormous achievements in social policy, GIBBONS' experience as a legislator was not limited solely to domestic issues.

As acting chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee in 1994 and chairman of the Ways and Means Trade Subcommittee from 1981 through May 1994, GIBBONS has been a champion of open markets and free trade around the world. Under his direction, two of our Nation's most comprehensive trade agreements, the North American Free Trade Agreement [NAFTA] and the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade [GATT] passed Congress, and were signed into law.

Today, Congressman GIBBONS sits as the Dean of the Florida congressional delegation. At the end of the 104th Congress, GIBBONS will complete his 17th term representing the Tampa Bay area. The GIBBONS family has lived in Tampa for more than a century. Congressman and Mrs. Gibbons, who will celebrate their 50th wedding anniversary this year, have also served together tirelessly to improve the lives all Tampa residents.

A graduate of the University of Florida College of Law and a member of Florida Blue Key, GIBBONS has served the State of Florida and the United States of America with distinction. This courthouse should be named as a tribute to the lifetime works of Congressman SAM M. GIBBONS. •

HONORING THOMAS ROMANO

• Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Thomas Russell

Romano, executive director of the adult day center in Branford, CT. Through his efforts over the past 15 years, the East Shore Regional Adult Day Center has become a model organization for the care of the elderly, as well as for physically and mentally challenged adults.

The adult day center has organized many activities to foster community growth. Many activities involve children from area schools as part of the center's intergenerational program which has been organized. An event such as this one provides an invaluable experience for not only the adults, but the children as well. In addition, the adult day center has started the expansion of its therapeutic recreation outdoors program. Various community groups—churches, service organizations, businesses, and others—have received this project very well, showing their enthusiasm with financial support.

Mr. Romano and the staff at the center has provided respite from 24 hour care for over 600 families in the Greater New Haven area. The programs that they have organized not only foster the growth of these individuals, but it also prevents the premature institutionalization of these individuals as well.

The adult day center has been an innovator in meeting the social and health care needs of this special population by providing services such as medical monitoring and recreational therapies, among others. Thomas Russell Romano, in his position as president and C.E.O. of this organization, has twice been distinguished with Certificate of Award by the Connecticut Department on Aging for his dedication and work with the facility.

In the future, I hope that the work of Mr. Romano shall continue to flourish and expand in scope to reach a more expansive area. On the occasion of the 15th anniversary of the East Shore Regional Adult Day Center, Mr. Romano and the entire staff should be commended on the tireless work and dedication which they have shown in furthering the development of not only the individuals who participate in the program, but the development of the community as well.●

DUCKING ON AFFIRMATIVE ACTION

● Mr. SIMON. Mr. President, the New York Times recently had an editorial titled Ducking on Affirmative Action.

The subject is the refusal of the Supreme Court to consider a decision by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals that would have devastating consequences for our society.

No one should underestimate the shortsightedness and the harm that can come from leaving the Hopwood decision of the fifth circuit stand.

Mr. President, I ask that this article from the New York Times be printed in the RECORD.

The article follows:

DUCKING ON AFFIRMATIVE ACTION

In a hurtful blow to affirmative action in higher education, the Supreme Court said on Monday that it would not hear an appeal by the state of Texas from a lower court ruling that barred public universities from using race as a factor in selecting students. With this sidestepping, the Court left officials in at least three Southern states who are working to open educational opportunities for minorities in an untenable state of uncertainty. It also sowed confusion nationwide—hardly an uplifting way for the Court to finish its term and head into recess. The Court should instead have seized the opportunity to reject the lower court's flawed pronouncement and reaffirmed its historic commitment to carefully designed affirmative action.

The high court seemed insensitive to the long history of racism at the University of Texas Law School, whose affirmative action program was challenged by rejected white applicants, giving rise to the case. As late as 1971, the law school admitted no black students. The Court also ignored the Clinton Justice Department, which filed a brief warning that the "practical effect" of the lower court's holding "will be to return the most prestigious institutions within state university systems to their former 'white' status."

The refusal to hear the case left standing a ruling by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit that caused justifiable consternation in the academic world three months ago. An appellate panel invalidated a special admissions program at the Texas law school aimed at increasing the number of black and Mexican-American students. In doing so, the panel took the gratuitous, additional step of declaring the Supreme Court's landmark 1978 affirmative action decision in the so-called Bakke case no longer good law. That case, involving a suit by a rejected white applicant who sought entry to a California state medical school, resulted in a ruling that barred the use of quotas in affirmative action plans but permitted universities to use race as a factor in choosing among applicants to serve the "compelling interest" of creating a diverse student body.

If Bakke is no longer good law, it is for the Supreme Court to declare. But instead of grabbing the case to reassert Bakke's sound principle, the justices found a way out in the odd posture of the case. In an unusual one-paragraph opinion that was also signed by Justice David Souter, Justice Ruth Blader Ginsburg said that the Court was denying review because the case did not actually present a live controversy. The kind of two-track admissions system that inspired the legal challenge is no longer used or defended by Texas, she explained. Like most other colleges and universities, the University of Texas Law School now uses a single applicant pool, in which race is one factor to be considered among others in choosing among the qualified.

Justice Ginsburg's message, a welcome one, was that the Court's refusal to hear the case should not be read as an endorsement of the Fifth Circuit's analysis. But, in fact, there was a remaining live controversy before the Court in the Fifth Circuit's direction to a state's leading law school to complete-direction to a state's leading law school to completely excluded race as a factor in future admissions. The shame is the Court declined to address it.

Instead, the Court left behind a mess. Its refusal to hear the case has put educational institutions in the three states that make up the Fifth Circuit—Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi—in a terrible spot. They could face punitive damages if they fail to change their practices to conform to an ill-considered ruling that may ultimately be judged an incorrect statement of the law.

Nervous educators elsewhere in the nation can find some comfort at least in Justice Ginsburg's benign explanation. Eventually, this equal rights battle will find its way back to the Supreme Court. Meanwhile, it is premature to give up on affirmative action programs still needed to blot out historic racial bias and promote educational diversity.●

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I do not know if I will take 10 minutes or not, but it was called to my attention this morning when I got back in town that there was an opinion piece that appeared in the Washington Post yesterday, Sunday, written by Mr. Henry Aaron, a senior fellow in the Economic Studies Program at the Brookings Institution. The headline is "The Myths of the Social Security Crisis." Henry Aaron, a distinguished fellow and economist, goes through one, two, three, four, five myths.

I do not know how many of my colleagues or how many people that are concerned about this particular issue read this opinion piece, but I wanted to immediately—and I will come later to the floor to deal with some of the statements Mr. Aaron makes in detail—but wanted to immediately come to the floor and urge colleagues who have increasingly started looking at Social Security as an issue that we need to address currently, to hear the following.

First, Mr. Aaron says myth one is that "Social Security is in crisis." This essentially is a strawman argument, the fact that some people are saying it is in crisis. Destroy that argument, therefore, we do not need to do anything.

Mr. President, I hope we do not have to deal with problems only when they are in crisis. I hope that, particularly with a program that promises retirement payments to people 30, 40, 50, 60, 70 years from now—and understand that every beneficiary of Social Security for the next 70 years is alive today. They may be 5 years old, but they are future beneficiaries. And we need to, whether or not we have the resources or the will, to be able to pay their benefits. So the longer one delays, the more difficult the solution becomes.

Mr. Aaron actually later on said one myth is that it is "the third rail of American politics—touch it and you die." That is another myth he identifies. I do not actually think that is a myth.

The last time we dealt with Social Security substantively was in 1983. We waited until we were almost out of money. Even then we almost did not do anything. Even then it took an independent panel to provide the Congress with protection.

Mr. Aaron says we did it in 1983. The change that was made in 1983 is already under attack. The reason it was changed was the Deficit-Reduction Act. There was a substantial effort to eliminate that change.

So I do not think that the fact that Congress has dealt finally with Social Security is a myth that destroys the myth that this is a third rail, we wait until it is in crisis. If we wait once again until it is in crisis, Mr. President, we are not going to see the same thing we had in 1983. Once the baby boomers have retired, and you look at the numbers that are required to pay out, it is a much different situation than we face today. It is not in crisis. I do not argue that Social Security is in crisis. I am not saying it is contributing to the deficit, which is another myth that is here.

But one of the myths that is not on Mr. Aaron's list—and I have a great respect for Henry Aaron and his views—but one of the myths he does not identify that is the most troubling and difficult of all is that Americans who are beneficiaries today, No. 1, believe that the Social Security Program is a savings program, that all they are getting back is what they paid in.

We have perpetrated that myth very often with television advertising saying: Your Social Security is safe. I will not let anybody touch your Social Security. It is the safest program that we have today. You do not really hear people standing up talking about radical change in the program or cutting current beneficiaries.

But to listen to the organizations who are concerned about this program talk, when they do their direct mail pieces, you would think that every single day somebody is down here on the floor talking about changes in the program.

The program enjoys broad support from the American people. And 85 percent of almost every generation supports Social Security as a program. It has reduced the rates of poverty substantially in this country of people over the age of 65. It has been, in general, a very, very good program.

The myth, though, that it is a savings program encourages people to believe that their payroll tax is going into an account that is reserved for them that they own. It is not being reserved for them. Social Security was designed as a collective transfer program. It is social insurance because there are progressive payments made. The connection between what you receive is based upon your income, not based upon what you have contributed. It is very progressive.

As a consequence, it has been a program that most, I think, look at as a good way to help, and particularly lower income retirees avoid the trauma of living in poverty at the very time when they are no longer able to produce and earn a living.

But it is not savings. That is the most difficult myth of all. There is no account being held here for people that are paying into the program, which leads, Mr. President, to one of the most important reasons that people, like myself, have been arguing for reform.

The first one is, as I said earlier, waiting until the end, as we typically do. Mr. Aaron is basically saying: Wait until there is a crisis. There is no crisis. Why act? Wait until there is a crisis, he is saying. Wait another 30 years until there is a crisis, and then act.

That is foolishness to do that. The people who are going to pay the price for that are not current beneficiaries, people currently receiving payments. But it will be people under the age of 43 who will have to answer the question, "Gee, wait a minute. Do I want, in order to preserve my benefits, my kids to pay that kind of payroll tax?" Look at the kind of payroll tax that they are going to have to pay if you wait for 30 years, if some kind of adjustment is not made before then.

One of the flaws, in my judgment, of the 1983 fix was it said that we are going to raise taxes higher than what is necessary for the first time in the 50-year history of the program. The 1983 fix said, we are going to raise taxes higher than what is necessary to prefund the benefits of the baby-boom generation. Then we immediately—rather than setting it aside to be used for the baby-boom generation—we immediately begin to use it to pay for current expenditures.

Again, I am not arguing that Social Security contributes to the deficit. But I am prepared to argue that people who get paid by the hour, people whose wages are under $62,400 a year, which if you are looking for a definition of the middle class, you just as well said it there, because everybody over $62,400 does not pay that full 12.4 percent. You only pay it on the first $62,400. Anybody who is under $62,400, understand, you are shouldering more deficit reduction than those above because you are paying higher taxes on your payroll than needed to fund current benefits.

I do make the argument that the program needs to be changed sooner rather than later because we want to avoid the crisis, because you want to look out in the future and say that, whether you are a beneficiary who is 20 or 30 or 40, regardless of your age, whatever promise we have on the table we ought to be able to fund it.

I believe it was a mistake to change the law in 1983 to have this account building up to this huge amount, first, because we used it for deficit reduction, but, second, I do not think it makes any sense to say that we are only concerned about the beneficiaries over the next 35, 40 years.

Whatever promise we have on the table we ought to be able to keep for everyone in perpetuity. Any insurance company has to do that, has to abide by that rule, and we should, as well.

To do that, Mr. President, what you need to do is change the funds, so you build it up to a level that keeps it stable and then keeps it there in perpetuity. Whatever payroll taxes are needed, whatever benefits we are promising to pay to future beneficiaries, you should be able to look and have the actuaries run the numbers and say, you have a stable fund, it will be there forever; the benefits that you promised to somebody 20, 30, 40, years ago, you will be able to keep those promises just as you said.

The implication given by Mr. Aaron, and I really do regret it, is that the financial managers in America are putting a lot of pressure on Congress to change this program so that it is privatized. First, Mr. Aaron, in this article, says one of the dirty little secrets about privatization is that it requires a tax increase, and nobody is making a proposal in partial privatization. That comes upfront with that. First, it does not require a tax increase in all cases; second, there is a proposal already. Senator SIMPSON and I introduced legislation that would allow Americans to take 2 percent of their payroll tax and use it, individualize their own wealth. It is fully funded. There is no tax increase in that.

I intend to send a copy to Mr. Aaron so he can evaluate it and determine whether he likes the proposal, or the next time he criticizes Congress or a general audience for not having a specific proposal, at least he can offer one exception.

Mr. President, I think the privatization argument itself is better framed, rather than, Are you for privatization or against it, better framed, Are you for the individualization of the account? By that I mean, under the proposal of Senator SIMPSON and myself, what we do is say there is still a collective payment, still a payment, although it is misdescribed by many people. We will promise to transfer from the wages of people who are working, a fixed payment, fixed tax on their wages, and transfer, in a very progressive way, to people who are retired. That will still be there. You will be eligible for early payment if you want it, or a regular payment, or a late payment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair advises the Senator the 10 minutes have expired.

Mr. KERREY. I end with 30 seconds, by merely saying the personal investment plan, as described by Senator SIMPSON and myself, is not privatization. It is fully funded. And it is, it seems to me, called for in a program which has not been changed fundamentally in 60 years.

I yield the floor.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30
TOMORROW

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate stands in adjournment until 9:30 a.m., Tuesday, July 23, 1996.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 6:52 p.m., adjourned until Tuesday, July 23, 1996, at 9:30 a.m.

HIGH-TECHNOLOGY RESURGENCE IN LOS ANGELES OFFERS PROMISE OF ECONOMIC GROWTH

HON. JANE HARMAN

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Speaker, for some time it has been clear to me that America can no longer afford to maintain two separate industrial bases—one for defense and another for commercial products. The cost and inefficiencies are too great, and we are finally beginning to learn that each sector can leverage the advances of the other.

The key to leveraging is dual-use partnerships, which have been at the core of several small Federal research programs like the Advanced Technology Program, the Technology Reinvestment Program and the Manufacturing Extension Partnership—each of which has been targeted for reduced funding, if not elimination, in this Congress.

Recently, Joel Kotkin contributed an article to the Los Angeles Times noting how recent trends in dual-use research are restoring strength and vibrancy to the economy of southern California. Several of the examples are the result of changing policies and procurement patterns in the U.S. military. More importantly, all are examples of how businesses in southern California are taking advantage of the rich defense industry heritage and the continuing high quality of workers—an example that may be a model for other parts of the country.

I commend the article to my colleagues:

[From the Los Angeles Times, July 7, 1996]

THE "SILVER" AGE OF STATE'S DEFENSE-AEROSPACE ECONOMY

(By Joel Kotkin)

The end of the Cold War seemed to mark the demise of Southern California's defense and aerospace-driven "golden age," throwing the state into its worst recession in decades. But the region's heritage as the world leader in military and space technology is now poised to boost its burgeoning information age economy.

Indeed, the announcement on Tuesday that Lockheed-Martin will build the new X-33 reusable spacecraft at its Palmdale facility, creating about 2,000 new jobs, fits into a wider picture of a restored Southland aerospace and defense industry.

Between the late 1980s and last year, roughly 55%, or 175,000, California aerospace-related workers lost their jobs. This year, despite widespread predictions of 20,000 additional layoffs, the industry seems to have stabilized; economist Stephen Levy sees the once-reeling sector creating net new jobs through 1998.

Nowhere will this reversal of fortune be more positively felt than in the Los Angeles area—where 80% of all the state's aerospace job losses occurred, including 50,000 in 1993 alone. Even as the two other pegs of the local economy—the "creative industries" and international trade—have grown robustly, the depth of the defense-aerospace downturn seriously slowed growth in the critical high-technology sector.

The recent recovery in aerospace and defense electronics is critical because it has the potential to restore the region's once-strong reputation as a center for technology development. During the economic free-fall of the early 1990s, Southern California was viewed nationally—and often viewed itself—as a technological laggard behind such areas as the Bay Area, Seattle and even Utah. This image of Southern California as little more than a "tinsel town" surrounded by Third World misery hurt the recruitment and promotional efforts of technology-related companies in such disparate fields as computer software and multimedia.

But today, with the resurgence in high-tech aerospace and defense electronics, Southern California's position as a leading edge economic region is being restored. Los Angeles County now has an annual job growth rate equal to Seattle and higher than San Francisco—both widely regarded as boomtowns. For the first time in years, L.A. County's employment engine is running hotter than that in suburban Orange County and the Inland Empire.

The improving defense-aerospace picture stems, in part, from changing federal procurement patterns, growing diversification into commercial fields by local defense companies and increased aircraft sales. Perhaps most important, the turn-around reflects a new emphasis in the U.S. military: away from large-scale weapons systems and toward information technologies. This shift represent, in the words of one analyst at the Army War College, "a revolution in military affairs."

The military's new direction has played directly to Southern California's strength in defense electronics. It is increasingly clear that the Persian Gulf War, with its reliance on satellites and "smart" weapons, represented only the first phase of a continuing "digitalization" of military systems—encompassing sophisticated battlefield communications systems, satellites and anti-missile technology.

Engineers and scientists at TRW, for example, are working on a series of advanced systems for the army's elite Force XXI, which is expected to become the model for the new, "digitized" army. Among the projects being worked on at TRW, most of whose defense operations are in the South Bay, are a new system of computer communications devices for mechanized forces; a special high-frequency identification system designed to prevent "friendly fire" accidents, and laser technologies designed to shoot down incoming missiles from terrorists.

As a result, TRW—a firm that cut roughly 9,000 jobs during the early 1990s—added more than 1,200 last year, largely high-skilled, well-paid workers. And it is planning to add another 1,300 this year. The decision to grow in Southern California is due largely to the region's work force—which leads the nation in mathematicians, engineers and skilled technologists. As an overall scientific research center, the Southern California region ranks third nationally, behind only San Francisco and Boston.

"We chose to stay where are—and we have asked the question—because fundamentally the No. 1 driver is the pool of technical talent," explains Fred Brown, TRW group vice president for Space and Electronics. More than half of his division's recent hires, he estimates, come from local colleges and universities.

Much the same process can be seen at other key defense firms in Southern California. Rockwell recently added 400 new jobs at its Anaheim Autonetics and Missile Systems plant and Hughes Electronics is expected to add another thousand workers this year. Although this is not the en masse hiring of factory workers that occurred in the 1980s and earlier, it signals a marked improvement in market conditions for the region's scientific, engineering and technical talent.

Contributing much to the improving prospect has been the ability of defense firms, both large and small, to shift technologies into commercial markets. In contrast to the heavily hyped but relatively ineffective government "conversion" programs, such as the Calstart electric car effort, Los Angeles' real defense restructuring has been a classically capitalist "creative destruction"—with the associated dose of pain.

Take TRW's gallium arsenide technology, developed for military use in satellite and communications systems. It now has large new markets in such commercial areas as cellular phones, leading TRW to consider keeping its Redondo Beach foundry on 24-hour shifts to meet both commercial and military demand.

Similarly, Hughes, based in El Segundo, has focused on its satellite technology and its successful Direct TV enterprise, turning the defense firm into something of a telecommunications superpower. Defense has dropped from nearly two-thirds of the company's from nearly two-thirds of the company's revenues in the late 1980s to roughly 40%. Rockwell, another aerospace powerhouse, has cut its dependence on defense spending over the past decade from 50% to 15%. High-tech electronics now account for the largest share of company revenues.

An equally dramatic conversion has taken place among a plethora of smaller technology companies. Nurtured by research monies from the military or NASA, these firms are now shifting into commercial markets.

Particularly promising are a group of companies now using military-derived simulation and image processing technology to enter such growth fields as special effects and educational software. Raj Dutt, President of R&D Laboratories in Culver City, has spent a decade creating advanced satellite systems for the military. Now the same technology can also be used to carry heavy data loads, something of increasing interest to telecommunications and entertainment firms.

Dutt, who expects to boost his nondefense share of business from 10% to nearly half over the next two years, suggests the biggest problem for companies like his may be "cultural." Essentially, defense firms, large and small, must move away from their ultrametriculous, 8-to-4 culture, to the more fast-paced environment characteristic of the commercial sector. "We have to learn how to compete in the real world," says Dutt, a Caltech-trained physicist.

Yet, like RDL, many smaller defense firms find confronting reality not only necessary, but profitable. Perceptronics, based in Woodland Hills, is now using its warfare-honed simulation system for such things as electronic training systems for commercial trucking companies. Illusion Inc., a small contractor in Westlake Village, is now taking "virtual reality" technology, developed for designing aircraft and military training exercises, into such diverse venues as museums and movie special effects. In each of the past three years, Illusion Inc. has doubled its revenues and expects to expand to 50 employees by 1997, up from its current 20. "The future for companies like ours," said Peter Beale, Illusion Inc.'s chairman, "is to combine the creative vision of Hollywood with the engineering vision of the defense industry."

Such new uses for military technology and talents could also prove critical in providing the Southland economy with an important new source of high-wage jobs that lessen its current dependence on the volatile film industry or the always uncertain course of foreign trade. As Southern California begins to harvest the overlooked fruits of its rich defense industry heritage, it may enjoy the broad, diversified economic recovery that many thought could never happen here again.

HON. JOHN J. DUNCAN, JR.

OF TENNESSEE

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I recently received a copy of an article that was written by Ross Booher and Kevin W. Jones entitled, "Ending Student Subsidies". One young man is currently attending the University of Tennessee Law School, and the other is just entering. Both Ross and Kevin are not only excellent students, but they are citizens who I am certain will contribute greatly to our society and its future.

I request that a copy of this article, "Ending Student Subsidies" be placed in the RECORD at this point, so I can call it to the attention of my colleagues and other readers of the RECORD.

[From the Chronicle of Higher Education, Nov. 24, 1995]

ENDING STUDENT SUBSIDIES

(By Ross I. Booher and Kevin W. Jones)

Although college lobbyists apparently have persuaded Congress to abandon plans to eliminate the federal interest subsidy on guaranteed student loans this year, lawmakers are likely to scrutinize the program again in the future as they search for ways to cut wasteful government spending. We urge them to do so. Even though we are students who currently enjoy the benefits of this taxpayer largess, we believe that the interest subsidy should be dropped. American taxpayers spend almost $2.5-billion a year for interest on guaranteed loans while the borrowers are students and for six months after they graduate. The borrowers never repay any of this interest.

We believe that this subsidy amounts to a taxpayer-financed gift to people who neither need it nor deserve it. Eliminating the subsidy would not make student loans or a college education less available, because the loans themselves still could be obtained. Further, the maximum amount that could be borrowed would remain the same; students would not pay any interest while they were in school; and they would continue to have a six-month grace period after graduation before the began repayment. The only change we suggest is that once students begin repayment, they pay all the interest that has accrued. The interest should be added to the student's debt, not to the national debt.

We believe that students, and everyone else, would be better served by a stronger economy. We are willing to "sacrifice," not out of altruism, but because we and everyone else will benefit from a national economy not bogged down by federal debt. According to the U.S. Treasury Department's latest estimates, the federal government is nearly $5-trillion in debt. Unless we cut all but the most-essential spending the interest on the national debt alone will soon consume almost all federal tax revenue. This scenario augurs ill for the schooled and unschooled alike? All federally financed programs would be endangered.

Many who oppose ending the subsidy fear that, without it, students from lower- and even middle-income backgrounds will be unable to afford higher education. This fear is unfounded. Students who are willing to borrow money to pay for college still would be able to do so, but, as the people who benefit from the loan (and the education), they simply would have more to repay after graduation. Isn't it reasonable for the recipient of education to have to pay for it, particularly when the financial rewards of college continue to far outweigh the costs?

The U.S. Department of Education calculates that eliminating the federal interest subsidy would increase the loan repayment of an undergraduate student who chooses to borrow the maximum amount available during his or her undergraduate year by about $69 per month during the standard 10-year repayment period. Even this, the highest possible increase, would easily fit into the budget of most college graduates—who, according to the most recent census data available, earn $1,039 per month more than the average high-school graduate. The vast majority of undergraduates, however, borrow far less than the maximum loan amount, and thus the increases in their payments would be smaller.

What about more-expensive graduate and professional degrees, such as those in medicine and law? Will students be able to afford them without the interest subsidy? Again, the answer is yes. The Department of Education calculates that eliminating the interest subsidy would increase the payments of the average student who receives Ph.D., and who chooses to borrow the maximum amount available, by about $382 per month during the standard 10-year repayment period. This is a great deal of money, but, according to the U.S. Census Bureau, the average Ph.D. recipient earns $3,853 per month and the average recipient of a professional degree earns $4,961 per month. The comparable figures for people with a bachelor's degree and people with a high-school diploma are $2,116 and $1,077, respectively.

Looking at the big picture, those who borrow the maximum amount of $138,500 to obtain a doctoral degree enable themselves to earn an average of $1.4-million more during their lifetime than the average high-school graduate. Recipients of a professional degree in fields such as law and medicine earn, on average, a staggering $2.2-million more than the average high-school graduate.

Organizations lobbying to preserve the interest subsidy, such as the American Medical Student Association and the Student Osteopathic Medical Association, point out that, in the years immediately following graduation, many people who earn a graduate or professional degree earn very little relative to the amount of debt they have incurred. According to the A.M.S.A., medical doctors can earn an average of about $2,500 per month during residency training. The

A.M.S.A. currently argues that it is difficult to make payments on a $100,000-plus student loan with such a salary.

For this very reason, the government provides the option of temporarily or permanently making payments on a 30-year repayment schedule. This method dramatically lowers monthly payments, by spreading them out over a longer period. When borrowers complete their postgraduate training and begin to realize the financial rewards of their education investment, they may choose to return to the standard 10-year repayment schedule, thus lowering the total interest they will pay. We believe that this option makes eliminating the subsidy relatively painless, even for those whose earnings are not very high immediately after they receive their advanced degree.

Some supporters of the interest subsidy point out that not all jobs requiring a college education pay the Census Bureau's "average salary." Wouldn't losing the interest subsidy hurt students who choose to incur student-loan debts and then enter occupations that pay very little? Again, provisions already are in place to address that concern. First, most students now begin repaying their loans six months after they graduate, but longer deferments are granted for a variety of reasons—including unemployment, a return to full- or half-time student status, acceptance of an academic fellowship, and economic hardship. Further, if graduate serve in a public-service position (for instance, as a nurse, public-school teacher, member of the armed forces, or peace Corps or Vista volunteer), their loans may be partially or completely paid by taxpayers—who receive obvious benefits from the graduates' service.

What about students who borrow because they want to attend an expensive private college or university, but then decide to enter a low-paying field not included in the public-service category above? Such students may find that, in a world of limited resources, they cannot always have everything they want: They may have to choose between pursuing a low-paying career and attending an expensive college.

Of course, they may decide that they want to do both badly enough to be willing to take out student loans and accept a 30-year repayment schedule and a lower standard of living. If that is their choice, it should be their responsibility to cope with the consequences, not that of the American taxpayer.

MOLLIE BEATTIE WILDERNESS AREA ACT

SPEECH OF

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 16, 1996

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, on June 27, 1996, we lost Mollie Beattie, a friend and an ally, to a battle with brain cancer. Head of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service [USFWS], Mollie worked diligently to preserve our ecosystem and protect it for the future of our Nation. As the first woman to head the USFWS, she worked wonders shrinking budgets while still expanding the Federal refuge system.

A philosophy major at Marymount College in Tarrytown, N.Y. Mollie later found herself involved in an Outward Bound course, through which she rediscovered her love for nature, which led her to a career as an environmental official. Her philosophy on the environment changed the way that the USFWS worked, by providing for the ecosystem as a whole instead of dividing the country into parts.

In particular, Mollie was instrumental in helping me create legislation to authorize the purchase of Shadmoor in Montauk, Long Island. When acquired, this land will be preserved as a national wildlife refuge. Thanks to her help and dedication, this legislation is now law and we are one step closer to the preservation of Shadmoor.

The entire Nation may not realize the extent to which Mrs. Beattie has touched our lives, but those who knew her personally and knew what she worked for will miss her dedication and her spirit. May she rest in peace.

JESSE OWENS' LEGACY STANDS: A SPECIAL SALUTE TO OLYMPIC COMPETITORS

HON. LOUIS STOKES

OF OHIO

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, a few days ago, the games of the 1996 summer Olympics began. The city of Atlanta is hosting the biggest Olympics ever with more than 10,000 athletes from 197 countries gathered for the centennial games. This includes an Olympic-record 4,000 women athletes who are competing in Atlanta. The 16 days of Olympic competition promises to be exciting from start to finish.

I am proud that the 1996 Olympics include outstanding athletes from the great State of Ohio. Our State is represented in many of the Olympic events, including gymnastics, swimming, track and field, diving, archery, and team handball, just to name a few. I take pride in saluting these outstanding athletes as they strive for victory in the Olympic arena. I also salute the Olympic team coaches and assistant coaches who were selected from the State of Ohio.

Mr. Speaker, as the Olympic games get underway, many articles are being written about previous Olympic champions. I read with interest an article which appeared in the July 15, 1996, edition of USA Today. In that article it is reported that the sports staff was asked to vote on the greatest moments in Olympic history. They were unanimous in selecting Jesse Owens' 1936 performance as the one that best signifies the Olympic spirit.

We are reminded that 60 years ago, the world watched as Jesse Owens became the first person in the history of the Olympics to capture four gold medals. In accomplishing this feat, Jesse Owens, the son of a sharecropper and grandson of a slave, shattered Adolf Hitler's hopes for Aryan supremacy in the games. Owens also captured the hearts of the world with his stunning performance and remarkable grace.

Jesse Owens died in 1980 at the age of 66. Throughout his life, he continued to exhibit the type of spirit that made him an Olympic hero and American legend. Jesse Owens is perhaps the greatest athlete who ever lived. I am proud that this Olympic hero was reared and attended school in my congressional district. I am also proud to be the author of legislation which awarded Congress' highest honor, the Congressional Gold Medal, to Jesse Owens posthumously.

Mr. Speaker, I want to share the USA Today article which is entitled, "Owens' Legacy Stands," with my colleagues and others throughout the Nation. I applaud the athletes who are gathered in Atlanta for the summer games. It is my hope that they will be inspired by Jesse Owens and his achievements. As we celebrate the centennial Olympics, we pay tribute to the memory of this great American.

[From USA Today, July 15, 1996]

OWENS' LEGACY STANDS

HIS SUPREME STATEMENT STILL INSPIRES IN '96

(By Gary Mihoces)

Adolf Hitler planned a 400,000-seat stadium in Germany to host the Olympics for all time, according to his chief architect. At the 1936 Berlin Games, he settled for a 110,000-seat stadium to showcase his belief in Aryan supremacy.

But Jesse Owens made his statement at those '36 Games with four gold medals in the sprints and long jump, a track and field feat matched only by Carl Lewis during the boycotted 1984 Games.

With 16 days of Olympic competition about to begin in Atlanta, USA TODAY staffers selected 16 moments best signifying the Olympic spirit.

Owens' performance was rated the ultimate. His legacy—not Hitler's giant stadium—looms over every Olympics.

"I don't think I've been anywhere (that) anybody who is a sports fan has not heard of Jesse Owens," says Harrison Dillard, who was inspired by Owens to become an Olympic track champion himself in 1948 and 1952. "It's not only what he did, but the circumstances under which he did it, right there in front of Hitler."

Owens, son of an Alabama sharecropper and grandson of a slave, represented the USA when blacks were barred from major pro sports at home. He competed in a Berlin where Hitler's brand of racial superiority was official policy.

Hitler already had stripped Jews of citizenship, but anti-Jewish signs were taken down during the Games. Nazi newspapers downplayed their references to the "black auxiliaries" of the U.S. team.

Owens had been a sensation at Ohio State, where in a 1935 meet he broke three world records and tied another.

"He was only 23. He was very focused on why he was there, to do the best he could in his events," says Owens' daughter, Marlene Rankin. "I don't think he was very conscious of what was happening politically."

One popular story was that Hitler snubbed Owens by refusing to shake his hand. According to the book The Nazi Olympics by Richard Mandell, the International Olympic Committee sent word to Hitler after the first day's competition that "he should congratulate all or none" of the medalists and that Hitler chose the latter.

So when Owens won the 100 on the second day, he wasn't greeted by Hitler, "nor was any other winner on that or any of the following days," Mandell writes.

Owens later said, "It was all right with me. I didn't go to Berlin to shake hands with him anyway."

But Owens was among 10 black members of the U.S. track and field team who combined for 13 medals.

That "highly annoyed" Hitler, former Nazi architect Albert Speer wrote in his memoir Inside the Third Reich. Speer said Hitler decided black athletes "must be excluded from future games."

Speer also designed the giant stadium Hitler had planned for Nuremberg to host the Games for "all time to come."

Owens' second gold came in the long jump. But he fouled on his first two qualifying jumps and had one more. German jumper Luz Long reportedly suggested Owens place a towel behind the takeoff board to use as his starting point to avoid fouling.

That story has been refuted by many, but Owens easily made his third qualifying jump and won the final with an Olympic-record jump of 26 feet, 5¼ inches. Long hurried to congratulate Owens and they left the field arm in arm, Mandell writes. Long was later killed in the war.

On Aug. 5, Owens won the 200 meters in an Olympic-record 20.7 seconds. He expected that to be the end of his competition, but he and Ralph Metcalfe were added to the four-by-100-meter relay team to replace Marty Glickman and Sam Stoller.

Glickman and Stoller were Jewish. There were reports they were bumped off the relay team because U.S. officials bowed to pressures from the Nazis. There were other claims that it was simply a matter of ensuring the victory.

Owens was lead runner on the relay team, which set a world record.

Just after his Olympic victories, Owens ran afoul of the Amateur Athletic Union. When he declined to continue in a European tour the AAU had arranged to offset Olympic expenses, he was suspended from U.S. amateur competition.

In the years after the Olympics, his ventures ranged from running exhibition races against horses to a failed dry cleaning business. However, he later found a niche as a public speaker and goodwill ambassador until his death in 1980 at age 66 of lung cancer.

Rankin is executive director of the Chicago-based Jesse Owens Foundation, which has several scholarship programs.

"He always believed that the youth of any country is its greatest resource," she says.

Dillard says Owens later worked at a recreation center in Cleveland. "He had a rough time, particularly early on," says Dillard. "The endorsements were not there, and high-profile companies were not using African-Americans."

Commercial use of Owens' name or likeness now is controlled by CMG Worldwide of Indianapolis, under agreement with Owens' heirs.

But Rankin says Owens never despaired that he wasn't born in an era of more lucrative rewards.

"Money didn't mean an awful lot to him," she says. "He liked what it would buy . . . But he was not extravagant. He loved the sport, the discipline of training and the challenge to do it better. Not better than someone else, just best for yourself. And his best just happened to be better than most."

TRIBUTE TO VILLAGE OF ORCHARD PARK ON ITS 75TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. JACK QUINN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. QUINN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer my enthusiastic congratulations to the village of Orchard Park, in New York's 30th Congressional District, on the occasion of its 75th anniversary.

Founded in the early 19th century by Quakers, Orchard Park originally fell under the charter of the town of East Hamburg, NY. A group of concerned citizens petitioned the town of East Hamburg for the incorporation of the village of Orchard Park on August 21, 1921, and on October 18, the measure was subsequently ratified by a vote of 155 to 96.

Throughout its celebrated history, the village of Orchard Park has steadfastly demonstrated its distinct sense of civic loyalty and pride through its dedication to local education, financial development in its business and retail districts, and careful maintenance of the village's original charm of 1921.

As a former teacher in the Orchard Park Central School District, I have seen first hand the village's dedicated commitment to its residents, distinguished community service, and strong sense of community spirit and pride.

Mr. Speaker, today I join with the residents of the village of Orchard Park, village Mayor Patricia Dickman, the members of the village board, and indeed, our entire western New York community in warm tribute to the village of Orchard Park on the occasion of this historic anniversary, and send my personal best wishes for continued prosperity in the future.

CONGRATULATIONS TO MINISTER JOHN CHANG

HON. EARL F. HILLIARD

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to see that Mr. John Chang has been appointed the new foreign minister of the Republic of China.

Educated at Georgetown University, Mr. John Chang is a career diplomat. His most recent post was minister of the Overseas Chinese Commission, Republic of China.

Minister Chang speaks fluent English and French. An avid swimmer, he also excels in tennis and golf. He is married and has three children.

Under Minister Chang's leadership, I believe that the Republic of China and the United States will become even closer partners in trade and other matters vital to the interests of both nations. It is my personal hope that the Republic of China and the People's Republic of China will soon engage in serious discussions—as equal partners—of their eventual reunification and that the Republic of China will soon be able to participate in the activities of the World Trade Organization and the United Nations.

In the meantime I send my best wishes and congratulations to Foreign Minister John Chang of the Republic of China.

INTRODUCTION OF STUDENT DEBT REDUCTION ACT OF 1996

HON. WILLIAM F. GOODLING

OF PENNSYLVANIA

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, today I am happy to introduce a bill cosponsored by Representatives GREENWOOD, MCKEON, FATTAH, FAWELL, CLINGER, and GEKAS which corrects a technical problem with the language of the Higher Education Act that thwarts competition among lenders in the Federal Family Education Loan Program and results in higher costs for students in need of unsubsidized student loans.

The Higher Education Act as interpreted by the U.S. Department of Education allows lenders to pay origination fees—3 percent of the loan amount—charged a student at the time as subsidized loan is obtained; one where the Federal Government pays the interest on the student's behalf while in school. Unfortunately, the Department has interpreted the language of the Higher Education Act to prohibit lenders from paying origination fees—3 percent of the loan amount—charged a student if the student obtains an unsubsidized loan one where the student is responsible for all the interest.

The result is that student's obtaining unsubsidized student loans are forced to pay higher up-front costs simply because of an interpretation that we believe is incorrect.

Under the bill being introduced today, anyone may pay the origination fees on behalf of the student borrower. This is particularly significant in Pennsylvania because of the loan programs administered by the Pennsylvania Higher Education Assistance Agency. For the 1995–96 school year—prior to the Department's ruling on the origination fee issue—students and families in Pennsylvania had an extra $2 million available for immediate educational expenses due to a special loan program which reduced a student's origination fee from 3 to 1 percent. More than 36,000 students received this benefit for the 1995–96 school year. If we allow the Department of Education's interpretation to stand, more than 9,300 students, in Pennsylvania will have to forego the benefit of reduced up-front fees and we don't think that should happen.

The great thing about this proposal is that it doesn't cost the Federal Government a dime, while student's reap the benefits of competition in the student loan program.

And this doesn't just help Pennsylvania students. Lenders across the country can offer to pay a student's origination fees so students have more cash to pay for their higher education expenses. Reduced interest rates are already being offered by many lenders as a reward for making monthly payments on time and this is also a feature offered by the Pennsylvania program which helps students save a little money during the repayment period. The combined effect of reduced up-front costs and lower interest rates during repayment make all student loans more affordable and manageable for students.

I am particularly pleased to include for the RECORD, a letter from the Pennsylvania Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators who have expressed their wholehearted support for this legislation. These are the people on the front lines in the student financial aid office who daily advise and counsel our college students on ways to finance a college education and I am delighted to have their support.

PENNSYLVANIA ASSOCIATION OF STUDENT FINANCIAL AID ADMINISTRATORS,

July 3, 1996.

Hon. WILLIAM F. GOODLING,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE GOODLING: The Pennsylvania Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators (PASFAA) is a professional organization dedicated to promoting access to higher education by providing financial assistance to those who might otherwise be unable to attend. With more than 550 members, the PASFAA membership encompasses virtually every segment of higher education and every component of student financial assistance.

The purpose of this letter is to express PASFAA's wholehearted support for legislation which would allow for a reduction in the cost of origination fees for borrowers of unsubsidized student loans. Such legislation would enable lenders and guarantors to reduce the up front cost of student loans, thereby increasing the amount of money students would have available to them to meet their educational expenses for the 1996–97 academic year. In doing so, lenders would be providing a direct financial benefit to students without putting a corresponding burden on the federal budget or the taxpayers, making this legislation even more attractive.

This legislation would provide an immediate benefit to Pennsylvania residents receiving loan assistance through PHEAA's Keystone and Keystone Direct Loan Programs. In addition, lenders nationwide would now have the opportunity to offer low-cost loans by reducing origination fees if they so desire.

PASFAA deeply appreciates your support of student aid programs, and looks forward to working with you on this and other legislation designed to benefit college students. If we can be of any further assistance to you, please do not hesitate to contact any of our officers.

Sincerely,

GEORGIA K. PRELL,
PASFAA President.

TRIBUTE PAID TO MARJORIE JEFFRIES OF MILTON, MA

HON. JOHN JOSEPH MOAKLEY

OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to a woman who embodies beauty in culture, in nature, in life.

Marjorie Jeffries is a longtime resident in Milton, MA, who has never stopped living by her own advice: "Pay attention to the Milton community and give yourself to it."

In 1953, she and her husband David transformed a densely wooded piece of land into a nature paradise, complete with gardens of perennials, rocks, daylilies, and irises. The Jeffries built their home here, under a canopy of red oak and white pine trees, and protected the land with a conservation order. The deer, foxes, skunks, and chipmunks who live in the area roam freely here, and will be able to enjoy it forever. People, dogs, and horses who passed the house on their way to the Blue Hills often stop to mingle with the Jeffries or the animals in their yard.

After listening to the music that birds contributed to her backyard, Marjorie Jeffries decided to contribute some music as well.

Thirty-nine years after graduating Bryn Mawr College with a bachelor of arts degree, she earned a music major equivalent at Wellesley College. She then earned a master of arts in music composition from Connecticut College.

She continued her music studies, and has become a widely recognized composer and flutist. She has received grants and commissions for several of her pieces, and earned a citation from Gov. Michael Dukakis. She is a member of the Longy School of Music orchestra, and has served as the composer in residence for the Milton Public Schools.

Marjorie has always wanted others to be able to share in the joy of arts. In 1974, she founded the Milton Performing Arts to provide an outlet for the citizens of Milton to pursue their interest in writing, arts and music in an open forum. In 1992, she was designated as the Artist of the Month by the Milton Art Association for her "Variations of the View from Chickatawbut Hill," which was displayed at the Milton Public Library.

In addition to her contributions to nature and art, Marjorie has been active in many other communities. As a regular participant in town meetings, her opinions have garnered respect, despite the fact that she ruffles the feathers of State and national politicians on occasion. She also is a trustee of the Milton Public Library, and has worked to make the library a better tool of knowledge for the residents of Milton.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that we could all do well to follow Marjorie Jeffries' advice, to pay attention to our communities, and give ourselves to them.

OREGON'S WELFARE-TO-WORK PROGRAM

HON. ELIZABETH FURSE

OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Ms. FURSE. Mr. Speaker, Oregon has an outstanding welfare-to-work program in place that has allowed Oregon to achieve one of the Nation's steepest declines in welfare cases. Since March 1994, our welfare caseload has dropped from 44,000 to 32,000, and State officials expect that these numbers will fall to less than 25,000 in the next 4 years. Most of the credit for this success goes to our vigorous JOBS welfare-to-work program and the Oregon Health Plan, which provides health insurance to people who otherwise would go on welfare.

Oregon has received waivers from the Federal Government which allow sweeping changes in our welfare system. These waivers enable Oregon to require all welfare recipients to seek jobs to move their families out of poverty. The goal is for families on welfare to take control of their lives and avoid long-term dependence on welfare. Like the Castle-Tanner substitute and the underlying bill, Oregon's JOBS program shares the expectation of aggressively moving people from welfare to work. All three also emphasize aggressive child support collection, employment supports such as child-care subsidies, and can require teen parents to live in safe, supervised settings. I am pleased that the Republicans' Medicaid reform plan, which I strongly opposed in the Commerce Committee, has been dropped from this bill.

These bills, as well as the one being debated in the Senate, contain language that enables States with waivers to continue their existing welfare programs. In addition, the legislation states that if new requirements are put into law, they will not apply to States with waivers. In order for Oregon to make the strides that we are committed to, it is essential that this language be maintained and that it include States whose waivers were approved by September 30 of this year. I will work with Members in the other body to make sure this provision remains in the conference report on the bill.

Oregon is a national leader in welfare reform. I support reforming our welfare system and am committed to moving the process forward. I call on other States to match Oregon's achievements in sensible, humane welfare reform.

SCANA CORP. RECEIVES THE COMMON GOALS AWARD

HON. FLOYD SPENCE

OF SOUTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize the SCANA Corp., which serves the Second Congressional District of South Carolina, for receiving the Common Goals Award from the Edison Electric Institute [EEI] last week in Washington. The award, was given for outstanding achievement in the field of educational partnerships, was bestowed on the SCANA Corp. for its sponsorship of "The Coach," a computer equipped traveling classroom. "The Coach," which is staffed with State adult literacy specialists, travels throughout South Carolina to offer free training to employers for the development of adult literacy programs for their employees. In presenting the award, EEI President Tom Kuhn noted that, "by helping people improve themselves, SCANA opens the way to a more highly skilled workforce, a more competitive economy, and a better quality of life."

Mr. Speaker, the SCANA Corp. is to be commended on the contributions that "The Coach" has made to increasing adult literacy in South Carolina. As it celebrates its 150th anniversary, the SCANA Corp. can take great pride in its history of service to the people of the Palmetto State.

H.R. 3814—COMMERCE, JUSTICE,
STATE APPROPRIATIONS

HON. CARDISS COLLINS

OF ILLINOIS

Mrs. COLLINS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to revise and extend my remarks. Wake up America. Wake up and see what the Dole-Gingrich Republicans are trying to do to you again. Just when you had thought the Republicans had learned some lessons of last year when they, over and over again, shut down the Federal Government, while assiduously trying to dictate their extremist conservatism on everyone, and unabashedly trying to deny personal liberties and restrict public services, they are back at it again. I must say, they are a persistent bunch. In these proposed appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, State, Justice, and major related agencies, the Dole-Gingrich cabal is attempting to legislate morality and economies through the appropriations process. Tucked neatly among programs in this bill that most people recognize, that is, the Census Bureau, F.B.I., Drug Enforcement Administration, Immigration and Naturalization Service, and the U.S. Supreme Court, are severe levels of funding reductions that are undoubtedly designed to strangle the Small Business Administration [SBA], the Securities and Exchange Commission [SEC], the Minority Business Development Agency [MBDA], and the Legal Services Corporation [LSC].

Funding for the Small Business Administration, is slashed by almost $21 million below last year's appropriations, the SEC is cut by $225.1 million less than requested by President Clinton's budget, and the Legal Services Corporation is under funded by over $199 million. Since the Dole-Gingrich Republicans have been unable to kill them politically in an up and down fight on neither policy nor politics, they're trying to severely maim them by cutting off the checking account that funds them. Wake up America, look around you, and think about what the conservative Dole-Gingrich folk are doing to America's economy and to the right of every American to have legal counsel.

It is easy to understand why the Dole-Gingrich Republicans slashed the social programs in the Department of Health and Human Services appropriations a few days ago: there weren't many fat-cat special interests supported in there. Frankly, I expected the appropriations bills for fiscal year 1997 to be not quite as radically conservative as those they forced through Congress for fiscal year 1996 which caused the Federal Government to shutdown. However, they have in this session already passed several bills that cut spending in domestic areas that are important to hard-working Americans, that are vitally significant to the social, economic and personal well-being of this country: education, health services and research, housing, and transportation, just to name a few.

So, here we go again. This fiscal year 1997 appropriations bill for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, State, and related agencies is for $29.5 billion. While this is a substantial amount of money, one must remember that it takes a lot of money to fund a Federal Government as responsive and responsible as ours ought to be. Yet, this bill is for $2.1 billion less than the President has, after careful consideration, determined that he needs in order to be able to carry out plans and programs necessary to fight crime, create jobs and train the necessary workforce, to prevent and address family and societal violence, drugs and illegal immigration. Those are critical imperatives, but they are not the only priorities that need funding and are not all the priorities of my constituents in the Seventh District of Illinois. Among my constituents are the richest and the poorest of America, and they report to me that they need people programs that benefit women, minorities, and persons with very limited incomes, as well as the several very important agencies that severely effect them all, but that are targeted for funding cuts.

For example, the Legal Services Corporation [LSC] is an agency that provides free and reduced-fee legal services to low-income individuals. By proposing dramatic cuts in funding for the LSC, the Republicans risk the following results: (1) a 2 million reduction in the number of clients served; (2) a 50 percent decrease in the number of neighborhood offices (from, 1100 in fiscal year 1995 to 550); (3) a cut by more than half, in the number of LSC lawyers available to provide legal services; and (4) a startling cut-off of legal assistance to clients in thousands of communities across the Nation. This Republican fiscal 1997 appropriations of $141 million for LSC is a devastating cut from the fiscal year 1995 funding level of $415 million, and is unquestionably meant to destroy the Legal Services Corporation. Wake up Americans. Open your eyes and see what the Dole-Gingrich Republicans who control this body have just done. They have defeated an amendment to restore reasonable funding to the LSC that would have prevented the virtual abandonment of the longstanding Federal commitment to the legal protection of working poor Americans, including victims of spousal and child abuse, dead-beat parents who run out on the child support obligations, and victims of consumer fraud.

Another program gutted by the Republicans and left to bleed a slow death, is the Minority Business Development Administration [MBDA] within the Department of Commerce. The mission of the MBDA is to work to develop and support the successes and increase competitive opportunities for minority-owned businesses—to ensure that minority Americans can participate in the economy not just as workers, but also as entrepreneurs and global leaders. The MBDA supports citizens who may be first generation business owners in their efforts to succeed. Created in 1969 by President Nixon, the MBDA provides technical assistance to minority entrepreneurs that greatly increase their ability to compete in domestic and international markets. While minorities make up 25 percent of the U.S. population, they represent only 9 percent of the Nation's business owners. MBDA has a proven record of leveraging scarce public resources by partnering with the private sector to increase capital and market opportunities in underutilized business communities, and yet the Republicans who control this body are so determined to render ineffectual a good program that was created by their own President Nixon, that they have also rejected an effort to restore reasonable funding for the MBDA.

There are many valuable programs that should be funded under this bill; however, the appropriations levels proposed by the Republicans will only weaken, injure and damage the successful efforts underway to bring about a reduction in waste, fraud, and abuse of the public trust. I urge my colleagues to defeat this bill so that we can get back to the negotiating table in the best interest of all Americans. If this bill should be passed by the Congress, I will urge the President to veto it and send it back to the drawing board.

THANK YOU DONALD E. BECKER

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, many of us believe that public service is among the greatest calling that exists. On July 23, many fortunate people who live in Genesee Township will come together to celebrate the remarkable more than 25 years of service that Donald E. Becker has provided as the township's treasurer.

Donald Becker's devotion to his community is easy to understand. His grandfather, August George Becker was the township supervisor from 1922 to 1926, and his father, Walter Becker, was in the Genesee County Sheriff's Department. Donald Becker was the co-founder of the all volunteer Kearsley Genesee Rescue Squad, as well as its treasurer. He has also been tremendously involved in the Genesee County Treasurer/Clerk Association, the Genesee Parks Commission, the Genesee County Metropolitan Planning Commission, and the region 5 planning commission.

With all of this professional involvement, it is remarkable to note that Donald Becker is most noted for his personal style of dealing with people. For example, he hand-delivers checks for the school districts because he believes it's important for the checks to get there. He has been involved on so many committees because he believes that you have to get to know people in order to be effective as a community leader.

He has been careful with taxpayers dollars, leading efforts to allow for the investment of local funds in savings accounts, allowing interest earnings to both supplement local revenues, and to help reduce the need for any additional tax assessments.

With all of the wonderful public activities that this man has undertaken, it is also very good to know what he considers his most important hobby to be spending time with his wife, Geraldine, his children and their spouses, his grandchildren, and his great grandson. A man can be no luckier that having a rewarding career, and recognizing the ultimate importance of his family.

Mr. Speaker, local officials are the hallmark of our democratic society. They help people understand the importance of good government. Genesee Township has been very fortunate to have Donald Becker, and, indeed, his family, for these many years. I urge you and all of our colleagues to join me in wishing him the very best as he celebrates his years of service to Genesee Township.

WHY CATHOLIC SCHOOL MODEL IS TABOO

HON. JOHN J. DUNCAN, JR.

OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I think that anyone who is truly interested in education should read the following article from the July 17, 1996, issue of the Wall Street Journal. I would like to call it to the attention of my colleagues and other readers of the RECORD.

WHY THE CATHOLIC SCHOOL MODEL IS TABOO
(By Sol Stern)

New York City's Cardinal John J. O'Connor has repeatedly made the city an extraordinary offer: Send me the lowest-performing 5% of children presently in the public schools, and I will put them in Catholic schools—where they will succeed. The city's response: silence.

In a more rational world, city officials would have jumped at the cardinal's invitation. It would have been a huge financial plus for the city. The annual per-pupil cost of Catholic elementary schools is $2,500 per year, about a third of what taxpayers now spend for the city's public schools.

NO IDLE BOAST

More important, thousands more disadvantaged children would finish school and become productive citizens. For Cardinal O'Connor's claim that Catholic schools would do a better job than public schools is no idle boast. In 1990 the RAND Corporation compared the performance of children from New York City's public and Catholic high schools. Only 25% of the public-school students graduated at all, and only 16% took the Scholastic Aptitude Test, vs. 95% and 75% of Catholic-school students, respectively. Catholic-school students scored an average of 815 on the SAT. By shameful contrast, the small "elite" of public-school students who graduated and took the SAT averaged only 642 for those in neighborhood schools and 715 for those in magnet schools.

In 1993 the New York State Department of Education compared city schools with the highest levels of minority enrollment. Conclusion: "Catholic schools with 81% to 100% minority composition outscored New York City public schools with the same percentage of minority enrollment in Grade 3 reading (+17%), Grade 3 mathematics (+10%), Grade 5 writing (+6%), Grade 6 reading (+10%) and Grade 6 mathematics (+11%)."

Yet most of the elite, in New York and elsewhere, is resolutely uninterested in the Catholic schools' success. In part this reflects the enormous power of teachers' unions, fierce opponents of anything that threatens their monopoly on education. In part it reflects a secular discomfort with religious institutions.

I myself have felt this discomfort over the years, walking past Catholic schools like St. Gregory the Great, near my Manhattan home. Every morning, as I took my sons to public school, I couldn't help noticing the well-behaved black and Hispanic children in their neat uniforms entering the drab parish building. But my curiosity never led me past the imposing crucifix looking down from the roof, which evoked childhood images of Catholic anti-Semitism and clerical obscurantism.

Finally, earlier this year, I ventured in, and I was impressed. I sat in, for example, as fourth-grade teacher Susan Viti conducted a review lesson on the geography of the Western United States. All the children were completely engaged and had obviously done their homework. They were able to answer each of her questions about the principal cities and capitals of the Western states—some of which I couldn't name—and the topography and natural resources of the region. "Which minerals would be found in the Rocky Mountains?" Miss Viti asked. Eager hands shot up. Miss Viti used the lesson to expand the students' vocabulary; when the children wrote things down, she insisted on proper grammar and spelling.

I found myself wishing that my own son's fourth-grade teachers at nearby Public School 87, reputedly one of the best public schools in the city, were anywhere near as productive and as focused on basic skills as Miss Viti. Both my boys' teachers have wasted an enormous amount of time with empty verbiage about the evils of racism and sexism. By contrast, in Miss Viti's class and in all the other Catholic-school classes I visited, it was taken for granted that a real education is the best antidote to prejudice.

Miss Viti earns $21,000 a year, $8,000 less than a first-year public-school teacher. "I've taught in an all-white, affluent suburban school, where I made over $40,000," she says. "This time I wanted to do something good for society, and I am lucky enough to be able to afford to do it. I am trying to instill in my students that whatever their life situation is now, they can succeed if they work hard and study."

You might expect liberals, self-styled champions of disadvantaged children, to applaud the commitment and sacrifice of educators like Susan Viti. You might even expect them to look for ways of getting government money to these underfunded schools. Instead, they've done their best to make sure the wall of separation between church and state remains impenetrable. Liberal child-advocacy groups tout an endless array of "prevention" programs that are supposed to stave off delinquency, dropping out of school and teen pregnancy—yet they consistently ignore Catholic schools, which nearly always succeed in preventing these pathologies.

Read the chapter on education in Hillary Clinton's "It Takes a Village." Mrs. Clinton advocates an alphabet soup of education programs for poor kids, but says not a word about Catholic schools. Similarly, in his books on education and inner-city ghettos, Jonathan Kozol offers vivid tours of decrepit public schools in places like the South Bronx, but he never stops at the many Catholic schools that are succeeding a few blocks away.

Why are Catholic schools taboo among those who talk loudest about compassion for the downtrodden? It's hard to escape the conclusion that one of the most powerful reasons is liberals' alliance with the teachers' unions, which have poured hundreds of millions of dollars into the campaign coffers of liberal candidates around the country. Two weeks ago I attended the National Education Association convention in Washington, a week-long pep rally for Bill Clinton punctuated by ritual denunciations of privatization.

Before the teachers' unions rise to political power, it was not unusual to see urban Democrats like former New York Gov. Mario Cuomo support government aid to Catholic schools. Mr. Cuomo's flip-flop on this issue is especially revealing. In 1974, when he first ran for public office, Mr. Cuomo wrote a letter to potential supporters: "I've spent more than 15 years . . . arguing for aid to private schools," he wrote. "If you believe aid is a good thing, then you are the good people. If you believe it, then it's your moral obligation, as it is my own, to do something about it. . . . Let's try tax-credit plans and anything else that offers any help."

Mr. Cuomo soon learned his lesson. In his published diaries he wrote: "Teachers are perhaps the most effective of all the state's unions. If they go all-out, it will mean telephones and vigorous statewide support. It will also mean some money." In his 1982 campaign for governor, Mr. Cuomo gave a speech trumpeting the primacy of public education and the rights of teachers. He won the union's enthusiastic endorsement against Ed Koch in the Democratic primary. Over the next 12 years, in private meetings with Catholic leaders, Gov. Cuomo would declare that he still supported tax relief for parochial school parents. Then he would take a completely different position in public. For example, in 1984 he acknowledged that giving tax credits for parochial-school tuition was "clearly constitutional" under a recent Supreme Court decision—but he refused to support such a plan.

Politically controlled schools are unlikely to improve much without strong pressure from outside. Thus, the case for government aid to Catholic schools is now more compelling than ever, if only to provide the competitive pressure to force state schools to change. And the conventional wisdom that government is constitutionally prohibited from aiding Catholic schools has been undermined by several recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions.

SUCKER'S TRAP

Since the powerful teachers' unions vehemently oppose any form of government aid to Catholic schools, reformers are often skittish about advocating vouchers or tuition tax credits, fearing that will end the public-school reform conversation before it begins. But to abandon aid to Catholic schools in the name of public-school reform is a sucker's trap. We have ended up with no aid to Catholic schools and no real public-school reform either.

Catholic schools are a valuable public resource not just because they profoundly benefit the children who enroll in them. They also challenge the public school monopoly, constantly reminding us that the neediest kids are educable and that spending extravagant sums of money isn't the answer. No one who cares about reviving our failing public schools can afford to ignore this inspiring laboratory of reform.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, on July 18, 1996, I was absent from the House of Representatives due to the tragic explosion on TWA Flight 800 over the First Congressional District of New York. I felt it was appropriate to return to my district to support and comfort my constituents impacted by this disaster as well as to help coordinate local, State, and Federal search and rescue efforts.

Had I been present I would have voted "yes" on roll No. 327, "yes" on roll No. 328, "no" on roll No. 329, "no" on roll No. 330, and "yes" on roll No. 331.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 3734, WELFARE AND MEDICAID REFORM ACT OF 1996

SPEECH OF

HON. LOUIS STOKES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, July 17, 1996

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to H.R. 3734, the Balanced Budget Welfare Reform Act, a bill designed to overhaul our Nation's welfare system. Fifteen months ago, many of my colleagues and I stood before this body and showed our staunch disagreement with the House-passed welfare reform bill which made disastrous cuts in our Nation's welfare programs. I wish I could say that, since then, some compassion and reason had been interjected into this debate and produced a more favorable bill for consideration.

Unfortunately, H.R. 3734, the bill being deliberated today, targets the poorest in this country, in order to meet Republican budget priorities. When we examine the provisions of this legislation, it is abundantly clear that our colleagues have reneged on their commitment to ensure a "family friendly" Congress and to protect our Nation's children.

H.R. 3734 slashes more than $61 billion over 6 years in welfare programs. This bill guts funding for the Food Stamp Program, cuts into the SSI protections for disabled children, drastically cuts child nutrition programs, and slashes benefits for legal immigrants. Mr. Speaker, I find these reductions in quality of life programs appalling.

How can my Republican colleagues praise this bill's work requirements when H.R. 3734 provides inadequate funding for education, training, and employment—essential components in contributing to longevity in the workforce? How can they stand by a bill that slashes more than $3 billion in funding for meals to children in child care centers and homes? As if that were not devastating enough, this bill would cut nearly $23 billion over 6 years from the Food Stamp Program and an additional $23 billion in the SSI Program.

H.R. 3734 sends a signal to the Nation that our Government leaders place a very low priority on those individuals who have very little. In Cuyahoga County, we have a 20 percent poverty rate in a county of 1.4 million people. In the city of Cleveland, it is an alarming 42 percent. Throughout Cuyahoga County, more than 228,000 people receive food stamps. Many of these individuals constitute America's working poor. This punitive welfare measure will undoubtedly endanger their health and well-being.

Mr. Chairman, I can understand and support a balanced and rational approach to addressing the reform of our Nation's welfare system.

But I cannot and will not support this legislation which would shatter the lives of millions of our Nation's poor. In order to move people to self-sufficiency, we must provide adequate education, training, child care, and jobs that pay a livable wage. Anything short of that does great disservice to our national sense of compassion and our moral responsibility to help the poor help themselves.

On behalf of America's children and the poor, I urge my colleagues to vote against H.R. 3734.

IT'S THE REAL ECONOMY THAT COUNTS

HON. BARNEY FRANK

OF MASSACHUSETTS

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, one of the most infuriating aspects of our economic affairs to many people is the extent to which the bond market treats good news as bad news. This was of course most recently displayed when the best employment news we have had in years triggered serious financial downtrends. People who trade bonds have of course a right to do whatever they wish. But we as policymakers must make it very clear that we will not be driven by their short term gyrations and in particular that we will continue to pursue policies that expand employment opportunities and real incomes for working people without being deterred by the negative short term impact this may have on the bond business. James K. Galbraith, formerly of the staff of the Joint Economic Committee in better days, and now a teacher of economics at the Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas, recently wrote on this subject in a very instructive fashion. It is essential that we listen to Mr. Galbraith and not allow financial speculation to perform the reverse alchemy which has from time to time characterized their efforts.

WHAT INFLATION?

(By James K. Galbraith)

AUSTIN, TX.—The economic news on Friday was so good it was a disaster. Unemployment has fallen to 5.3 percent, the lowest it has been in six years. June payrolls increased by 239,000 jobs. And the average hourly wage rose by nine cents, the biggest one-month jump ever recorded, a level "noticeably above the inflation rate," as The New York Times reported.

Pandemonium on Wall Street! The yield on the 30-year Treasury bond leaped a quarter of a point, finishing at 7.18 percent. And stocks plummeted: the Dow Jones industrial average dived 114 points.

Amid the commotion, one could hear the bond bears roaring their message that, with inflation sure to surge, the Federal Reserve must raise short-term interest rates. Many of the bears said that had the Fed's Open Market Committee known at its meeting last Wednesday what the secretive Bureau of Labor Statistics would announce two days later, it would surely have raised them. Some urged the Fed to correct this "error" immediately without waiting until the next regular meeting in August.

Nonsense. There is no cause for alarm. The evidence does not portend surging inflation. To begin with, the annual rate remains low: 2.9 percent in the year that ended in May. Inflation is not accelerating. Instead, productivity growth appears to be picking up. If this pattern continues, it will permit wages to grow for some time, with little effect on price inflation.

The decline in unemployment also means little. Some economists still hold to the notion of a "natural rate of unemployment" at 6 percent or a slightly lower figure, below which they believe inflation spirals out of control. But joblessness has been less than 6 percent without raising inflation since September 1994.

Recent economic studies confirm their is little reason to fear that prices will rise simply because of low unemployment—or for that matter, rapid growth. Most inflation of past decades had different causes, like oil shocks and war.

Some say to forget the facts. An official of a regional Federal Reserve bank recently told Business Week (anonymously, of course) that "you have to move on anecdotal data." In other words, monetary policy should be based on gossip. Mercifully, it is likely that the Federal Reserve Board's governors do not share this view.

The bears in the bond market must also know that their inflation warnings are unfounded. So what are they up to? The answer seems clear. We have a speculation problem, not an inflation problem.

The bears make their living by betting on the Fed's next decision, not by calling the economy. The bears predict when short-term rates will be raised and when they will decline. By selling and buying long-term bonds in advance, they can make a lot of money—if their predictions are right. So it is natural that they try to affect the Fed's decisions.

This game has been in full cry since at least October 1993, when bond-market insiders correctly anticipated (and may have provoked) the Fed's rate increase of February 1994. All through that year, each time the Fed raised interest rates, the stock and bond markets churned.

If short-term rates are pushed up tomorrow, many ordinary investors will panic and dump their bonds and stocks. Then the speculators can buy cheap and "shear the sheep"—the small investors, in the speculators' lingo.

Sell bonds, create gossip, influence policy—what a game! But maybe the game has changed. News reports preceding the Fed's inactivity last week suggested that the chairman, Alan Greenspan, may have given up the "pre-emptive strike" anti-inflation strategy of 1994. Good. The idea that the economic evidence counts for something is central to proper monetary policy.

But Mr. Greenspan's possible credibility as a pragmatist, only a week old and none too sturdy, will depend on facing down the bears.

It would be an extremely good thing if the Federal Reserve held the line through the summer and fall—at least as long as core inflation (calculated without volatile food and energy prices), measured over six months or so, remains reasonable.

In that event, the interest rates on long-term bonds will finally begin to decline, and maybe short-term rates will follow. Traders committed to a strategy of creating panic will lose money. So what?

The Fed did the right thing. Now it should stand firm and show the speculators who is in charge.

FREE PRESS IN HONG KONG
UNDER ATTACK

HON. JOHN EDWARD PORTER

OF ILLINOIS

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I recently read a New York Times article outlining Chinese threats to restrict Hong Kong's press once the British colony comes under Chinese rule. This information, while extremely upsetting, is hardly shocking. Although the Chinese Government professes to be committed to ensuring a smooth, peaceful transition for Hong Kong, actions by the Chinese Government tell a very different, very disturbing story. As the saying goes, "actions speak louder than words."

In 1984, to help ensure the smooth transition of Hong Kong from British to Chinese control, Britain and China both signed the Joint Declaration providing for the peaceful return of Hong Kong to Chinese rule. This document, registered at the United Nations, specifies that Hong Kong will enjoy a high degree of autonomy except in foreign and defense affairs, and that the legislature will be elected. China has repeatedly violated the commitments made in this binding document, leading to increasing tensions between Hong Kong and China as the July 1, 1997, date fast approaches.

Mr. Speaker, just one example will suffice to demonstrate how the Chinese have chosen to ignore commitments made in the Joint Declaration. Recently, Chinese authorities threatened to abolish the first ever democratically elected legislative council and replace it with an appointed legislature. This action would not only be in clear violation of the Joint Declaration, but also in violation of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights.

With China now threatening to restrict freedom of the press in Hong Kong, it becomes clear that Chinese officials do not intend to grant Hong Kong the degree of autonomy previously promised. This should leave us all deeply concerned about the future of Hong Kong. Mr. Speaker, Hong Kong has close to 60 papers and 675 periodicals. These papers and periodicals provide Hong Kong citizens and those throughout the world with the truth about what is happening in Hong Kong, and throughout all of Asia. Restricting free press in Hong Kong will severely limit the world's ability to follow events in Tibet, China, and Taiwan.

Mr. Speaker, Hong Kong is the world's best example of the prosperity that results from a strong and vibrant free enterprise system existing under the rule of law. China's threats to dismantle the legislature and restrict freedom of speech are not idle threats. I have no doubt that if we let Chinese threats go unchallenged, each and every threat will indeed be carried out. Tyranny thrives on the weakness of others, and the United States has been weak in its response to Chinese behavior. Mr. Speaker, we must do everything possible to ensure that democratic advances in Hong Kong are not reversed by oppressive Chinese policies. As 1997 approaches, the United States must stand with those in Hong Kong, such as journalists opposing illegal restrictions on their free speech, who are rightly unwilling to capitulate to Beijing's efforts to strip the citizens of Hong Kong of their democratic rights and freedoms.

PATIENT RECOGNITION DAY

HON. THOMAS J. MANTON

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. MANTON. Mr. Speaker, for the 8th year in a row, the board of visitors of Bronx Psychiatric Center is holding a Patient Recognition Day to honor those who have significantly progressed on their path toward eventual discharge back to the community or have made a positive impact on the lives of their peers on their wards.

Patient Recognition Day actually honors the efforts of many people whose dedication has contributed to the recovery process. They are the staff and professionals at Bronx Psychiatric Center who put forth great care into and take great pride in their work. There are the board of visitors, Mr. Samuel Lopez, president, Sylvia Lask & Helen Rosello who oversee the center on behalf of the Governor of New York State. There are, of course the family and friends of the patients who lend so much support and understanding.

Mr. Speaker, the greatest honor, however is reserved for the patients who have trusted and worked with all the people I mentioned above. As its name suggests, Patient Recognition Day is the time we set aside to applaud the great strides they have made and encourage them to continue on their path to recovery.

Mr. Speaker, I know my colleagues join with me in paying tribute to all the people who make this Patient Recognition Day something special in my district.

MARYAM RAJAVI CHALLENGES
ISLAMIC FUNDAMENTALISM

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, July 22, 1996

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, I wish to draw your attention to Iran, but not to the ugly image often cast by this country. I want to talk about the hope for democracy emerging from Iran, about those who are resisting against the ruling regime, about those striving to rescue not only the people of Iran, but also the whole world, from the terrorist mullahs who have held us all hostage for too long.

On Friday, June 21, a crowd of 25,000 people gathered in London for a program of speeches and musical performances in celebration of the 15th anniversary of this resistance movement against the mullahs. The keynote speaker was the resistance's president-elect, Maryam Rajavi. In remarks entitled "Women, Voice of the Oppressed," Mrs. Rajavi called for "a world coalition against fundamentalism."

The speakers and spectators were not limited to Iranians. A large number of British parliamentarians and dignitaries, various groups of European and Arab intellectuals, politicians, writers, artists and women's rights activists were among the crowd. Marzich, the Grande Dame of Persian music, performed the "Operetta in Solidarity," accompanied by the London Festival Orchestra and an ensemble of traditional Iranian musicians.

Associated Press Television reported that Maryam Rajavi "not surprisingly received a standing ovation from the audience at the London festival and her defiant speech was interrupted several times by deafening applause."

Mr. Speaker, I think that it is important to heed Mrs. Rajavi's message, which is diametrically opposed to that of the fundamentalist mullahs in Iran. I am, therefore, submitting a copy of her speech at London's Earl's Court Exhibition Centre, for publication in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

WOMEN, VOICE OF THE OPPRESSED—SPEECH BY MARYAM RAJAVI, PRESIDENT-ELECT OF THE IRANIAN RESISTANCE, LONDON, JUNE 21, 1996

I wish to thank you all for your generous sympathy and kind support. Greetings to my dear fellow Iranians who are listening now in the meetings honoring June 20th in different countries.

I am very happy to see you all and part take in this magnificent event. I had come to London on a private visit, and was invited to speak about the topic this gathering is addressing: Women, Voice of the Oppressed.

Each year, on this occasion, we speak of June 20th and of a cry for freedom that will reverberate forever in the history of Iran. It is only fitting for me to begin by honoring the 15th anniversary of this turning point.

June 20th for us, the people of Iran, was a day of destiny the day the Iranian people arose against the suppression of freedoms. It is the day the pervasive and tortuous resistance against religious tyranny began. It is the day when the nation's will became crystallized in the formation of the National Liberation Army of Iran. June 20th is rightly designated as the Day of Iranian Martyrs and Political Prisoners, those shining stars who pierced the night of oppression with their enormous sacrifice to the cause of freedom and popular sovereignty.

I also wish to pay tribute to the women the world over who have striven for equality and emancipation, and to salute the oppressed women of my homeland, Iran from whose ranks tens of thousands have fallen in the struggle for freedom.

Please allow me to pay my special respects to the memory of Ashraf Rajavi, a woman and pioneer in our nation's Resistance, who endured much torture under the shah's regime and was martyred in February 1982 by Khomeini's henchmen. [Ashraf was the wife of the Iranian Resistance leader Massoud Rajavi] Before the eyes of other detainees in Evin prison, her murderers desecrated her lifeless body and then slapped around her infant son. Along with the other martyrs of this struggle, she has an immortal place in the history of our people. Hail to Ashraf and all standard-bearers and martyrs to the cause of freedom.

HISTORY-LONG OPPRESSION

Indeed, suffering and sacrifice are the price we have to pay to attain our freedom. This is the essence of the relentless tug-of-war which gives meaning to human existence. This is why the song of freedom has never been silenced by the tyranny of despots, and why the flaming range of the oppressed shall overturn the foundations of oppression.

Women are history's first victims of oppression. Besides having to endure political and socio-economic oppression, they must repent for the sin of being women.

Yet half of the human beings on this planet are women, and inevitably gender oppression and the culture inherent to it directly affect and enchain the other half of the human race as well, the men. Hence, genuine freedom for the individual and society is ultimately attainable solely through the emancipation of oppressed women. In other words, discrimination against women transcends and affects all other domains of human existence.

Sa'di, the great 12th century Iranian poet, has put it eloquently:

Of one body are the children of Adam
All created from a single gem
If fate afflicts one with great pain
How can others rest calm and sane.

History often tells us of slaves and celebrates their freedom, but so little is said about "the slave of slaves," the most tormented and oppressed members of human society. Today, we have assembled here so that their voice, lost in the chilling silence of centuries, may be heard: The voice of women, the voice of the oppressed.

The history of humankind is the history of human being's glorious quest for freedom, and at the same time a wretched chronicle of oppression. While man gradually succeeded in freeing himself from the absolute dictates of nature, he soon found himself enchained by his fellow man. Thus, history began with the oppression of man by man. Slavery, that great tragedy of human history, was directed by the likes of Nero and Pharaoh, and the voice of the oppressed was drowned out by the cracking whips of their masters. All that remained was the rattling of the shackles, as the dark age of slavery prevailed.

Was mankind to remain forever at the mercy of this blind destiny? One answer came on that fateful day near Nazareth, when Jesus Christ proclaimed: "He anointed me . . . to preach a release to the captives . . . to send the crushed ones away with a release."

The message of Jesus was a clear proclamation of human destiny. "One can and must rebel against bondage and slavery."

The revolt by Spartacus was doubtless rooted in the belief that slavery was not forever and that freedom could ultimately be achieved. Spartacus and his fellows, however, knew that for them, at least, freedom was inconceivable, unless upon a cross. On the eve of the last battle, Spartacus cried: "My friends, we have come a long way together, longing to return to our land and live free. But tomorrow, we have to fight again. Perhaps there is no place for us in this world. But one thing is certain. We are free!"

The next day, 6,000 slaves were crucified along the road from Rome to Capua. That was the price of freedom. But the day came when the thunderous voice of the oppressed resonated everywhere and put an end to the age of slavery. Indeed, the pages of history may abound in oppression, pain and blood, but on the other side of every bitterness and humiliation lies the sweetness and magnificence of liberation.

There was a time when such tyrants as Attila, Genghis Khan and Hitler roamed the earth, but now, in the new age of global communications and information, the interdependence of civilizations and the new relationships among nations inhibit such roguish aggression. History has never ceased to move on. By relentlessly challenging all obstacles to liberty, humanity has liberated itself from the fetters of antiquated social and political relationships, and charged forward.

But one cry, and one cry alone, has remained unanswered, stifled in the depths of history: It is the cry of "the slave of slaves," the cry of women, the voice of those enduring the ugliest of all oppressions. Gender oppression ran so deep that no one believed it even existed. Gender oppression was not considered as oppression at all, rather as natural for women.

I am woman
My bare feet
Pacing the parched earth
Since the First Day
In search of a drop of water. . . .

Women were doubly enslaved once as all other slaves and oppressed people, those subjugated and exploited in every age of history, and once as women. Yes, the footprint of woman can be seen in all shackles of bondage, and the voice of the oppressed can be heard in her smothered cries.

Extracting the root of oppression from the dusty pages of oblivion, Simone de Beauvoir said: "All subjugated social classes did not exist at some point. They came to exist later. But women have always been there. They are women due to their physiological traits. But spontaneously, the very word "woman" has an insulting ring to it in a man's ears and produces in his mind a mixture of sexual exploitation and humiliation."

The story of women is a tale of a latent oppression woven into the depths of their lives and very existence. The bonds that tie women to their omnipresent oppressors are unique. Not even in their dreams do these first slaves on the face of the earth reject and annihilate their masters. When they assume that their bondage is eternal, the tragedy is complete.

MISOGYNOUS MULLAHS

But there exists an even more painful story: the tragedy of women in my fettered homeland, Iran, under the reign of the inhuman mullahs, who not only consider woman as eternally a slave, but also negate her humanity. Can one speak of women and the movement for equality without exposing the misogyny and barbarism of the fundamentalists who rule Iran?

About which aspect of this bitter, unbearable tragedy should I tell you? Should I speak of the hundreds of women who are assaulted in the streets everyday? Or of those arrested and lashed? Or of the respectable women forced to sign confessions that they are prostitutes, just because of the color of their dress or a lock of hair showing from beneath their scarves? Or of the women ruthlessly stoned to death?

Or should I tell you the tragic story of nine-year-old girls, who, according to the mullahs' laws, must be wed? Or about the 12 or 13-year-olds who are sold to 50 or 70-year-old men? Innocent children who wither away under physical and psychological stress. Or should I speak of the many victims of self-immolation and other forms of suicide?

In early 1992, the state-controlled dailies wrote that in the impoverished regions in northeastern Khorassan and southeastern Sistan and Baluchistan, small children are sold for $60 to $70. In north Khorassan alone, 1,700 such girls had been abandoned.

You have probably heard of the tragedy of millions of girl carpet weavers in Iran, who labor in damp, filthy workshops, where they contract paralysis, tuberculosis and scores of other diseases. These children weave the prime of their youth into the fabric of the carpets they make.

Or should I tell of the multitude of women office employees, teachers and workers who were expelled from their jobs simply because they were women? According to official statistics by the national census bureau in 1986, only nine percent of people with jobs were women. The situation has only gotten worse.

Or should I recount the untold tales of suffering of the millions of homeless widows and orphans, women and children who fell victim to the unpatriotic war? Shall I speak of the pain of homelessness, slander and humiliation, the pressures of destitution, rape and suppression?

Or should I tell you about the epic resistance of tens of thousands of women who were savagely tortured or executed for their defiance of the ruthless, despotic theocracy and for joining the ranks of the Resistance for freedom?

Or should I tell of the brutality and cruelty of the clerical regime's executioners, who sent elderly grandmothers, pregnant women and little girls before firing squads without even establishing their identities?

Or should I tell you the shocking stories of young women who were crushed under vicious tortures, raped and their blood drained on the eve of their execution, all in accordance with the mullahs' official decrees?

I tell you that neither the people, nor history nor God will ignore these atrocities. These criminals will be held accountable for destroying so much talent and potential. As the Quran says [in condemning the burial alive of infant girl children]: "For what crime she was killed?"

Hail to these martyred heroines in chains, who despite all the savagery, never surrendered, but continued to resist for freedom and liberation. They rushed headlong in search of freedom, guiding lights in the quest for liberty. Indeed, as Ashraf Rajavi said: "The world has never known what the Iranian people, and particularly the women of my homeland, have gone through in these years."

The head of the regime's Judiciary, Mullah Yazdi, has officially proclaimed: "A woman needs her husband's permission to leave her home, even to attend her father's funeral."

Mullah Azari Qomi, one of the regime's ideologues, says: "They Vali-e Faqih (the regime's supreme leader) can forcibly marry girls against their own and their fathers' wishes."

Mullah Sadouqi, who was Khomeini's representative in central Iran, once said during a meeting of the Assembly of Experts: "It would be a shame and an utter disgrace for us to have a woman as president or prime minister."

In their theological teachings, the mullahs try to justify their astronomical lies by stressing that three groups of people must be lied to: Women, infidels and hypocrites

The inhuman mullahs' most sinister sin, however, is that they attribute their misogynous atrocities and reactionary stances to Islam. As the Quran warns, "Woe to those who write the book with their own hands, and then say: This is from God. To traffic with it for a miserable price." In truth, the mullahs perpetrate these atrocities and engage in demagoguery only to maintain power.

Iranian women have risen up against this monster, a monster which has emerged from the depths of the Dark Ages, whose very survival depends on misogyny and gender apartheid. This beast is not just the enemy of the Iranian people, it is at war with humanity.

GLOBAL THREAT

From Tehran, the beating of theocracy, the octopus of fundamentalism has extended its blood-drenched tentacles into Islamic states and Muslim societies around the world. It is the main threat to global and regional peace. Exploiting the religious beliefs of more than one billion Muslims, the mullahs ruling Iran promote expansionism, while exporting crisis and discord. Their foreign policy consists of meddling in the affairs of Islamic countries, issuing fatwas to murder foreign nationals and launching terrorist operations abroad. Other aspects of this policy include spending huge sums on armaments of all kinds, especially weapons of mass destruction such as biological, chemical and nuclear weapons.

Such a foreign policy is inherent to the fundamentalists' nature. The theocracy ruling Iran thrives on crisis. It is hostile to the most important global peace initiative in the Middle East, and its policies and actions only nourish warmongering extremists and fundamentalists.

These realities demonstrate how the ominous specter of religious fascism haunts global peace. The world community, for its turn, has a moral duty to confront and overcome this phenomenon.

I again emphasize here that these reactionaries who suppress the Iranian people, and particularly Iranian women, and export terrorism and fundamentalism under the cloak of religion, have nothing to do with Islam. They are the peddlers of religion and exploit the name of Islam to advance their sinister, inhuman objectives. Islam is the religion of peace, freedom, liberty, equality, love, mercy and liberation. The mullahs' fundamentalist mindset, however, rests upon vengeance, enmity and ignorance and is at war with human values and world peace.

As we approach the end of the twentieth century, fundamentalism's brazen enmity toward human values and world peace has spilled onto issues of international concern. In 1993, during the International Conference on Human Rights in Vienna, the Iranian regime opposed the principle of the universality of human rights. In 1994, during the World Conference on Population Control in Cairo, it opposed women's right to family planning. In 1995, during the World Conference on Women in Beijing, it opposed the principle of equality between women and men. And in 1996, adamant in its pursuit of terrorism and enmity toward peace, it rebuffed the Sharm Al-Sheikh summit.

UNITED FRONT

The international community has failed to demonstrate enough sensitivity to the dangers of appeasing the religious, terrorist dictatorship ruling Iran. Hence, the mullahs still find opportunities to take advantage of such conciliation. Through terrorist blackmail, they take the policies and even the moral principles of governments hostage.

Events in recent months confirm that the clerical regime always takes advantage of its diplomatic facilities to interfere in Middle Eastern countries and engage in assassinations in the West. Two months ago, the mullahs declared for the umpteenth time that the issue of the fatwa against British Novelist Salman Rushdie can only be settled by his murder. Faced with such a regime, decisiveness is the only policy. It is not only a moral and humanitarian obligation, but a political and historical necessity as well. The future of democracy, development and peace on a global scale depends on such a policy.

Here, the issue of women and the movement for equality join with the fight against fundamentalism. Not only are women the standard-bearers of the movement for equality, but they are also the driving force behind development, peace and social justice. In this context, the documents of the World conference on women in Beijing unequivocally underscore that, "Women's empowerment and their full participation on the basis of equality in all spheres of society, including participation in the decision-making process and access to power, are fundamental for the achievement of equality, development and peace."

Yes, in my view, humanity will be rid of the foreboding specter of fundamentalism only when women take on their leading role in this global challenge, and use every democratic means to block appeasement of the misogynous, inhuman mullahs of Iran. This is particularly the case because the issue of fundamentalism is at one and the same time the key political problem confronting Islamic nations, and the most critical foreign policy problem facing many other countries.

Allow me, therefore, to call upon my sisters, women throughout the world, to arise and form a world coalition against fundamentalism. Such a coalition would comprise all humanitarian, progressive women and men, who will doubtless rush to the assistance of Iranian women, the prime victims of the Mullahs' oppression. A common front against fundamentalism serves the interests of global peace, and will preclude a repeat of the bitter experience of appeasing fascism on the eve of the Second World War.

I wish to underscore here that women's leading role in the fight against fundamentalism doubly serves the movement for equality and the effort to uproot sexual discrimination. The only way to propel that movement forward is to link it with a progressive political movement. If women have no share in political power; if they are not part of the leadership and the decision-making processes on social issues; if they do not have a serious, equal role in economic management, and if they are not actively and visibly involved in international politics, all the talk about equality between women and men rings hollow. Real equality only comes about when women take on key roles in tackling the primary challenges of the day.

WOMEN LEAD THE WAY

In order to overturn the system of gender discrimination and bring about fundamental change, women must predominate political leadership for a specific period of time. The objective of such a predominant role in leadership is to guarantee equality and uproot sexual oppression, not to replace patriarchy with matriarchy. Thus, all the prerequisites and consequences are liberating in their essence. Once the oppression has been eradicated, the energies thus set free will break through the impasses currently confronting human society and will help to establish a new system of human relations, both within a community and on a global scale.

Now, in the great era of women's emancipation, the victims of centuries of the most dreadful historical oppression will echo the voices of all oppressed peoples. Today, the voice of women is indeed the voice of the oppressed, those whose cries reach no one; the voice of the children denied all rights and means to grow; the voice of the poor and destitute, who moan not just for lack of bread, but for lack of compassion.

Now it is the turn of women to rebel against all forms of oppression, to rise and end gender-based oppression and inequality, to unite women and men in their true human identity. They must rebel and give a new lease of life to human society, rise and topple the pillars of all oppression, tear asunder the status quo and chart a new course.

RESISTANCE'S EXPERIENCE

Ladies and gentlemen,

Please allow me to speak of the achievements of the women in the Iranian Resistance, achievements which in reality belong to all women in the movement for equality. To enhance our gains, we look to our sisters' ideas and experiences the world over.

After a century of active participation in the social struggle, Iranian women came face to face with the onslaught of religious, terrorist dictatorship, namely the fundamentalists ruling Iran. As the reactionary beast awakened, the mounting difficulties had only one message for our women: all-out resistance. Capitulation and submission were impossible. Women took part in the political struggle and rose up to resist the reactionaries and defend democratic freedoms. Now, they convey the cries of an enchained and oppressed, yet proud and resistant, nation.

After 15 years of struggle against the reactionaries, these pioneering women occupy key positions as leaders of the Resistance movement. Fifty-two percent of the Resistance's parliament are women. The General Command of the National Liberation Army of Iran is made up essentially of women, and the Leadership Council of the Mojahedin, the pivotal force within the Resistance, is comprised entirely of women. Women also command and manage at different levels in the combat, technical and specialized units of the army, in the movement's political structure and in organizational affairs. Under their directorship, the male-female division of labor has become a thing of the past.

WOMEN'S EMANCIPATION

But how did we manage such achievements?

Twelve years ago, locked in a life-or-death struggle against the rule of the mullahs, the Resistance movement realized that women must take on greater responsibilities. At that juncture, our women played a prominent role in the fight against the clerical regime, but one thing was blocking the gates to change: doubts about women's capabilities.

In the story of women's liberation, tragedy and heroism are often ironically entwined. This is my constant feeling in my dealings with the women's struggle. See for yourself how well-entrenched male-dominated thinking is, in the roots and veins of society and culture.

Within our organization, which was fighting against the mullahs, all the heroism of women and the sacrifice of tens of thousands of women martyrs were still not enough to make us believe in their equality, to break the barriers of sexual oppression and discrimination. I sometimes thought to myself, what else must women do to make others believe in them? How is it that these women defeat the executioners in prisons with their bare hands, but cannot come to grips with political concepts and lack the necessary resolve to manage our affairs? Had this will and these emotions been created for women only to offer comfort to their husbands at home? I found that hard to believe.

Most tragically, these same women did not see themselves as sources of admirable heroism and lacked the will to change. After all, women had historically brought about many wondrous achievements; the crux of the matter was their lack of faith in themselves, hence the need to rebel against such misgivings.

It was then that we reached the conclusion that gradual change would prove useless, that the missing element and the real solution to break this mindset was women's participation in leadership.

Indeed, in our confrontation with the ruling reactionaries, we needed to rid ourselves of the residue of their thinking and values. Inevitably, we had to crush the heart of the reactionary misogyny which negates women's human identity and ability to lead the society. In this way women could break through the barriers of historical degradation and oppression embedded within their own thinking, and believe in themselves. It was also necessary to convince the men that they need no longer question the capabilities of the women who had fought alongside them on all the battlefields of the struggle for freedom. Once these changes had overturned the mindset of all the Mojahedin in the form of an internal revolution, our women broke the spell of self-doubt. Not merely as isolated examples, but as a generation of emancipated women, they ably assumed key leadership responsibilities.

NEW VALUES

The most outstanding characteristics of these women were their sense of responsibility, their willingness to learn, their commitment to discipline, their impressive decisiveness, and most important of all, the selfless devotion which emanated from their human qualities. These traits also had a constructive impact on the work place.

These women had learned to believe in themselves; that they were free and equal human beings; that they were not created for men and not identified with them; that they were no one's possession; that they owned their own body, life and emotions. They overcame the world of "the weaker sex," a world of subordination and irresponsibility, and were reborn in their true human image.

The first signs of this birth were the new relationships among women. They realized that they first had to like the women around them, if they were to act in solidarity with one another and accept each other's command.

It is perhaps appropriate for me to speak, beyond the many new values that blossomed in the revolution in our thinking, about the role of these women in maintaining a healthy relationship between women and men. It was only in this way that a mixed army in which the relationships among people were pure and the combat capability enormous, took shape, arousing the admiration of many observers.

And finally, one of our greatest achievements was that our women's emancipation immediately affected the liberation of our men, and improved their capabilities. Those men who rushed to welcome this change, despite its hardships, were proud to forge ahead in the path to equality.

Needless to say, in the world of discrimination, men, too, are enchained and enslaved by a domineering and authoritarian attitude. Truly, to deny the humanity of those human beings closest to him—his mother, sister and wife—must not a man first negate his own humanity? How else can a human being accept such oppression with a clear conscience? We have seen a generation of men regain their lost human identity in the movement to reject gender oppression, men who displayed the ultimate form of freedom and emancipation by accepting the leadership of women.

Yes, we have witnessed the birth of a generation of liberated women and men, shining beacons in an auspicious transformation of human relationships. This transformation came about through the leadership of Massoud Rajavi. Because of it, our generation and our Resistance movement were thrust forward on the road of human evolution and advancement. Of course, this generation, under this leadership, was tempered in an all-out anti-fundamentalist resistance. Its most important trait has been that in the political arena, it submitted to no compromise with the fundamentalists. This was a generation that arose on June 20th, 1981, to protest the suppression of liberties. In never relenting, despite 100,000 martyrs, it demonstrated that it will not stop until it achieves—at whatever cost—the Iranian people's fundamental rights, namely, freedom and national and popular sovereignty.

This generation crushed the mullahs' demagoguery about the war and obstructed the export of fundamentalism by campaigning relentlessly for peace in and out of Iran.

This generation broke the spell of the inhuman mullahs' posturing about religion through sacrifice and selflessness. It charted a resistance that has today emerged as the democratic, progressive and popular answer to fundamentalism, and is recognized as the antithesis of fundamentalism.

Along this path, the Mojahedin and combatants of Iran's freedom had to forsake everything to guarantee the liberation of their beloved people and homeland. They had to cleanse themselves of all the pollutants of the ruling reactionaries' mindset. They had to arise and eradicate concepts based upon gender discrimination, and ensure women's emancipation and acceptance of responsibility.

CRUCIAL STEPS

Permit me in this brief opportunity to mention the most important points learned from our experience, as time limitations make it impossible to discuss our accomplishments in any depth.

First, to begin the process towards eradicating relationships based on gender oppression, women must enter the field of political and social activity.

Second, to this end, women must occupy positions of political and social leadership. Within the movement for equality itself, at least 50% of key positions of responsibility must be held by women. Through a policy of positive discrimination for a certain period of time, women's historical deprivation must be compensated for. Accordingly, a system of quotas is needed, that favors ever greater assumption by women of social responsibilities. The spirit, essence and hallmark of such privileges are a greater sense of responsibility by women and men and an end to exploitation and sexual oppression.

Third, women's emancipation is a prerequisite to the liberation of men, and must lead to it. Solutions which aim only to swap the places of women and men will only result in the latter's destruction, aggravating the alienation of the sexes and the conflicts between them. Obviously, that will not bring about women's emancipation either. On the other hand, there is nothing unrealistic about creating a new set of human relationships and equality between the two sexes, given their monistic human essence.

Fourth, contrary to the misogynous reactionaries, we must underscore the principle that women's rights are human rights. These encompass all individual and social rights stipulated in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. On this basis, a woman's body and emotions are her own, and she has the right to birth control.

Fifth, the conflicts between the family and social and political responsibilities are common, erosive problems for all women. We believe that it is the right of all women, particularly combatant women and those who struggle in the movement for equality, to choose freely. This right must be fully recognized, so that they can, whenever necessary, choose to give priority and precedence to political and social responsibilities.

WOMEN AND THE FUTURE

Women's participation in the resistance movement prepares the cultural and ideological grounds to eradicate sexual oppression. Such active participation, albeit difficult and abound in sacrifice, gives credence to the equality of Iranian women and the recognition of their rights. In contrast to Khomeini, who never recognized women's minimum rights, Iranian women's rights and freedoms are unequivocally and specifically recognized in the platform of the National Council of Resistance and the provisional government, as well as in a specific declaration ratified by the NCR on the freedoms and rights of women.

Accordingly, I reaffirm the recognized rights of women in the Iran of tomorrow.

1. Women's social, political and economic rights will be completely equal with men's;

2. Women will enjoy the right to free political and social activity, social intercourse and travel without the permission of another person.

3. Women's associations will be recognized and their voluntary organizations supported nationwide;

4. In order to eradicate inequality and dual oppression, special privileges in various social, administrative and cultural arenas will be considered.

5. Women will have the right to elect and be elected in all elections, and the right to suffrage in all referendums;

6. Women will have the right to employment and freedom of choice of profession, the right to hold any public or government position, and the right to serve as judges in all judicial bodies;

7. Discrimination between women and men in hiring and during employment is banned. Women and men will receive equal pay for equal work. They will receive identical retirement pensions, disability payments, children support and alimony and unemployment insurance;

8. Women will have the right to use, without discrimination, all instructional, educational athletic and artistic resources, and will have the right to participate in all competitions and artistic activities;

9. Women will be completely free to choose their clothing and covering;

10. Women will be completely free to choose their spouses, to marry and divorce, and will enjoy the same rights as men;

11. Legal inequalities regarding testimony, inheritance, and guardianship of children will be eliminated. During pregnancy, child birth and child rearing, women will enjoy special rights and accommodations. Widowed or divorced women and the children under their care will be supported by the country's social welfare system;

12. Any sexual exploitation of women, under whatever pretext, is banned. Any coercion or imposition on women in family life, as well as marriage before legal age, is forbidden.

13. Polygamy is banned;

14. Employment of minor girl children is banned, and they will enjoy special educational privileges.

Ladies and gentleman, dear compatriots, what I have enumerated are the natural expectations of women. They are rights that for centuries have been ignored and denied, as the women trying to attain them have been suppressed. They are the common demands of our sisters around the world.

My homeland, however, tells a different story, because:

The mighty resistance of Iranian women and the pain and blood of tens of thousands of martyred and tortured women have given new meaning to these words, and have colored them with a brilliant courage, seriousness, love of life and hope of construction.

The women of Iran have defied the mullahs' humiliation and proudly challenged the guardians of inequality.

Women and mothers forsook their marriages for the freedom of their people and country, and bid farewell for an indefinite period to their beloved children.

Women undertook the heaviest and most complex responsibilities in the battle against the misogynous and inhuman fundamentalists.

HISTORIC MANDATE

My sisters, you women who have rebelled against inequality.

My brothers, you men who chose to follow your conscience rather than opt for the special privileges of male domination.

I call upon you to come to the aid of our Resistance movement against the most evil religious tyranny in history. I ask you to rise up and join hands to form a global coalition and a front against fundamentalism.

The misogynous, inhuman mullahs are intent on destroying the rights and freedoms of women and trampling upon their human dignity in order to bolster the pillars of their regime. But I say to these mullahs, you are gravely mistaken. The world will bear witness when you become an example for those who ponder enslaving, suppressing and be-guiling the people.

And I say, if you think that you can get what you want because the yearning to live freely and think freely has died in the world, you are gravely mistaken. You have done your utmost to humiliate, suppress, torture and slaughter Iranian women, but rest assured that you will receive the blow from the very force you discounted, the very force whom your reactionary mindset cannot allow you to take into consideration. The era of demagoguery and deceit under the cloak of religion has ended.

On the eve of the 21st century, enlighten people the world over, the proud Resistance of Iranian people and the combatants of freedom will not allow you to abuse religion.

In closing, and in again calling upon all my sisters—here, across Iran and gathered in other countries—I wish to stress:

The women of the past, who endured a history of torment and oppression, and the women, children and men of the future, today turn their eyes to you. They ask you to rise to the occasion and assume your historic role. It is you who will propel human history into the golden age of equality, peace, democracy and development.

Hail to all free-thinking women and men everywhere, who are paying the high price of liberty. Victory lies before you, belongs to you and awaits you. Indeed, the oppressed of today are the victors of tomorrow. Their voice will resonate throughout eternity.

Congressional Record

The public proceedings of each House of Congress, as reported by the Official Reporters thereof, are printed pursuant to directions of the Joint Committee on Printing as authorized by appropriate provisions of Title 44, United States Code, and published for each day that one or both Houses are in session, excepting very infrequent instances when two or more unusually small consecutive issues are printed at one time. ¶Public access to the Congressional Record is available online through GPO Access, a service of the Government Printing Office, free of charge to the user. The online database is updated each day the Congressional Record is published. The database includes both text and graphics from the beginning of the 103d Congress, 2d session (January 1994) forward. It is available on the Wide Area Information Server (WAIS) through the Internet and via asynchronous dial-in. Internet users can access the database by using the World Wide Web; the Superintendent of Documents home page address is http://www.access.gpo.gov/su_docs, by using local WAIS client software or by telnet to swais.access.gpo.gov, then login as guest (no password required). Dial-in users should use communications software and modem to call (202) 512-1661; type swais, then login as guest (no password required). For general information about GPO Access, contact the GPO Access User Support Team by sending Internet e-mail to help@eids05.eids.gpo.gov, or a fax to (202) 512-1262; or by calling (202) 512-1530 between 7 a.m. and 5 p.m. Eastern time, Monday through Friday, except for Federal holidays. ¶The Congressional Record paper and 24x microfiche will be furnished by mail to subscribers, free of postage, at the following prices: paper edition, $112.50 for six months, $225 per year, or purchased for $1.50 per issue, payable in advance; microfiche edition, $118 per year, or purchased for $1.50 per issue payable in advance. The semimonthly Congressional Record Index may be purchased for the same per issue prices. Remit check or money order, made payable to the Superintendent of Documents, directly to the Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402. ¶Following each session of Congress, the daily Congressional Record is revised, printed, permanently bound and sold by the Superintendent of Documents in individual parts or by sets. ¶With the exception of copyrighted articles, there are no restrictions on the republication of material from the Congressional Record.
